Juvenile Curfew Law Proposed for City

Increasing juvenile delinquency problems may lead Victoria to introduce curfew laws, Mayor Mike Young said Thursday.

"At present we have no way of controlling juveniles and it's obvious the parents or guardians aren't really doing it so we may have to step in," said Young in an interview.

"The absence of any method of adequately controlling juveniles is being felt increasingly . . . essentially we have lawlessness on our streets."

Both Esquimalt Mayor Art Young and Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith today expressed misgivings about the proposal, however, saying that curfew laws are tough to enforce.

Smith rejected it outright as far as Oak Bay is concerned, while Esquimalt Mayor Young said it won't work unless all municipalities follow suit.

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier could not be reached for comment.

Victoria's Young said he has no firm proposals at present but plans to discuss the problem with police.

"This is something that's been bothering me for six or seven months — we have to do something," he said.

Smith said, however, that no curfew will be imposed in his municipality because it would be too hard to enforce and is an inadequate way of responding to the problem.

Smith said Oak Bay dealt with a juvenile problem last summer by putting on extra auxiliary policemen and increasing contact with juveniles before trouble developed.

"There are other ways of dealing with it," said Smith, "and one of those ways is to pay more attention to the juveniles and see that they have things to do."

In Victoria Ald. Robin Blencoe expressed similar feelings.

Esquimalt Mayor Art Young said he'd be willing to consider a curfew, but only if all core municipalities enacted such restrictions.

He said that if Victoria went it alone they would simply push juvenile delinquents into neighboring municipalities.

Taxi Rates Hiked

A rate increase that will see Victoria taxis charging more than their counterparts in Vancouver was approved Thursday by city council's finance committee.

The flag rate for city cabs will jump to $1 from 80 cents, while the mileage rate will go to 90 cents from 80 cents and waiting time will rise to $12-an-hour from $10.

In Vancouver the flag cost is $1, but it only costs 80 cents a mile and $10-an-hour.

Municipal manager Jim Bramley recommended that the committee allow city cabs to bump their rates because Vancouver and Victoria had the lowest charges in the province.

TRANSIT LOSS $62M

No Subsidy For Buses In the Red

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Hydro's urban transport system will have a deficit of about $62 million for the fiscal year ending March 31 and the provincial government will not provide a subsidy, the B.C. legislature's new committee on Crown corporations was told Thursday.

The subsidy, covering Hydo's greater Vancouver and Greater Victoria transit operations, was $32.6 million for both fiscal 1975-76 and 1976-77.

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said in an interview later the government has decided not to pay the subsidy, but did not give details about the reasoning.

"There is an intent to develop transit legislation, "he said." I can't go beyond that.

"A policy will be developing. At this stage I can confirm that Hydro have been advised that there will be no subsidy. I think their profit is quite a bit improved this year."

Despite the deficit, Hydro Thursday reported net income of $19.9 million for the nine months ending Dec. 31, 1977. Income from its electricity and natural gas sales-including sales of surplus power to United States customers-is expected to more than make up for the transit deficit.

The $19.9 million was in contrast to the $19.7-million loss reported for the first six months of the fiscal year. It was also an improved performance over the nine months ended Dec. 31, 1976, when Hydro reported net income of $4.5 million.

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson, a member of the committee, said the Hydro situation is beginning to approximate that of B.C. Railway, another provincial Crown corporation with annual deficits in the $60-million range.

Hydro management said possibilities of increasing fares or cutting service — or both — are being studied, but no decisions have been made.

Larry Wight, Hydro's deputy manager for transit, told the committee that the transit deficit had increased from $5 million in 1970 to about $62 million in the current year.

Hydro general manager Norman Olsen said he was uncertain about the subsidy.

" Rates for gas and electricity for the next year are based on the assumption that there will be a transit subsidy."

Wolfe said Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis is the minister with responsibility for urban transit. Curtis could not be reached for comment.

Wight gave most of the details on Hydro's position.

The Vancouver harbor SeaBus is losing $1.5 million a year, he said, or about $1 a passenger. Hydro subsidiary Pacific Stage Lines is losing $3.55 per passenger. The Victoria transit operation costs $8.5 million a year, but has revenue of only $3.4 million, he said.

NASTY LAW GETS HEAVE

A proposed by-law to forbid sightseeing tour operators from making disparaging remarks about Victoria got the heave-ho Thursday.

The by-law would have let city hall cancel the trades licence of any operator who, while conducting a tour, said nasty things about the city, the province or the nation.

Tour guides wouldn't have been allowed to badmouth Victoria residents either.

But council's finance committee shelved the proposed by-law after Mayor Mike Young said he thought existing controls over sight-seeing vehicles are adequate.

The by-law was drawn up by city solicitor Jakob de Villiers because of increasing competition between tour operators along the Inner Harbor causeway.

Council has been expressing concern about the problem for sometime and asked de Villiers to come up with regulations to control the situation.

The finance committee, however, obviously thought his solution was a bit too drastic.

Young said the best way to deal with the problem is just to warn the operators they would all have their licences cancelled if the situation worsens.

"My feelings on the causeway are that if we have trouble there we'll just close it down . . . get rid of them all," said the mayor.

The committee agreed with Young and decided not to pass the by-law to council for consideration.

The by-law would have put tight regulations on the way sight-seeing vehicles are operated, including where they're allowed to park and on how tickets are sold.

It would have given the city the power to cancel a licence if any operator, driver, or guide "in the course of a tour, makes untoward or grossly disparaging or offensive remarks about Canada, the province, the city or the city's inhabitants, or gives false or misleading information concerning his tours."

The bylaw would also have forbidden tour operators from accosting pedestrians on the street, or offending passengers.

Tough Week For Dollar

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian dollar today fluctuated on the New York money markets within a narrow range of Thursday's post-Depression record low of 89.50 U.S. cents.

At noon, the dollar was changing hands at 89.52 cents. By 3:30 it had dropped to 89.32.

A foreign currency dealer for the Bank Canadian National said there had been relatively few commercial orders to buy or sell the dollar in "a very quiet" morning session.

"It's been a tough week and most traders are waiting until next week to get back into the market again," he said.

The dealer added that many traders may be reluctant take a position in the currency market because of the long weekend in the U.S. Monday is a public holiday to celebrate Washington's birthday.

The Canadian dollar hit a new post-Depression low of 89.50 U.S. cents at the close of New York markets Thursday, after dipping to 89.47 U.S. cents.

A trader for the Bank Canadian National attributed the decline to a statement by Finance Minister Jean Chretien in the Commons Thursday, that the dollar will be left to float, without any government effort to set a fixed rate.

When that statement reached the money markets, the trader said, "everybody just sold everything they were holding."

The trader said he thought Chretien's statement had been misinterpreted.

Meanwhile in London, the U.S. dollar edged lower in nervous trading on Europe's money markets today but recovered a bit in Tokyo and Southeast Asia.

One Zurich dealer said in the absence of any encouraging news, the U.S. currency was not in demand and was tending to drop.

AirWest Employees Veto Pact Proposal

A strike by AirWest Airlines Ltd. employees continues today after members of the Teamsters Union voted 68 per cent against accepting a tentative agreement.

The agreement was reached Wednesday and recommended for acceptance by union negotiator Wes Anderson.

However, a spokesman for the 95 employees, who have been off the job since Nov. 13, said today there are about 25 unsatisfactory items.

He singled out wages and contract language related to seniority as being two of the main problems.

"We have now put so much time and effort into this thing that we are not going back until we get a workable contract," he said.

"If that's not possible then we'll get jobs elsewhere," he said, adding that most of the employees don't really believe this will be necessary.

He said Anderson told the employees if they rejected the contract and the strike continues much longer, there is a chance the company will have to shut down.

But the employees' spokesman said most of his colleagues took this as a bluff by AirWest president Norm Gold.

Company general manager Dick Laidman indicated, however, in an interview today that the company is not in serious trouble.

He said the shut-down threat was probably thrown in by the union to get the employees to accept the contract.

Laidman said he feels there is still room to manoeuvre and that the problems could stem from "areas of misunderstanding."

"Without anybody getting uptight, we've got to sit down and review the situation."

No further meetings have been scheduled between the two parties.

The company has been using supervisory personnel to maintain service which includes a harbor-to-harbor run from Vancouver to Victoria.

NOT SO IMPRESSIVE

Robbie Sherrell, the man chosen to head the Insurance Corporation of B.C., does not seem to have quite the impressive qualifications attributed to him by Education Minister Pat McGeer, his present employer says.

McGeer, the minister responsible for ICBC, described Sherrell as a director of the Hartford Insurance Group.

"Good heavens, no, he's not within a hundred miles of that," J. Stewart Johnston, Hartford's vice-president in charge of personnel, said in a telephone interview from Hartford, Connecticut.

On Thursday, McGeer made public a government memo listing Sherrell's previous title as: executive director of the Hartford Insurance Group in Europe, reporting directly to the chairman of the board of Excess Insurance, a Hartford subsidiary.

Johnston said Sherrell was in charge of casualty claims for the Excess Insurance Co., a subsidiary of Hartford Insurance, and not an executive director.

McGeer said that it is ability, not a title, that ICBC is buying. Sherrell was recommended to the government by a consulting firm.

Steel Beam Tax Delayed

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has temporarily suspended a tax on wide-flanged steel beams that British Columbia says would have cost thousands of jobs in the province.

The finance department said the "limited and temporary remission" will last until June 29.

"The remission has been approved to cushion the transition to higher input costs for regional fabricators."

The announcement was made by the department after government ministers refused to give the same information to questioning MPs. They said Justice Minister Ron Basford would make the announcement in Vancouver later.

British Columbia MPs from both sides of the Commons had complained to the government about the tax on beams imported from Britain, Japan, France, South Africa and Luxemburg.

The tax was instituted at the request of Algoma Steel Ltd., of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., despite the fact that the company sold little of the steel to B.C. Algoma had appealed a decision of the anti-dumping tribunal.

Stolen Art Turns Up In B.C.

PORT MOODY (CP) — Police have seized $25,000 worth of paintings, carvings and antique furniture from a house here in connection with a major art theft ring broken by police in Calgary.

There were no arrests in the raid here Wednesday, and an RCMP spokesman said they were conducted following information from police in Calgary.

RCMP Inspector Les Homes said most of the art appears to come from Calgary.

Peterson Linked to Soviet Firm

Former Attorney-General Leslie Peterson and former Victoria alderman Geoffery Edgelow are directors of a Soviet-owned company a Tory MP hints may be involved in subversive activities in Canada.

The Vancouver-based firm, identified by Tory MP Tom Cossit as EMEC Trading Co., employs 18 to 21 Russian technicians and engineers in installing Russian-built turbines and generators in B.C. and across Canada.

Both Peterson and Edgelow today expressed surprise and dismay over the suggestion.

"There's not one iota of truth to them . . . absolutely not," Edgelow said.

Edgelow, who is secretary-director of the firm, said he has been contacted from time to time by members of the RCMP security service in relation to the activities of the firm and their employees. The last time was a little over a year ago.

"They asked me about EMEC, about what the company was doing, and when they became completely convinced it was doing exactly what it was formed to do, their inquiries ended. At no time did I get the impression they were doubtful."

The firm, incorporated by the federal consumer services branch as an extra-provincial company in 1973, has supplied two turbines to the Mica dam project, four to Site One dam on the Peace River, six bulk-type turbines to the Jenpeg project in Manitoba, and two turbines for New Brunswick Light and Power at Fredericton.

EMEC was named by Cossitt along with another Vancouver firm, Morflot Freight Liners Ltd., as Russian-owned companies carrying out business in Canada. Also named were Socan Aircraft of Calgary, Alta., and Stan-Canada Machinery Ltd. and Belarus Equipment of Canada Ltd., both of Toronto. Cossit said there are 45 to 50 other firms in Canada controlled by Soviet interests.

Although Cossit later said he has no proof the companies are involved in anything unusual, he said he is concerned because the RCMP security service had them under surveillance to see where their profits are going.

A spokesman for the RCMP security service in Vancouver declined today to comment.

"The firms are legitimate trading companies in Canada. We have a trade relationship with the Soviet Union. There's nothing unusual about that."

He would not confirm or

Peterson, reached at his home in West Vancouver this morning, said he is not aware of EMEC being involved in any clandestine activities.

"From my point of view a Canadian free enterpriser wouldn't have any association with a firm that is," he said.

"If EMEC is involved I would hope I would have been advised by the authorities."

Peterson said he became a director of the company in 1973 but acts strictly in a legal capacity. His voting powers extend only to contractual matters. He receives no director's fee.

Edgelow is the only other Canadian director of the company which is headed by a Russian citizen, Uri Stavistki.

Stavistki brushed aside Cossit's statements Thursday saying they were "very far from the truth."

Edgelow, who served 14 years as an alderman on Victoria council before retiring 11 years ago to work for the Russians selling turbines in Canada, said he is greatly shocked by Cossit's remarks.

"They are unfair and uncalled for. I don't know why people can make these charges without any evidence and without being sued," he said. "I don't think it should be allowed."

He felt the allegations will hurt the company.

He said Ontario Hydro is considering purchasing three Russian bulk-type turbines, which are built in Leningrad.

"But when I talked to Toronto one of the men there told me he doubted the deal would go through now with the news reports out."

The deal is worth about $15 million.

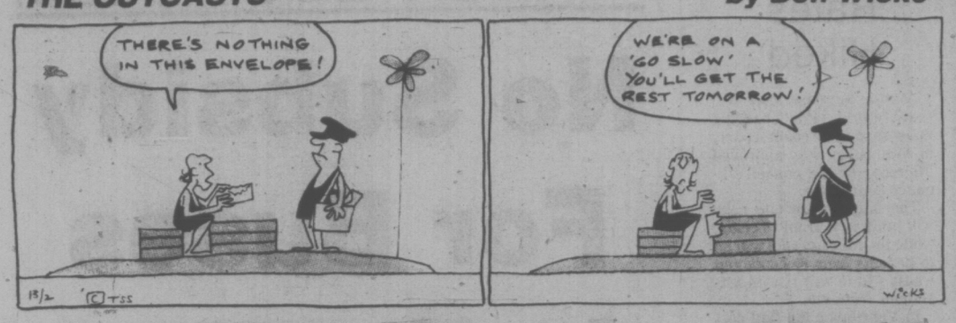

Edgelow said five or six Soviet technicians and engineers work in the company's head office at 200 Granville in Vancouver. Between 13 to 15 others work in the field supervising the installation of the equipment. All of the installation is done by Canadian labor.

He said EMEC is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Energomachexport, which in turn is owned by V/O.

V/O, he said, is short for All the People of the Soviet Union.

Juvenile Curfew Law Proposed by Mayor

"We should do it in concert or not at all," he said.

Esquimalt's Young also said he thought curfews are "practically impossible to enforce" and would demand additional policemen on the job.

The possibility of a curfew was raised by Victoria Mayor Young after city council's legal committee received a letter from the James Bay Community Association calling for an experimental curfew in the city.

The association said that Mac's Convenience Stores Ltd. outlet at 265 Menzies St. recently started staying open 24 hours a day, and since then trouble with juveniles in the area has increased.

The association letter said "youngsters are congregating in front of the store after 2 a.m. They appear under the influence of liquor or drugs as they yell and shout until 3-4 a.m. and leave broken beer and liquor bottles all over the area from Michigan St. to the intersections of Toronto, Menzies and Simcoe Streets."

The letter adds that association members have observed the youngsters, boys and girls, on many occasions staggering along the sidewalk, obviously under the legal drinking age.

The association called for a six-month trial curfew.

Young said the letter from the James Bay group is not the only one he's received in recent months.

"I've had a number of complaints from various areas of the city . . . (and) the police report juvenile crime still remains on the upswing."

Victoria police deputy-chief Les Mottershead said no recent studies have been done on the city's juvenile delinquency situation.

"But certainly it's an ongoing problem . . . I don't have any statistics in front of me but you could bet it's increasing."

Mottershead said police are now very limited in what they can do when they find juveniles on the street late at night.

"The law is very limiting . . . it doesn't have a great deal of teeth."

He said the police department is in the process of studying the matter to see if they can come up with some proposals for controlling the problem.

FRANCE QUERIED

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada has again approached France to clear up problems arising from Quebec Premier Rene Levesque's visit to France last November, an external affairs spokesman said today.

He said Canada is satisfied with the French reply to an earlier Canadian note that French policy towards Canada is unchanged, but now was seeking to work out procedures for French dealings with Canadian provinces.

Rhodesia Pact Near

SALISBURY (AP) — Prime Minister Ian Smith and three black leaders were reported near agreement today on the last issue remaining in their negotiations to draw the blueprint for Rhodesia's transition to black-majority rule.

After reaching accord on constitutional principles and the makeup of the security forces, informed sources said they agreed today that the interim cabinet will be made up of five members from each of the four parties involved in the talks, meaning 15 blacks and five whites.

Map valid until midday Saturday

A strengthening upper ridge along the coast has successfully defended most of the province against an overnight invasion by a rather formidable frontal disturbance pushing into the ridge. This system has been reduced from an extensive cloud shield to a narrow band which is giving a little rain to the outer coast and a dusting of snow to the coast mountains.

In the Interior conditions were crisp and clear until fog patches formed early this morning. Cloud fragments from the system will be evident today but some sunshine is expected in most areas. A similar system will reach the coast by Saturday morning but the ridge promises to be even stronger and should provided a somewhat sunny, springlike weekend.

Gov't Told in May Mounties 'Lying'

MONTREAL (CP) — Former RCMP staff sergeant Donald McCleery says he told senior federal officials last May that the Mounties were lying to the solicitor-general about the extent of illegal RCMP activities.

In four hours of free-wheeling testimony before the Keable commission Thursday, McCleery said he told the officials that the RCMP commissioner had been lying to solicitors-general on a variety of matters for several years.

"It was the biggest cover up since the blanket was invented," said McCleery, who has been a security consultant since his December, 1973, dismissal from the Mounties.

At the time, then solicitor-general Francis Fox, acting on information from the RCMP, was telling the Commons that the force's participation in a 1972 illegal break-in at the left-wing news agency the Agence de Presse Libre du Quebec was an isolated incident.

McCleery said the goal of his trip to Ottawa was to try to convince Fox to grant him a chance to argue against his dismissal from the RCMP and to "bring to his attention that the commissioner of the RCMP was lying to him.

Asked if he informed the officials of specific details, McCleery replied:

"I spoke in generalities . . . I asked if opening mail was illegal without going into specifics. I asked if possession of stolen dynamite was illegal, without going into specifics. I asked if arson was illegal, without going into specifics."

McCleery said he made these statements in a meeting with Roger Tasse, then deputy solicitor-general, and Phillipe Landry, assistant deputy justice minister, last May or June. He said he did not speak directly with Fox.

RCMP witnesses have told the commission that McCleery's complaint led to an internal inquiry, headed by Deputy Commissioner Raymond Quintal and Inspector Joseph Nowlan, which started last June.

After a month, the Mounties had amassed enough evidence to convince Fox to create the federal McDonald comission of inquiry into illegal RCMP activities, the witnesses said.

McCleery was dismissed along with former RCMP Sgt. Gilles Brunet. The only reason given publicly was their allegedly improper relationship with Montreal businessman Mitchell Bronfman.

FLQ NAVY?

MONTREAL (CP) — Among the oddities which Donald McCleery ran into while heading a special RCMP 'anti-terrorist squad in the early 1970s was "some quack" who wanted to start a Quebec separatist navy on a lake in the Laurentians, he said Thursday.

He was being questioned about rumors that he had ordered a member of the special squad, called "section G-2," to sink a barge which was the suspected meeting place of a Front de Liberation du Quebec (FLQ) cell.

McCleery denied ever giving the order and then launched into one of the many anecdotes he recounted in four hours of colorful, tongue-in-cheek testimony.

"There was that boat in the Laurentians. Some quack wanted to start a French navy.

"I guess some guy wanted to claim he was the admiral of the fleet," he added.

Que. Unveils 'Black Book'

QUEBEC (CP) — Stung by a bitter encounter with federal Urban Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet, the Quebec government jumped the gun on its referendum campaign Thursday and released the first of a promised series of "black books" designed to reveal Ottawa's meddling in provincial affairs.

The "dossier noir" on urban affairs, a 35-page mimeographed text prepared in anticipation of the referendum on independence, was handed out to reporters at a hastily-called news conference by Municipal Affairs Minister Guy Tardif and Intergovernmental Affairs Minister Claude Morin.

The provincial black book denounces Ottawa for creating a federal department of urban affairs in 1971, thus usurping the constitutional right of the provinces to handle municipal affairs.

Singled out for special attention is the federal government's role in evicting landowners and in planning Mirabel international airport, north of Montreal.

Marijuana Smoker May Stay

VANCOUVER (CP) — A marijuana smoker told to leave British Columbia within three days and not return for a year, now is welcome to stay, a county court judge ruled Thursday.

In granting the appeal, Judge J. E. Spencer said he did not find exile from B.C. to be a "fitting term of probation" for Robert Lee Arthurs, 21, of Hamilton, Ont., previously convicted of possession of marijuana.

Arthurs had pleaded guilty to the charge Oct. 25 before Judge C. I. Walker in Squamish provincial court.

Unbelted Killed

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta department of transport released a study Thursday that concluded 21 of 58 persons killed in 43 fatal accidents last year would have survived had they been wearing seat belts.

Larry Keown, assistant director of traffic safety, said the department's accident investigation team used conservative criteria to judge if a victim would have survived.

Keown said there were no instances in the 43 accidents his office investigated in which a person would have been seriously hurt because of seat belts.

A Lowering of Morale

Senior staff members of Saanich municipality are upset, we hear, that they may have to file with their employer disclosure forms showing their assets and land holdings. They claim that if the requirement is imposed by the elected council, it will lower their morale, muttering darkly all the while that morale is already much too low.

We have no sympathy; in fact, we can do nothing but urge Saanich council to pass the requirement as quickly as possible.

The reasons offered by municipal officials for not wanting to fill out the forms are not good enough even to be taken seriously, let alone acted upon. First, the staff say the requirement "questions their honesty."

If that's the case, then the honesty of every elected official in B.C. has been questioned for the past several years, ever since the Public Officials and Employees Diselosure Act was first passed by the legislature. The purpose of the act is not to question the honesty of either elected or appointed provincial or municipal officials.

Rather it recognizes that those officials are in an exceedingly sensitive position regarding such matters as land use. It provides some safeguards for the public against the tiny minority who might handle that sensitive position badly while offering no threat at all to the thousands of honest, discreet officials. Parallel safeguards exist in the private sector through such means as laws governing insider trading.

Second, the municipal staff says that the disclosure would not stop anyone who is intent on being dishonest. They are quite right in that, but then the criminal code hasn't entirely wiped out housebreaking or robbery either. Nonetheless, we hear few suggestions that the code should be abolished because of that.

The act probably will serve a preventive function for a few employees, and also will give municipal authorities a better method to deal with some conflict-of-interest problems, should they ever arise.

One might better understand the staff's concerns if their disclosures were to be made public. But the act specifies quite clearly that this should not happen; the forms would be available only to the mayor, council and the municipal manager. It basically is only another check and balance in a democratic system composed essentially of checks and balances.

The lowering of staff morale if the regulation goes through is nothing compared to the lowering in morale of Saanich residents that will take place if council were to back down in the face of staff pressure.

Big Brave Union

It is hard to think of anything that would blacken more the none-too-shiny reputation of the Telecommunications Workers Union than its boycott of B.C. Tel cafeterias run by the Canadian National Institute for the Blind.

The reason? The CNIB kept the cafeterias open throughout the three-month TWU strike-lockout, serving company supervisors and management staff. Yes, they crossed the union's picket lines, But what else could they have done? Would the TWU have paid them strike pay for not going to work? The profits earned are used to help the blind — who do not have any other resources.

Victoria TWU officials have presented B.C. Tel with a petition asking that the CNIB cafeteria be replaced, and so far they have boycotted the blind's soup and sandwiches and coffee.

This is silly and petty. Carried to its logical end, the union would have to boycott everybody else who did business with B.C. Tel during the long dispute. As a company official noted Wednesday:

"How far can they take this? Why aren't they boycotting B.C. Hydro for supplying us power, the municipality for the water we received or the service stations for providing us gas?"

Exactly. But the union won't take on these organizations because the TWU needs them more than they need the union, or they're so large that a "boycott" would have about as much effect as a gnat's bite. So the CNIB gets picked on because it's a small and vulnerable agency, and the blind can't fight back. Big brave union.

Toleration?

We're all for tolerance of racial and religious differences among peoples, and we wholeheartedly agree with most of the sentiments in the column by our Elizabeth Forbes on Thursday. She quoted an education professor at the University of British Columbia on the subject of ethnic prejudices.

Dr. Jack Kehoe notes an increasing concern among school teachers about prejudice, and what can be done about it in the classroom. We all want our quirks and individuality to be tolerated by others, therefore we should respect differences in others.

No argument. There are also some ethnic or racial customs we should, however, not tolerate, such as the caste system or human sacrifice. These are a fundamental denial of basic human rights.

But we come down on opposite sides of the fence in this regard: Kehoe says of one custom: "I can think of no justification for disallowing a woman to have more than one husband or a man to have more than one wife."

Aside from the fact that is illegal in Canada, not many other reasons spring to mind.

FRANK RUTTER

Tories Make Issue of Race

LONDON — British children still recite the rhyme, "Eenie, meenie, minie, mo, catch a nig-nog by his toe."

British workers still say they are "blacking" a company or product which has incurred the displeasure of their trade union and British newspapers report such incidents, straight-faced, in the same language.

And 59 per cent of the general public regard "immigrants" as a very serious social problem in Britain, according to a Gallup poll. The same poll showed that half the population (presumably all white) favored paying the fares to send the immigrants back where they came from.

"Immigrant" means non-white in Britain today. The other word in common usage is "colored" as in: "I have nothing against the colored, but . . ."

On Britons' Minds

The leader of the opposition, Margaret Thatcher, has just caused a furore, and set up a major issue in the next British election, by declaring on television that "we do have to hold out the prospect of an end to immigration."

The question is whether Mrs. Thatcher, the leader of the Conservative party, was merely being loose-tongued or was deliberately milking what the Gallup poll, conducted for the Sunday Telegraph newspaper, disclosed to be an issue very much on the minds of the British electorate.

The paper said "colored immigration" ranked fifth in social issues uppermost concern to the public. But first was crime, which many people equate with race. Just as in many U.S. cities, pockets of high unemployment and poverty breed street crime; it also happens that in Britain many such pockets contain recent immigrants, mainly black or brown.

Mrs. Thatcher has been accused by her political opponents of being racist; gleeful Labor MPs forced the issue onto the floor of Parliament where she was duly embarrassed.

The cabinet minister responsible for immigration, Home Secretary Merlyn Rees, said "she thinks race is a good thing to win a general election."

He may, unfortunately, be right. After all, his own party has been greatly responsible for attempts to restrict "colored immigration." He himself boasted of the reduction in numbers of immigrants during the term of the present government.

In fact, both Conservative and Labor governments have attempted to curb the flow of immigrants from "the new commonwealth" which began when India was granted independence in 1947.

Part of the problem has been the granting of "British subject" status to commonwealth citizens and of British citizenship rights to many of them and their dependents, in some cases on compassionate grounds, such as the expulsion of Asians from Uganda.

The other part of the problem has been the dislike by white Britons of neighbors with different pigmentation. This dislike has become more intense as unemployment has increased.

About 3.3 percent of the 55 million population is nonwhite. Of this 1.7 million people, about 800,000 are of Asian origin, 600,000 of West Indian origin, the two largest components.

Last year Britain had a total of 70,000 immigrants, of which 44,000 were "colored." Of these only 28,000 actually arrived in the country; the others were granted immigrant status after previous residence.

This is the lowest number since 1974. But even the peak of 82,000 in 1975 is hardly scary to a veteran of American racial strife.

Nor is British discrimination as overt as it has been in the U.S. but it is there. Here's an example, from that paragon of newspapers, The Times, in an editorial about the Grunwick labor dispute, in which the paper defended some Asian strikebreakers:

"An immigrant community can only obtain a place of advantage for itself in the host economy if it is prepared to work harder and for less pay than the existing community."

Flag's Up

Such racist attitudes prevail at all levels of society when it comes to employment. The blacks and Asians get the more menial work, if any. A program of positive discrimination in the London community of Camden Town has been the target of reams of abusive mail.

The activities of the far right National Front in stirring up racial trouble are well-known. Indeed Mrs. Thatcher referred to them, saying that at least the National Front was "talking about some of the problems."

It has been left — perhaps deliberately — unclear exactly what the Conservative party policy on race will be. But Mrs. Thatcher has run up the flag. Even if she never defines a new policy she will have implanted to flutter in the minds of the bigoted the thought that she will "do something" about "the colored."

RICHARD GWYN

A Problem of Paperasserie

OTTAWA — Minister for Small Business Tony Abbott blew it. He missed his chance last week, while announcing a program to reduce the amount of paper that government thrusts down the throats of businessmen, to add a new word to English-Canada's vocabulary. The word he used, "paperburden," is lifeless. Its equivalent in the French text of Abbott's statement, "la paperasserie", says it all.

Abbott's attack on form-filling and questionnaire-answering paperasserie is sound and is sensible, if a bit late: Washington has been at it since 1975. Abbott will establish a new office to respond to complaints by businessmen and to fight red tape within the federal bureaucracy. (Other bureaucracies, by the way, are no better. In Ontario, as an example, the time taken to process an application for subdivision has lengthened from 1.9 years in 1973 to 2.3 years in 1975).

Nothingness

Abbott hopes to save Canadian businesses $100 million a year. His problem is that he is treating the symptoms rather than the disease. Paperasserie has become, not just the product of government but its principal, self-justifying, purpose.

In part, paperasserie exists as busy work that expands Parkinson-style to whatever amount is needed to keep occupied whatever number of bureaucrats have been hired. In larger part, paperasserie exists as a consequence of the unexercised belief, embraced by all bureaucracies in the 1960s, that governments could solve all problems by expertise (management science, social science) and by systematic, long-range planning. To do good to everyone, you need to know everything about them.

A current example of paperasserie, in its way one of the best and one of the worst, is the 24 discussion papers just published by the department of industry, trade and commerce. These cover Canadian manufacturing industries from food to furniture and from plastics to petrochemicals.

The documents contain absolutely nothing. Since nothingness is hard to describe, you'll have to take my word for this. Tables of statistics, all of them already available publicly. Descriptions of each industry so general they would be familiar even to intermittent readers of the business pages. No insights. No analysis. No recommendations for action. No conclusions even, unless you count nonsense like "achievement of a better balance of labor-intensive and capital-intensive work (in the auto industry) could be to the advantage of the country." That's like saying that to be rich is, on the whole, better than to be poor.

TONY ABBOTT

When you have nothing to say, why say anything at all, you might wonder. To ask such a question is to expose yourself as guileless. It shows that you've forgotten that six years ago the department promised to develop an "industrial strategy" to reform our economy. That idea was abandoned, as was a later one to develop industry-by-industry "sectoral strategies." The department could think of nothing to say. To save face, and to protect itself against the accusation of doing nothing, it produced the 24 volumes of paperasserie.

The other day, Bank of Montreal president William Mulholland allowed his frustrations with Ottawa to overflow. "Perpetual talking and studies" had to be stopped, said Mulholland, and be replaced by a top-to-bottom reorganization of government.

The reorganization indeed is taking place. Its objective is to produce more paperasserie. The soon-to-be-dismantled Anti-Inflation Board has proposed to cabinet that the new monitoring agency that will succeed it should have the power to collect "any information (about prices and wages), including privileged information, obtained under the Anti-Inflation Act."

Not 360 But 420!

Now that a government agency is actually about to be abolished, I asked Abbott at his press conference whether this might not be the place to abolish at least that portion of paperasserie. "I would not want to say that," replied Abbott. "That kind of information will be needed by government to plan its economic policies."

By no means all government studies and reports are paperasserie. The government deals with the other kind by not publishing them. Two examples:

☐ A confidential study by an interdepartmental task force, headed by officials from the finance and health and welfare departments, of the possibility of replacing our present hodgepodge of social security programs by "positive" income tax payments to those in need. The system is called tax transfer intergration. Sadly, the task force report, which was completed last July, concludes that the concept is unworkable, and that anyway it would result in no reduction in bureaucracy.

☐ An internal memorandum to the privy council office by the treasury board to report that no, Ottawa does not own 360 Crown corporations and agencies as was thought last summer, nor 380 as was the revised estimate last December, but, on re-checking all the records, 420 of them. This calculation, mind you, is now a month old.

Helmcken Hospital

There have been many letters written about the proposal for a new acute care hospital at Helmcken Road. It appears to have become a battle between the public and the politicians.

The Sisters of St. Ann were proud to have literally given their hospital — then St. Joseph's — to the city. Having trained there under the sisters, I am convinced that they intended it to continue as an acute care hospital. We all know many parts of it are old and outdated, overcrowded, with draughty windows and most inadequate wiring.

Nevertheless, with the 6¼ acres of convent ground and the main street sewers already in place just in front of the academy building, (connecting Belleville and Southgate Streets), it seems to me an ideal site to start with, for a new hospital.

The convent is a very old building — surely no one has any ideas of preserving that! If it were pulled down, a good start could be made on a new hospital, say a four-storey building for medical patients as a first phase. By closing the block of Humboldt Street from Quadra to Rupert Street, and having connecting covered hallways at the second floor level as they do for English hospitals, the building could proceed in various stages. This block could then be a covered emergency parking area. The Collinson wing which is a much newer addition is an attractive fairly up-to-date section, and possibly could be incorporated into the entire concept.

The Helmcken Road site would be an ideal location for a combined extended care and personal care hospital, 150 beds for each. This would also allow residents in the latter to take a bus downtown, and not be so isolated as they are at present at Tillicum Lodge on Interurban Road, where the buses are few and far between, and cost, I understand, 80 cents a ride. This is quite out of reach of their finances!

This type of hospital would probably be about half the cost of an acute care hospital, not requiring the expensive operating rooms, nuclear department and X-rays etc.

These beds would be filled very quickly, as well those to be added to Glengarry and St. Mary's Priory, for it is well known that Victoria, with its marvellous climate, has the highest over-60s population of any city in Canada.

Then too, the Langford, Colwood, Sooke, Metchosin and View Royal areas, with their rapidly expanding population, surely have a right to their own acute care hospital, situated in a central location, where it would be more accessible to all.

As for money, we are told that the present provincial government is saving millions in many departments — so why not invest it, in a permanent, humanitarian way by:

Utilizing some of the schools that are being phased out as homes for senior citizens or the handicapped who require just personal care.

As I have nursed in acute care, personal care and extended care hospitals, I do have some knowledge and experience at each level, and should anyone be interested in any of my ideas, I am available. I only need a "soap box." — Lola Grieve, 42-2780 Spencer Road.

Railway History

The British Columbia Railway Historical Association, which is currently researching the history of the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway, requests the help of the general public, who may be able to assist with historical material and photographs of the railway.

In the first publication, it is hoped to recount the days of the Dunsmuir era, 1883 to 1905. However, further publications are planned for the periods 1905 to the present day.

All material and photographs, either loaned or perused, would be carefully handled, and would be returned upon request, or upon completion of research.

The association has been active in Vancouver Island research for many years. We currently have two publications Shays on the Switchbacks, the story of the Lenora and Mount Sicker Railway, and The Cordwood Limited, the history of the Victoria and Sidney Railway. Both publications are now available in their fifth editions.

All members would be greatly appreciative of any help given. To do so please contact the secretary: Patrick O. Hind, 465 Grafton Street, Victoria, B.C., V9A 6S4.

Agony of Rape

That cretinous creature who dismissed rape as "three minutes of humility" (Esquimalt Drops 'Brutal' Rape Film, Feb. 8) forgets that for some victims who are not on the pill and who do not countenance abortion, it might also be the beginning of a nine-month ordeal.

Following nine months of mental agony would be years of rearing a child who would be a constant reminder of a most traumatic experience.

Some humiliation! — Ruby A. Pearson, 2085 Avondale Road.

Trudeau-Levesque Film Distorted the Facts

DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — The following opinion goes against the grain of much press comment. I thought the CBC-NFB two "one-hour" specials about Trudeau and Levesque were very, very bad.

To be blunt, "The Champions" demonstrated how the good film and video-tape found by a documentary producer can dictate both the frame and the pace of the story and can lead to a superficial and unhistorical result.

Sure it was fun and quite exciting to see the old clips of these two superb public figures but the clips ran off with the story. The continuity was jerky and the script banal.

I could quarrel with a dozen of the slants to the script and content and cite many, many empty spots, particularly in the second half. The documentary was unfair to both men in the sense that each is so much more than we were given, even as the political rivalry is so much richer and more subtle and fascinating than the shows would have led us to believe.

Let me cite just two examples, one of a mean bias, the other of a totally phoney segment, both of which arose, one can only guess, from a wealth of good film stock and very faulty memories.

Take the Second World War. The script told us that Trudeau and Levesque both disagreed with the manpower policy of the government (conscription or draft). That is all that was really said about Trudeau and the war. The show went on to intimate that Levesque evaded the war by going to the U.S. and finding work as a correspondent for the American public information services, eventually overseas.

The reality is that Levesque not only went overseas but that he was in uniform and for a brief time was following and reporting on action at the front. He really was a participant.

Trudeau? He sought and obtained a commission (as a second lieutenant) in the militia or "reserve" regiment of a famous Montreal unit which raised and sent a fighting regiment into action in Europe.

To attain such a commission required social or political influence and gave a lad a safe spot free from the draft. It meant going to parade two nights a week as an officer free from the tribulation of being a "zombie" or from hiding out in the bush or on farms (as did a lot of draftees, particularly from Quebec, where the war effort was understandably less popular than elsewhere in Canada).

Everyone knew Pierre would run for leader in 1968

Trudeau's chosen role in the war was thus a highly rational one but it hardly set him against the current as a rebel against the system. Rather, he was someone smart and influential enough to slip into a nice, quiet niche for the duration.

The phoney segment had marvellous film and a credible trio for skyhooks in Marchand, Pelletier and Lalonde. It concerned the coverage of the period (allegedly between Christmas 1967 and Valentine's Day 1968) when strenuous efforts were desperately made to convince Trudeau that he should run for the Liberal leadership. He finally agreed.

In the first weeks of January, 1968, I was assured by both Eddie Rubin and Pierre Debane, who were both Trudeau aides, that their man was running. From mid-January onward there weren't any doubts for most of us in the press gallery that Trudeau was running. Indeed, one of the fun anecdotes of that month was about the determination of the two biggest names in the political press of the time (Blair Fraser and Norman DePoe) that Trudeau musn't suffer the sad fate in office that had befallen Mike Pearson. The wise chaps pushing Sharp and Martin and Hellyer, men such as Bill Lee, Mike McCabe and Duncan Edmonds, were under no illusions about the Trudeau candidacy weeks before Valentine's Day.

Of course, such a charade in the documentary isn't really important. But the time it ate up might have been much better spent on the unique constitutional ideas which Trudeau brought to Ottawa which, in concert with his personality, had forced Pearson to back off "co-operative federalism" by the fall of 1966 and which quickly made Trudeau much more significant than Marchand, the man on whose coat-tails Trudeau had come to Ottawa in 1965.

There may be, as Claude Ryan says, a middle road between Trudeau's views and those of Levesque. The documentary ignored this possibility in favor of a melodramatic ending in hard confrontation.

Family Law Reform Falls Short

LEONARD SHIFRIN

OTTAWA — The late Martin Luther King used to say that the American civil rights movement was born the day Rosa Parks, a black cleaning woman in Montgomery, Alabama, was ejected from a segregated city bus for sitting down in the whites-only section.

Somewhat analogously, the birth of Canada's family law reform movement can be traced to the day when Alberta's Irene Murdock, after 25 years of "haying, raking, swathing ... driving trucks and tractors and teams ... dehorning, vaccinating, branding''' plus cooking meals and keeping house, was denied an interest in the family ranch by the Supreme Court of Canada on the grounds that she had contributed nothing to it but "the work done by any ranch wife."

That was the judgment which raised a thousand cries of female outrage, and launched provincial governments and law reform commissions on a half-decade's odyssey in quest of more equitable family property laws.

That journey is now nearing its end, with new acts expected in at least five provinces this year.

Its results, however, have fallen far short of its promise.

Of the seven provincial law reform commissions to study the issue, six recommended that, on separation, divorce or death of one of the parties, there be an equal sharing of all assets (except gifts and inheritances) acquired by either spouse during the marriage.

The seventh proposed that this sharing take place as soon as property is acquired, rather than being deferred till the marriage ends or one of the parties dies.

None of the provincial governments to whom these recommendations were made, however, appears willing to follow either of these courses.

The proposal for immediate sharing of all property acquired during the marriage came from the British Columbia Royal Commission on Family Law, headed by Mr. Justice Thomas Berger (better known nationally for his subsequent Mackenzie Valley pipeline enquiry).

The Berger Commission was established while the NDP held office in B.C., so it isn't entirely surprising that the government which chose to act on it (though only in part) was Ed Schreyer's erstwhile administration in Manitoba.

The Manitoba Marital Property Act, providing for immediate co-ownership of non-business assets and deferred sharing of business ones, passed last June and was to have come into effect in January. It was stopped, however, by the new Conservative administration of Sterling Lyon, who described it as "a legislative dog's breakfast" that required major changes.

What those changes will be is still under study.

The deferred sharing proposals of the other six commissions are similar to the law that has been in effect in Quebec since 1970.

But it is a very cut-down version of this that is now on the verge of adoption in Ontario, British Columbia and Prince Edward Island.

Instead of all assets acquired during the marriage being divided between the parties on separation or divorce, only "family assets" (defined, essentially, as house, car and cottage in Ontario and P.E.I., and only slightly more broadly in B.C.) would be shared.

And if the marriage survives until death, there would be no sharing of assets at all.

While the Ontario, P.E.I. and B.C. bills provide for judicial discretion to vary the 50-50 split of these limited assets where circumstances warrant, Alberta's bill simply calls for a "just" division by the court of all the couple's property — an approach that has already become law in Saskatchewan.

Criticism of the Ontario bill, which has only to pass final reading in the Legislature before becoming law on March 31, has focussed on the sharing provisions being restricted to the short list of "family assets".

Bank accounts (except those maintained for purposes of paying household bills) would not be shared, nor would stocks, bonds or other investments. Retirement savings plans and other private pension provisions (shareable under the B.C. bill) would also be excluded from sharing in Ontario.

By focussing so firmly — though apparently unsuccessfully — on the family assets issue, Ontario women's groups have largely ignored the bill's several other failings.

The most obvious of these is that, if the marrriage persists "till death do us part", the wife could wind up with nothing.

Little wonder the federal Advisory Council on the Status of Women, after reviewing the provinces' "so-called reforms", declared them to "fall short of even minimum objectives".

On Turning 40: A Celebration

By KAREN DECROW

(Karen DeCrow, an attorney, author and editor, was president of the National Organization for Women from May 1974 to April 1977)

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — The other day I celebrated turning 40.

We women who grew up in the 50s were all Marjorie Morningstars, terrified of growing up. When I was a freshman at Northwestern University, we were all dating like mad. One was supposed to get engaged that year, because next year, when the new freshmen came in, the boys would switch to them.

When I was 23 I was advised by a loving relative to wear more makeup. My husband, she explained, worked daily among young, beautiful secretaries. I could lose out . . . Even Simone de Beauvoir was writing anguished references to women's aging; one couldn't be too careful.

The other day I turned 40. Dear, talented Marilyn Monroe killed herself so she wouldn't have to face 40. I am single. A marvelous, delicious way to live: You eat, sleep, make love, watch television, listen to music, go out, come in, read, use the telephone, write, type, talk, work, sing — when you want to. To avoid this Eden I was supposed to be safely in the suburbs with my Danish furniture at 21 years old.

I sit, drinking coffee from a cup from marriage No. 1 (I recently had a charming lunch with my first husband) listening to Messiah records from my second marriage (today I received a warm, newsy birthday card from mother-in-law No. 2), thinking of my grandmother. We'd see her going out the door.

"Where are you going?"

"To the movies."

"With whom?"

"With a smart person."

To learn that lesson from my grandmother I certainly had to block out a million messages from elsewhere. Alone is supposed to mean lonely. How different they are. How pleasant to travel around the world with a loving friend, but how much more we learn, see, hear, smell, when we travel alone. Everyone should do both. Each has its value. It is only when we don't need other people, another person — for social status, for economic survival — that we can really delight in company.

The other day I turned 40. I don't have children. For 10 years I told myself every month that next month I will decide to have kids. Finally I realized every person in the world didn't have to have kids, especially this one.

I must use my 40-year-old clout to put an end to the utter nonsense that is being written, on "how I really wanted to stay home and carve pumpkins for my children, but the women's movement put so much pressure on me I had to become a brain surgeon." Recognize it, sister: The women's movement saved your life.

★ ★ ★

The other day I turned 40. I am not skinny. I used to starve myself when I was a teenager. (The thinner I was, the less painful was crawling into my Merry Widow). A century ago, we tied ourselves into corsets until we fainted. The corsets deformed ribs and displaced major organs. One must be desperate to mutilate oneself, and desperate we are. We bob our noses, pin back our ears, reshape our jaws, and sand-paper our skin, enlarge our breasts, carve our faces to remove wrinkles. (I was told the time to have a face lift is before you need it!)

In the past, meagre diet was the unfortunate fate of serfs. Why do teenage girls starve themselves, often almost to the point of death? Why do middle-aged women deny themselves the obvious pleasures of eating, to the extreme of an obsession with gauntness and the frequent poor disposition that accompanies constant hunger pains (brownie deprivation)?

It surely is not to please men, who, unless they are high-fashion designers, prefer sensuous, well-built women, in bed and out.

A literal explanation may be that in our culture women are supposed to be smaller, dumber, shorter, thinner, weaker and younger than men. (Children's books usually show an older brother and a younger sister, despite real demographic patterns).

I've been told: You don't look 40. This is no compliment. It is like being told you don't look Jewish.

This is a good time in history to turn 40. We all saw that in Houston in November. We feminists are the Total Woman. We can be tough, we can be sexy, we can be smart, we can be tender. We are the new model Miss America.

My life. I think I'll keep her.

A Lot of Bologna

russell baker

The Carter administration is concerned about the workingman's bologna sandwich. The first hint came during the 1976 campaign when Jimmy Carter spoke with outrage about the tax treatment of the workingman's bologna sandwich.

The tax system, he said, was a national disgrace. As an example of how disgraceful it was, he pointed out that the businessman could deduct a three-martini lunch but the workingman could not deduct his bologna sandwich. As a workingman, I was only mildly stirred.

One reason may have been that I rarely eat a bologna sandwich at lunch. I am partial to pastrami and corned beef, with an occasional ham and Swiss for a change of pace. Still, if I had suspected for a moment that this anger about lunchtime injustice foreshadowed the day when the workingman's bologna sandwich would become tax deductible, I would have cheered for Jimmy Carter.

To get a tax deducation out of the government you have to start by getting the camel's nose — in this case the bologna sandwich — under the tent. Once the workingman's bologna sandwich becomes deductible, it is a cinch that in a few years Congress will amend the law to let workingmen deduct pastrami, corned beef, ham and Swiss, salami, Lebanon bologna and probably even grilled cheese.

It took no great political insight, however, to see that Carter had no intention of granting a boon to working sandwich eaters. If he had, he would have done something about making the workingman's bologna sandwich deductible. Instead, all he wants is a cut in the deduction businessmen get for a three-martini lunch.

Even here his talk is trickier than is fit for a president who promised always to be honest with us, since he really means to cut the business luncher's deduction whether the meal goes all the way to three martinis or not. (Since the immediate result of three martinis is roughly comparable to being struck on the back of the head with a sledge hammer, it is doubtful that any real three-martini lunchers can possibly care what Internal Revenue does to them.)

It is certainly unjust that workingmen cannot deduct their bologna sandwiches while tycoons and public relations men can deduct not only bologna but also salmon mousse and Chateau Margaux, or even three martinis. Many working people have been aroused by the president's argument in a politically profitable way.

These people agree with the president that the end of injustice demands the open fist of Internal Revenue at the business luncheon table. This is not the American spirit, nor is it the American way of taxation. In the classic American spirit, the man who sees someone doing well does not yearn to see him pillaged and brought to ruin, but instead resolves to do just as well for himself.

The American way of taxation is to create tax deductions that will shape society into the form government prefers.

When it wants to encourage home ownership it creates tax deducations for interest paid on mortgage loans. To discourage oil consumption, it raises taxes on fuel. In the same way, if the president truly wants to end the injustice done to the workingman's bologna sandwich, he should make it deductible.

Tax reform has always failed, and probably always will, because it approaches the tax system from the wrong end. Reformers always begin by trying to do away with existing deductions, but real reform can come about only by creating vast numbers of new deductions.

This is because everybody who now enjoys a deduction will fight fang and claw to keep it. The only deduction he wants to see abolished is the deduction his neighbor gets but which he is denied. The injustice of the tax system is that other people are entitled to deduct more than I am, and the way to end it is for the government to provide so many new deductions that everybody is entitled to deduct the same percentage of income.

As universal deductions flourish, the basic tax rate would have to rise to keep the Treasury solvent, but the American love of deductions is so intense that most of us would happily pay higher rates in return for the pleasure of boasting about all the deductions we are able to take.

Moreover, with very little imagination the government might convert the national passion for deductions into social gain. Instead of its present doomed campaign to jawbone Americans out of the cigarette habit, for example, it might offer a tax deduction for non-smokers with reasonable expectations that, hard though it is to stop, millions of addicts will snap the habit for the more pleasurable delight of claiming a new deduction.

This, of course, is advanced stuff. The present Congress really isn't ready for it yet. In the meantime, let the president make a sensible start, using the political power of all those workingmen he has stirred to fury, and force Congress, before the year is out, to make the workingman's bologna sandwich tax deductible.

REACTION SOUGHT

Premier Bill Bennett said Thursday he will contact other legislature party leaders to get their reaction to Speaker Ed Smith's appointment of a personal friend to a job in the auditor-general's office.

NDP house leader Bill King has charged that the appointment of Barbara Pennock could constitute political interference in the affairs of the auditor-general's department.

Bennett said that both Smith, elected to the legislature as a member of the Social Credit party, and Miss Pennock, at one time an employee of Bennett's office before he became premier, now are in non-political jobs.

NDP leader Dave Barrett said he can see no purpose in Bennett wanting to discuss the matter with the three party leaders at this point.

Barrett said Bennett should first explain why he signed a cabinet order in early 1976 authorizing a jump of 10 pay levels for Pennock.

"He cannot shift the blame on that one," the NDP leader said.

New Engines, Bows for Ferries

B.C. Ferries' Queen of Victoria and Queen of Vancouver will have major refits carried out this spring at a total cost of $9 million, general manager Charles Gallagher said today.

New engines will be installed in both vessels and bulbous bows added to increase their speed from 17½ to 19 knots.

Gallagher said Vanouver Shipyards Co. Ltd. are the successful bidders on the contract but much of the work, including the installation of the engines, will be done in the Esquimalt Graving Dock.

The graving dock has been booked from late-March to late-May and Gallagher said the two ships will be back in operation in time for the tourist season.

The ferries now have four 16-cylinder Paxman diesel engines that deliver 6,000 brake horsepower to the wheel. Gallagher said these will be replaced by two German MAK diesel engines with an increased power of 8,000.

During the refit the ships will also have new separators installed that will take oil out of bilge water to reduce pollution.

Gallagher said an incinerator will be installed in one of the ferries as an alternative to the present method of taking garbage ashore and shredding it.

In an effort to cut down hull maintenance costs, a new paint system will be used which officials hope will prevent fouling.

Building Council Pushes Joint Plan

Members of the B.C. and Yukon Building and Construction Trades Council are optimistic they can agree on their own structure for a single bargaining unit without having one imposed by the Labor Relations Board, a council spokesman said today.

The board ruled Wednesday that the 17 international unions involved must bargain jointly to avoid the present "intolerable situation" where a strike or lockout involving one union can shut down the whole industry.

However, the board said it was not imposing a council on the unions now, as it is entitled to do under the Labor Code, but asking the trades to try again to put together their own bargaining unit.

Roy Gauthier, secretary-treasurer of the trades council, said he hopes the board's decision will give the necessary impetus to the various unions to get them into one unit.

The unions failed in a recent attempt to establish a joint council after five weeks of discussions.

The Plumbers' Union, Local 170, is reported to be sticking to its position that multi-trade bargaining won't work.

Meanwhile, the Construction Labor Relations Association, bargaining agent for about 850 contractors, is predictably pleased with the LRB decision.

The association had submitted a brief to the board suggesting such a joint council.

Association president Chuck McVeigh said it is still premature to comment in great detail because the unions still have to attempt to set up some structure for the joint council.

However, he said the association is pleased with the general idea because it will prevent the ripple effect of a dispute involving one trade group shutting down the entire B.C. construction industry.

"The intent of the judgement is to improve the bargaining system in the construction industry and that has to be looked upon as a positive and constructive step," McVeigh said.

Gauthier said the unions involved met Thursday to discuss the LRB decision and he is drafting a rough constitution that could be used to form the joint council.

Hospital Site 'Betrayal'

The Helmcken Road hospital site is "a completely stupid choice, costly and a betrayal to the Sisters of St. Ann Charles Barber, NDP MLA for Victoria, said Thursday.

In a call to the government to stop the Helmcken Road development, Barber said the hospital controversy has raised more public outcry than even the ICBC or increased ferry rates.

Barber said the Helmcken Road site "contradicts the regional plan and distorts planning priorities."

When the Sisters of St. Ann sold the Victoria General Hospital and adjoining land they did so assuming the hospital would remain an acute care hospital, he said.

A split hospital is medically dangerous, Barber warned. Downtown doctors and residents would not make frequent visits to patients at Helmcken Road, he said, reducing patients' morale.

Barber said the Western Community needs its own hospital and this should be located in either Colwood or Langford.

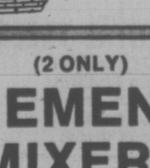

"If the Helmcken Road hospital becomes a fact, Barber said he would insist itbe built in one phase, first-class transit provided, land speculation and development be stopped in the Helmcken Road area, a prompt decision be made on the future of VGH, and a pamphlet be sent to all householders outlining the government's plans for the Royal Jubilee Hospital, VGH and the Helmcken Road facility.

Before The Judge

Judge William Ostler opened the new, main courtroom of Victoria provincial court Thursday by expressing his appreciation and admiration to court administrator George Williams and his staff for the planning and the orderly transfer from the Fisgard Street facilities.

Ostler, the senior provincial court judge in Victoria, made his remarks before the first case was heard in the courtroom. He said he would resist the temptation to indulge in nostalgic retrospection but did say that it was 45 years ago that he first went to the Fisgard Street court. Ostler was a clerk of the court before his appointment as a lay judge.

He said the new facilities, the main courtroom in the lower floor and two trial courtrooms on the main level of the Law Courts building, would be an advantage to all concerned.

A 40-year-old man appeared ready to plead guilty to the Feb. 9 attempted hold-up of the Bank of Nova Scotia but Ostler declined to take the plea.

Russell Winston Pearce, 521 Simcoe, elected trial by magistrate on a charge of attempted robbery with threats of violence but before legal-aid lawyer Barry Mah Ming could enter a plea on Pearce's behalf, Ostler stopped him.

"I do not propose to take this case," Ostler said. "I've dealt with a previous matter."

Ostler was referring to a previous case in which he sentenced Pearce on a similar charge.

"He wanted the matter disposed of in front of you," Mah Ming explained.

Mah Ming then applied to have the election struck and Ostler complied with the request and remanded Pearce until next Monday for election and possible plea.

Pearce was charged after two men, including assistant-manager Raymond Wallace Doan, overpowered a man at the bank's main branch, Douglas and Yates, after he demanded $400 from teller Cheryl May Hooker and intimated he had a gun in his left pocket.

★ ★ ★

"If you're going to react to every imagined insult, you're going to have a rough time of it -- and you're going to get beat up," Ostler told an 18-year-old.

Thomas Frederick Kroeger, 502 Dumaresq, pleaded guilty to a charge of assault causing bodily harm and Crown counsel Nicholas Lang entered a stay of proceedings on a charge of mischief causing wilful damage.

Lang told the court Kroeger was in a pickup truck on Jan. 21 which went past a bus stop in front of 3888 Carey in Saanich. One of three youths waiting for a bus yelled at the truck, Lang said, thinking he knew one of the people in the truck.

Apparently Kroeger thought the youth said something insulting and, after the truck had gone six blocks, returned to the scene where an altercation occurred.

Lang said Kroeger missed on a punch and put his fist through a window and the two combatants then followed through the broken glass.

The truck and Kroeger were stopped a short time later at Douglas and Ardersier by Saanich police, court was told.

Defence-lawyer Dean Wilson said restitution for $284 for the window was being made by Kroeger.

Trident Missile Fails

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The U.S. Navy reported Tuesday that its new Trident submarine-launched nuclear missile failed for the first time on its 11th test flight. The 64,000-kilometre missile shot failed to complete its flight from a Cape Canaveral, Fla., pad for undetermined reasons, the navy said. The test was one of a series of 25.

Tax Tips '78

Q. My wife has bond and bank interest of $600 which qualifies for the Interest, Dividends and Capital Gains deduction. She will not be taxable as that was her only income. Can I take her deduction into account and thereby claim her for full personal exemption?

A. No. The Interest, Dividends and Capital Gains deduction does not come into account in determining your exemption claim for her. You must reduce the married exemption by the excess of her income over $380. However, because she does not need to claim the Interest, Dividends and Capital Gains deduction to reduce her taxable income to zero, you may transfer the entire deduction to your return.

Q. My husband and I separated last year, and I obtained custody of our children on whose behalf both of us will be claiming a personal exemption for that year. Which of us must report the family allowance as income?

A. Each of you must report a portion of the total payments you received during the year. Use the following calculation to determine your share.

The personal exemption you claim for the children, divided by the total personal exemptions claimed by you and your husband for the children, multiplied by the total family allowance payments received during the year for the children.

Your husband must report the balance.

Q. I realize that you are only entitled to contribute to one Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan in your lifetime. However, can you transfer funds tax-free from one RHOSP to another?

A. Yes. You may apply for a second plan which will be eligible for registration provided that:

—All amounts in your first plan have been paid or transferred on your behalf directly to your new plan.

—Your new plan, at the time of payment or transfer, meets the necessary requirements. See Guide Item 23 of your 1977 Tax Guide.

—You and the trust company established under your new plan are resident in Canada at the time of the payment or transfer.

The funds transferred in this way from your present RHOSP into a new plan are not considered income to you at the time of transfer, and the amount transferred does not qualify as a deduction in computing your income.

Q. I received a grant to carry on research studies. Can I claim child care expenses against this income?

A. Yes you can, provided you meet the other necessary requirements for claiming child care expenses. You may claim the child care expense deduction if the expenses were incurred to enable you to carry on research or similar work for which you received a grant. You may also claim child care expenses if you undertake an occupation training course for which you received an allowance under the Adult Occupational Training Act.

Q. I have $300 bank interest, $400 in grossed-up dividends and $500 taxable capital gains from the sale of some of my Canadian securities. Will I have to pay tax on this income?

A. Your particular investment income and your capital gains from the sale of Canadian stocks or securities are eligible for the "Interest, Dividends and Capital Gains Deduction" of up to $1,000.

In your case you will only have to pay tax on the remaining $200. For more details see Item 38 in your 1977 Tax Guide.

Q. What investment income qualifies for the "Interest, Dividends and Capital Gains Deduction"?

A. Most interest income from Canadian sources, dividends from taxable Canadian corporations and taxable capital gains realized on the sale of Canadian securities qualify for the deduction.

The deduction is equal to either the total amount of the investment income listed above or $1,000, Whichever is less.

For more informatin see Item 38 in your 1977 Tax Guide.

Q. I sold some land last year and lost $6,000. What capital loss can I claim against my other income?

A. For 1977 and subsequent taxation years the amount of capital losses that you may claim in a year has been increased from $1,000 to $2,000. In your case your allowable capital loss is $3,000; if you have no capital gains, you can claim $2,000 this year and the remaining $1,000 must be carried back and applied against your income in the immediately preceding year. Any balance still remaining must be carried forward and applied against income in future years until your allowable capital losses are completely absorbed. If you have an allowable capital loss in 1977 and have net capital losses of other years, the combined total claim for the year may not exceed $2,000.

For more information ask your District Taxation Office for the pamphlet "Capital Gains and Valuation Day".

Q. Can I transfer funds from my Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan into a Registered Retirement Savings Plan?

A. Effective April 1, 1977 you are no longer able to transfer RHOSP funds tax-free into a RRSP or a registered pension fund or plan. You can still, however, transfer your funds into an income-averaging annuity contract.

For more information see Item 23 in your 1977 Tax Guide.

BONDS
THURSDAY
TORONTO (CP) — Prices were lower active in trading on the Canadian bond market Thursday. The short end of the market fell five cents. Mid-, long-term, and provincial were off one-quarter of a point. Corporate issues dropped one-eighth. Day-to-day money was available at 7¼ per cent. Three-month treasury bills were traded at an average of 7.26 per cent, up from 7.20 per cent last week and six-month bills at 7.52 per cent, up from 7.44 per cent. A special one-year bill traded at 7.77 per cent.

Coal Sides Bargain Against the Clock

WASHINGTON (AP) — Negotiators for the United Mine Workers and the U.S. soft-coal industry are bargaining against an informal deadline as the Carter administration increases pressure to end a coal strike that began 74 days ago.

"We don't have long," said Labor Secretary Ray Marshall.

He kept representatives of both sides around a government bargaining table day and night Thursday until talks recessed at 2 a.m. to give negotiators a chance to rest. He announced his intention to push for agreement sometime today, although he said that was not a hard-and-fast deadline.

There was other pressure from the administration, retreating step-by-step in recent days from its policy of non-intervention in labor disputes.

President Carter met with governors from a dozen states hit hard by the strike. Gov. James Thompson of Illinois said Carter remarked he would personally "step in" — a term that was not explained.

The White House dispatched presidential aide Landon Butler to the labor department to monitor the negotiations.

The administration also was beginning to talk more openly about the possibility of invoking the strike-halting provision of the Taft-Hartley Act.

Sentiment in favor of invoking the act is tempered by a widespread feeling that miners will ignore any back-to-work court order issued under the act. And Pennsylvania Gov. Milton Shapp said the governors' advice to the president was not to invoke the law.

POTHOLE TALLY RAPPED

WASHINGTON (AP) — There are an estimated 116 million potholes on U.S. roads, a congressman says and he wants the federal government to allocate money to help fill them. Representative James Howard (Dem. N.J.) told his colleagues Thursday he had hit the same pothole six times in six days and that something should be done to more rapidly fill the holes caused by repeated freezing and thawing.

To support his argument, Howard cited statistics from the Road Information Program which provided the 116 million figure. The statistics also noted that the average pothole measures 40 centimetres wide and 13 centimetres deep.

Egypt, Kenya Release Planes

CAIRO (Reuter) — Egypt and Kenya today released three airliners — one Egyptian and two Kenyan — impounded at each other's airports in a row over alleged Egyptian arms flights to Somalia.

The official Egyptian Middle East news agency said the Egyptian plane returned to Cairo airport today.

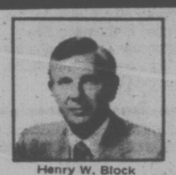

One of the Kenyan Boeing 707s had already taken off from Cairo and the second was expected to do so later today, it said.

Kenya forced the Egyptian plane to land at Nairobi on Wednesday, maintaining it was carrying arms for the Somalis across Kenyan airspace.

Egypt retaliated Thursday by seizing two Kenyan airliners. One was held during a Cairo stopover and the other was forced down.

Medical Marijuana Legalized

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — The New Mexico Legislature approved a bill Thursday that would legalize marijuana use as a therapeutic drug under strict controls.

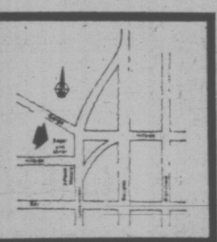

The vote was 44-16.

Supporters had cited recent research indicating that the use of marijuana can alleviate the side effects of cancer chemotherapy and ease the physical effects of glaucoma.

9.9% INFLATION

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain's annual inflation dropped last month to 9.9 per cent — the first time it has fallen to to less than 10 per cent since October 1973.

In December, the rate was 12.1 per cent.

U.S. Jet Sale Stiffens Israeli Resolve

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's decision to sell top-line jets to Saudi Arabia may stiffen Israel's determination to hold on to military airfields in Sinai in negotiations with Egypt.

This became clear as Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan told reporters after a meeting with Carter that he is "very upset" about the prospect of the Saudis being able "to cover the entire Israeli sky without refuelling."

Dayan signalled a drive to either get Carter to change his mind, which seems unlikely, or to persuade the U.S. Congress to block the $2.5-billion deal. There is a much better chance of that.

Already, 10 of the 15 members of the Senate foreign relations Committee have recorded their opposition. Representative Clarence Long (Dem. Md.) has launched a drive to block arms sales to Egypt and Israel as well as Saudi Arabia, and Republican party Chairman Bill Brock criticized the package as ill-timed during critical negotiations.

The Israeli campaign, which also seeks to scuttle sale of 50 F-5E short-range fighters to Egypt, will grow in intensity next month as first Defence Minister Ezer Weizman and then Prime Minister Menachem Begin visit here.

"The Saudis, when they get the F-15s, would be able to get to Eilat, (Israel's vital Red Sea port) within 10 minutes," Dayan said. "The Israeli people would be asking, 'Where would the Israeli air field be to meet and intercept the airplanes?'

"Shouldn't we have our airfields as close as possible to (Saudi Arabia)?"

Ottawa 'Hypocritic' over Women

By KEN POLE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The federal government, an active and apparently enthusiastic supporter of International Women's Year, is being accused of hypocrisy by a group of female public servants.

The public servants, in a document released by David MacDonald, the Progressive Conservative spokesman on the status of women, say government attitudes and policies are "designed to make women workers the scapegoat" for Canada's high unemployment.

"Mandarins in nearly every government department are saying publicly at the workplace that the number of working women is to blame. ... Instead of addressing themselves to the real issues, they are content to sit back and blame women."

"Women in the federal public service are particularly vulnerable," the Tory MP said in an open letter, a special copy of which was sent to Marc Lalonde, the federal minister who co-ordinated Canada's programs for the IWY in 1975 and who still has cabinet responsibility for the status of women.

The report comes nearly a month after the cabinet sparked a women's rights storm by appointing a man head of the federal Anti-Dumping Tribunal instead of the highly-qualified women who had served as its vice-chairman for more than five years. The woman, lawyer Marguerite Ritchie, commented in an interview that the fact she was passed over was a clear indication "that women should not work very hard."

Citing the Public Service Commission's own 1976 report, they said there were only 38 female senior executives in government and its agencies compared with 1,221 males, which does not reflect the over-all proportion of women in government service.

For example, in Manpower, where 49.8 per cent of 13,147 employees were women in 1976, only two of the 56 senior executive jobs were held by women. In the Secretary of State's department, where 62.4 per cent of 2,965 employees were women, not one of the 24 senior executive slots was filled by a woman.

"As long as men alone continue to make and influence all policy decisions in the federal public service, it will be next to impossible to make any headway in the fight for equal opportunity," the women say.

Almost at the same minute this criticism was being disclosed by MacDonald, Lalonde himself was giving a speech in which he urged "greater co-operation between governments, employers and unions" to improve the status of women.

Cottage Home
The dream combination — waterfront with a private little cove, and a beautiful cozy home with handcrafted detail. The living and dining rooms face the sea, and the modern kitchen with its breakfast nook will more than please you. Wait 'til you see the den with its warm old stove for those cool nights. The utility room opens to a private sundeck. There are two bedrooms — 1 up and 1 down. The garage has a small separate workshop. There's parking for 2 cars and many more extras. Priced at just $93,500. Don't miss out.

EXCEPTIONAL EXECUTIVE HOME
Approx. 3600 sq. ft. of superb quality and craftsmanship. This beautiful home has custom plastering and is full of the very best decorations. The 600 sq. ft. living room with an adjoining formal dining room will suit any occasion. There's a spacious kitchen and eating area with more 'Long-Bell' cabinets than 2 homes have, and the compactor garburator and dishwasher are of the best quality. The utility room entry is handy to the kitchen. The gracious entry has a unique chandelier and slate floor. There are 5 bedrooms on the upper level and the master bedroom has a full 4-piece bath, dressing room and private sundeck. The family room is great for kids and parties, and there's a 3-piece bath next to it. The double garage is 30 feet deep. Heating is by an oil-hot water system with 4 zones. This 12-year-old, split-level home is on ½ of an acre in the Arbutus-Gordon Head area, close to all schools, Unviersity and recreation facilities. The asking price is $145,000. Family Is Centre Of Perfect Crime

OTTAWA (CP) — The family circle is the arena for many of the most atrocious crimes in Canada, says Mary Van Stolk, an expert on child abuse, and often it is the perfect crime — because the victim won't tell.

"Behind the closed doors of North American domiciles the child is taught the rudiments of crime in the raw, often by the law of the bully," she said Thursday in testimony before a Senate committee examining childhood experiences as causes of criminal behavior.

Either because of fear, religious beliefs, ignorance or upbringing, many people will not seek outside help in domestic crimes, she said. And children can not.

The medical profession, the social services and the law all were doing a poor job of reporting and handling family violence. But police could not be expected to "enter the armed camp of domestic violence" if governments do not provide appropriate laws to punish such family crimes.

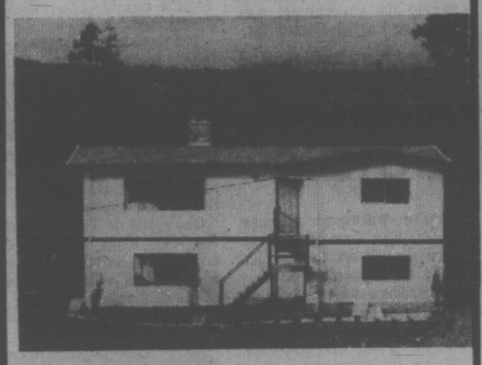

Nevertheless, Ms. Van Stolk is optimistic the situation will gradually improve.

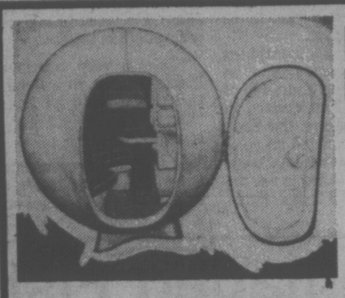

Ms. Van Stolk, an American-born former fashion model, now is a Canadian living in Montreal where she heads the Tree Foundation for family life. A mother of three, she has written several books on family violence.

Bilingual Flying Hush-Hush

OTTAWA (CP) — A heavy cloak of secrecy shrouds government studies into bilingual air traffic control, indicating the uneasy truce in the emotional dispute.

Reporters, photographers and TV cameramen, taken on a two-hour tour Thursday of the $4.5-million centre in Hull, Que., where the tests are being conducted on computerized machinery, were refused permission to see the bilingualism tests in action.

They were also refused permission to photograph the pilots and controllers participating in the tests and not allowed to listen to tape recordings of the tests.

"This is very sensitive," Pierre Proulx, in charge of the tests, said of them. "Everybody came in screaming."

As a result, the government made a deal not to let the media listen to the tapes or to see the tests in action, Proulx said.

The studies were set up following a 1976 national strike of English-speaking air traffic controllers, protesting French air communications.

Bilingual air traffic control now is limited to seven small Quebec airports and flights over Mirabel and a commission of inquiry into bilingual air traffic control is awaiting results of the tests to make its final report.

The studies are to determine a method of safely expanding bilingual air traffic control over Quebec.

"It's not if, it's how," Proulx said.

The tests include representatives from both sides of the dispute, including members of the Canadian Air Line Pilots Association (CALPA), the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association and les Gens de l'Air, a group urging bilingual air traffic control throughout Quebec.

The Gens de l'Air entered the tests after a 10-month boycott and, as with the other associations, still is critical of the studies, Proulx said.

French Delay

OTTAWA (CP) — Studies into bilingual air communications could have been completed if a group of French-language air traffic controllers had not boycotted the tests, Pierre Proulx, head of the federal studies, said Thursday.

The studies, about four months behind schedule, were also delayed by a shortage of air traffic controllers in Montreal.

Montreal should have about 30 more controllers and the tests schedules had to be juggled to fit the controllers' off-hours, Proulx said.

Damaged Fish Sold?

OTTAWA (CP) — The Freshwater Fish Marketing Corp., a federal government agency, is selling four-year-old fish with freezer burns to retail stores, Dean Whiteway (PC—Selkirk) said Thursday in the Commons.

Because of the poor condition of the fish, government inspectors are returning tens of thousands of pounds to the corporation, the Manitoba MP said.

W. R. Parks, president of the organization which markets fish from the Prairies, Northwest Territories and northwestern Ontario, earlier denied similar accusations made by a Winnipeg newspaper.

The newspaper quoted an unamed source as saying the board retrieved on several occasions quantities of frozen fish that had developed freezer burns while being held at private Winnipeg storage plants. The damaged parts were shaved off so the fish could be shipped for sale.

The source is also quoted as saying he personnally witnessed a corporation employee cutting the original date off cartons of fish and replacing it with an updated one.

Whiteway also said that the corporation was unable to meet final payments to fishermen for last year's catch.

Kuwait Embassy Planned

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will open an embassy in oil-rich Kuwait, External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson announced Thursday.

Jamieson said in a statement that Canada is in a good position to sell industrial goods and technical knowledge to the Persian Gulf state. The embassy would be well placed to help Canadian businessmen selling to Kuwait.

Jamieson said the Kuwaiti government has agreed to the embassy proposal and an advanced party will leave shortly to make final arrangements. The embassy is to be opened within the next two or three months.

The embassy will be staffed by an ambassador.

MAIL HIKE WOULD BE ILLEGAL: TORY

OTTAWA (CP) — Walter Dinsdale, the Progressive Conservative postal critic, said Thursday the government will break the law if it raises postal rates April 1 without an act of Parliament.

Dinsdale, MP for the Manitoba riding of Brandon-Souris, said in a news release a ministerial decree does not provide proper authority for an increase in postal rates.

The government announced last fall that the cost of mailing a first-class letter will increase to 14 cents from 12 cents, effective April 1.

Dinsdale quoted a 1974 statement by former postmaster-general Andre Ouellet, who said changes in postal rates "are possible only by an act of Parliament."

When Is a Lobster Tail Not a Tail?

OTTAWA (CP) — What looks and tastes like a lobster tail, comes from the tail end of a lobster, but is not a lobster tail?

A Cuban lobster tail, of course. At least, that's what the federal government has decreed and the tariff board has upheld.

If you feel somewhat confused, imagine the bewilderment of the Cubans. They're not only scratching their collective heads, they're losing a considerable chunk of money.

The Cubans, through Caribex Seafoods Ltd., have been selling lobsters in Canada for more than 10 years. In fact, if you have ever dined on restaurant 'surf and turf' the chances are good that the lobster tail portion of that delectable duo came from Cuba.

These Cuban lobsters, also called rock or spiny lobsters, were imported as tariff item 12800-1, a lobster category in which no duty is payable. However, in 1975 the revenue department decided that Cuban lobsters should become item 12700-1, a category for crustaceans in which eight per cent duty must be paid.

Crustaceans are a general class of hard-shell sea creatures, including shrimps, crabs and lobsters.

The Cubans, needless to say, were not amused by the change. They appealed to the tariff board, and that's where the fun began.

Jose Cervina, Caribex executive vice-president, said rock lobsters are different from East Coast lobsters because they are clawless and have thicker feelers. But they still were lobsters and were well known as such in the restaurant trade.

The board also heard from other experts, including marine biologist Thomas Carefoot of the University of British Columbia. He testified that clawed lobsters and rock lobsters both are found in shallow waters, walk along the bottom, feed on much the same things, grow to record sizes of 35 pounds and are caught in lobster pots.

"These I consider to be lobsters," he said.

A clawed lobster in French is homard. Langouste is the French word for lobsters without claws.

The Official Languages Act demands that in such cases the French versions be considered. The tariff board ruled earlier this month that since the French word homard was used for tariff item 12800-1, the unclawed Cuban lobsters had to be moved to the crustacean category and that the Cubans must pay eight-percent duty.

CMHC Shines Liberal Glory?

OTTAWA (CP) — Raymond Hessien, Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. chairman, fears that a directive from Urban Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet leaves the federal agency open to criticism of political partisanship.

Hessien's sentiments are raised in a confidential memo sent to Ouellet Aug. 31. The Canadian Press obtained a copy of the memo Thursday.

The fears are prompted by Ouellet's demand that he receive advance notice of all grants the corporation plans to give under the Municipal Incentive Grant scheme.

Ouellet wants the advance notice so he can arrange for a Liberal MP or himself to be present at any ceremonies marking an agreement between a municipality and the corporation.

Hessien has been complying with the directive but somewhat reluctantly.

"If this is to be the pattern of involvement you wish to follow, I want to make sure that it will not affect the discharge directly by the corporation of its full responsibilities in administering the program," Hessien said in the memo.

"I am also concerned that it does not lay itself open to criticism of political partisanship by arranging ceremonies for or otherwise involving selected federal members in the grant payment process."

In an interview Thursday, Ouellet said that he is the sole person to decide if an MP will present the cheques and that it should be no surprise that he will only seek out Liberals.

Guards Given Only a Gun

VANCOUVER (CP) — The first day he showed up for work at Oakalla Prison, authorities gave Gary Ralph a set of keys and a .38-calibre revolver he didn't know how to load.

"When I started 10 years ago, they put me on the 'back door keys' of the east wing without any training in how to use that gun," said Ralph Thursday as he testified at an inquiry into conditions at provincial prisons for women.

Oakalla now is the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre (Oakalla), and guards at the institution in nearby Burnaby aren't issued firearms until they've have a day of weapons drill on a firing range, said Ralph.

But with that exception, staff training isn't much better now than it was a decade ago, said Ralph, who is president of the Oakalla branch of the British Columbia Government Employees' Union (BCGEU).

He said new security staff at the men's and women's units of Oakalla get 10 days on-the-job training "in the locking arrangements and how to conduct inmate counts."

After that, they're supposed to go to the corrections service training academy for more formal instruction, he told the inquiry commissioner, Justice Patricia Proudfoot of the B.C. Supreme Court.

"But it doesn't work that way," said Ralph, a guard in the men's unit of the jail. "Because of staff shortages, some people are on the job for a year before they ever get to the academy."

Ralph said one sign of low morale among the 70 guards at the women's unit is high absenteeism attributed to illness. In the B.C. public service overall, employees average 6.4 sick days a year. At Oakalla's women's unit, it runs between 11 and 12 days.

Man 'In Love' With Girl, 13

CHILLIWACK (CP) — Raymond Rodgers, once a mayoralty candidate in nearby Abbotsford, refused to stop seeing a 13-year-old girl with whom he allegedly was having sexual intercourse because he was in love with her, county court Judge David Hinds was told Thursday.

Rodgers, 42, is charged with having sex with a girl under 14 in 1975.

The girl's older brother, now 17, said he began to dislike Rodgers in the fall of 1975 because the man was bothering members of his family and wouldn't leave his sister alone.

"He was causing problems for the whole family and everyone was getting frustrated," he said. "He started bothering my mother quite a bit . . . so I told him to please lay off everybody."

The boy cannot be identified because of a ban of publication on his sister's identity.

"He (Rodgers) said he loved her and he couldn't help it. At that point I just left."

Judge Hinds earlier had recessed proceedings because of outbursts from Rodgers during the boy's testimony. The brother testified that he had seen his sister and Rodgers go into Rodgers' bedroom and close the door on several occasions.

The brother said he had been present on two occasions when Rodgers and his sister were together, once overnight. He said that he, his sister and younger brother were camping with Rodgers in the Okanagan and that all four planned to sleep in Rodgers' van.

"But they (Rodgers and the girl) were in the same sleeping bag and started giggling a lot," he said. "I was upset so my brother and I went out and set up the tent where we stayed all night."

On another occasion at Rodgers' home, he said, Rodgers went into the bathroom where his sister, now 16, was taking a bath.

Rodgers, now a planning consultant, has written several books, including Sex and the Law in Canada.

The trial continues.

HOSTAGE PAIR GRANTED BAIL

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Two women charged with attempted murder and assisting an escape attempt as the result of a week-long hostage-taking at the British Columbia Penitentiary were granted $20,000 bail Thursday.

Betsy Wood, 48, of North Vancouver, and Heather Gail Hoon, 31, of Vancouver were among 13 visitors and prisoners taken hostage Jan. 28 when five prisoners at the penitentiary unsuccessfully attempted an escape.

Bail was granted when the two appeared in county court Thursday, but was subject to certain conditions.

Judge L. M. McDonald ordered that the two refrain from any contact with the five prisoners who participated in the hostage-taking, that they not visit penitentiaries of any sort, and not visit any courthouse except for their own court appearances.

Money Shuffled - Lawyer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Large amounts of money were "shuffled around discreetly" from one company to another, Crown counsel R.D. Plommer said Thursday in outlining theft and fraud charges against two financiers and an investment company.

Accused in 22 counts of theft and seven of fraud are Francis D. Trebell, Columbia Western Management Ltd., formerly known as Yorkshire Financial Corp. Ltd., and Robert L. Dolan.

Plommer told Mr. Justice S. M. Toy and a jury the Crown will call evidence to show that the accused, operating in Vancouver, Calgary and Montreal, used deceit and fraud to obtain millions of dollars in loans from mutual funds.

The Crown lawyer said an important part of the prosecution will centre around a contention the mutual funds were not lawfully permitted to make the loans and that the accused knew it.

He said the loans were obtained mainly from mutual funds of which Dolan was said to have had a management interest and that the money went to the use of Yorkshire, a firm the Crown lawyer referred to as "Trebell's firm".

The Crown said the main purpose of the loans was to obtain large sums of money at low interest rates to acquire other financial concerns and to finance a construction project in Vancouver.

Cranbrook Crash Inquest Set

CRANBROOK (CP) — Coroner Dr. Alan Asky said Thursday he will empanel a seven-member inquest jury today to make a preliminary inspection of a Boeing 737 crash site and of the remains of 42 victims.

The inquest proceedings will then be adjourned indefinitely, he said.

"We're doing this mainly to facilitate the issuance of death certificates," the coroner said. "The inquest itself won't be held until all investigations have been completed and all the reports are in."

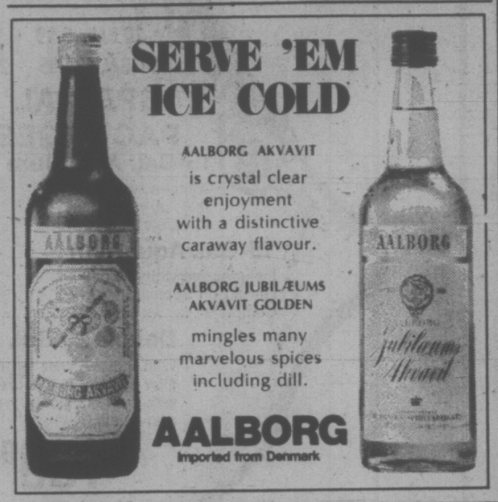

Transport Canada investigators, meanwhile, are studying the remains of the Pacific Western Airlines jet which cartwheeled to the ground and exploded Feb. 11 after an aborted landing attempt in snowy conditions at the municipal airport in this southeastern British Columbia city. There were seven survivors, all of whom had been in the tail section of the plane.

The plane's flight recorder, usually stored in the tail section, has not been recovered and is believed to have been destroyed. The two engines, however, have been recovered and will be removed from the site Saturday for further study, an investigator said.

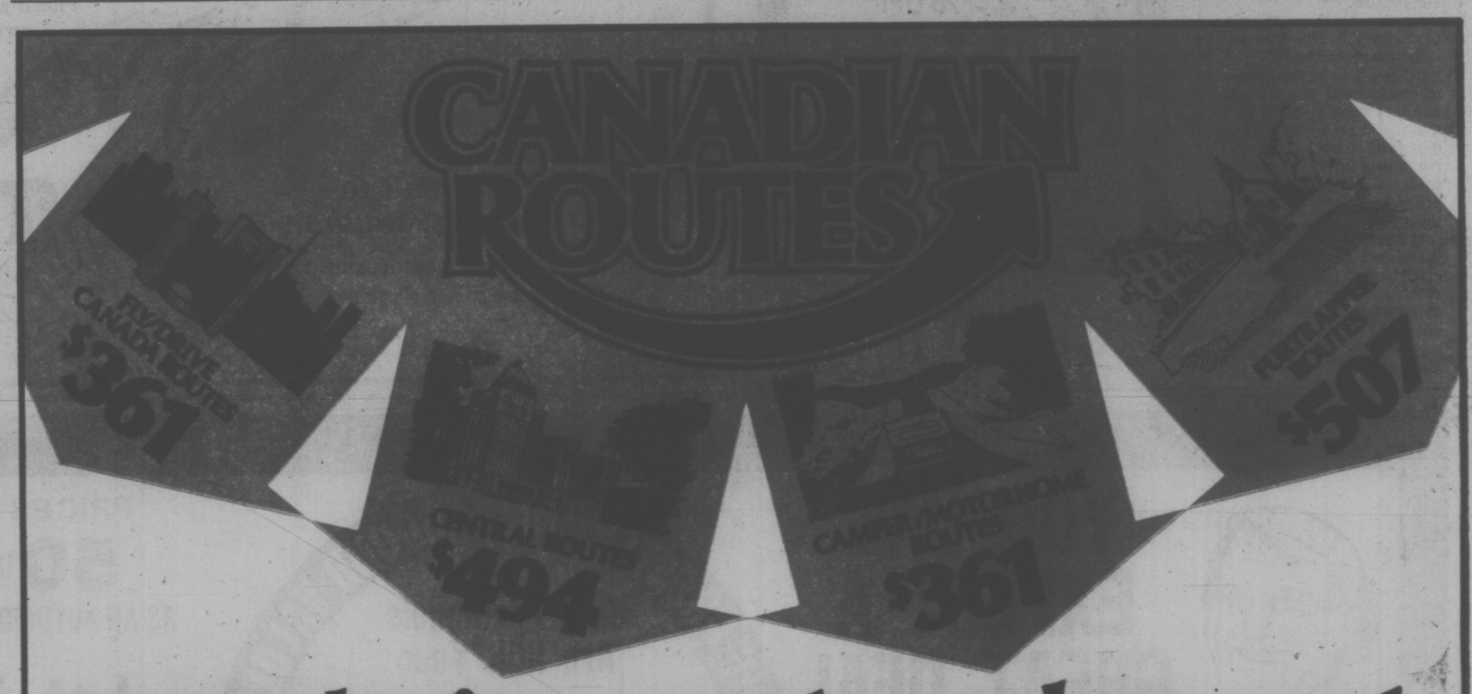

Transport Canada spokesman Bill Almolke said the 15 air accident investigators working here still have not determined exactly where the aircraft touched down on its first landing attempt. He would not say if investigators are considering the possibility the pilot might have aborted the landing because he felt he would overshoot the runway.

Investigators have looked for evidence of the hard landing reported by survivors, checking the runway surface for grooves or holes caused by contact with the aircraft. No such evidence has been found, said Almolke, "but hard landings don't always leave holes in the runway."

BCR INADEQUATE FOR ITS BOSSES

VANCOUVER (CP) — Executives of the debt-ridden British Columbia Railway plan a whistle-stop tour of the communities the government line serves but they'll use rival transportation modes — cars and aircraft.

The B.C. Rail party plans meetings with railway supervisory and union personnel, shippers, businessmen and civic leaders in Prince George Tuesday, Quesnel Wednesday and Williams Lake Thursday.

Hugh Armstrong, public relations officer for the railway, defended Thursday the decision by the seven-member group, which includes president Mac Norris, to avoid the company's passenger service.

"This is a busy time of the year," he said. "Going by air and car allows management to be in their offices Monday and Friday and visit the communities in between."

Trail Civic Employees Strike for Contract

TRAIL (CP) — Residents of this southwestern British Columbia city were without transit services, garbage collection and other services Thursday after a walkout by 80 civic employees.

The workers, members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, walked off their jobs to protest slowness in contract talks. The union has been without a contract since March 1, 1977.

'Zealots' Ruining Abalone Fishing

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Campbell River abalone fishermen said Wednesday his livelihood is being threatened by fishing restrictions imposed by the government in response to pressure from "elite environmentalists."

Henry Delisle, who summed up his argument in a brief to Frances Dickson, a federal fisheries biologist here, was replying to a similar brief made public earlier this week by a Prince Rupert fisherman who said the province's abalone beds are being devastated to meet huge demands from the Japanese market.

The abalone is a seagoing snail and is considered a seafood delicacy.

The earlier brief, produced by fisherman Stewart Brinton, said the fisheries department had neglected to control abalone fishermen, but Delisle said Wednesday the opposite is true.

"The environmental movement and small boat operators, in many areas, are zealots who strong-arm fisheries and regulatory agencies into setting extreme standards, use public harassment to delay or halt an abalone fishery they consider harmful," Delisle said.

Delisle said the abalone fishery will be closed all year this year except for three months beginning March 1. Fishermen are also forced to throw away abalone less than 10 centimetres in diameter.

He said these restrictions eliminate the best fishing season and force him to throw back many mature shellfish.

Rape Conviction In Absentia

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A Canada-wide warrant has been issued for the arrest of Ajab Singh Sahota, 22, of Clearwater, B.C., who was convicted in absentia of rape and sentenced Wednesday to seven years in prison.

Justice J. H. Macdonald said Wednesday that a recent amendment to the Criminal Code allowed the trial to proceed after Sahota failed to appear for the third day of his trial Wednesday.

Sahota was free on bail of $3,000 in his own recognicanze with one surety. RCMP said they believe Sahota was still in the area.

The complainant said Sahota, who she did know know, forced her at knifepoint into bushed beside the highway, where he raped her.

Animal Poisoning Plan 'Inhumane'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two wildlife conservation groups—one Canadian and one Swiss—have written to the provincial and federal governments urging cancellation of a program to reduce wolf and coyote populations in the Burns Lake area by poisoning.

The International Wildlife Protection Association, based in Kamloops, has protested to the British Columbia government and the World Federation for the Protection of Animals, based in Switzerland, has urged both federal and provincial governments to halt the poisoning.

The association has written to Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf asking for a ban on the use of "chemical toxicants" on all public lands in the province.

The letter follows an announcement last month by the provincial fish and wildlife branch that it will start a preventive poisoning program in the Burns Lake area, 700 kilometres northwest of Vancouver in the B.C. Interior.

Branch control officer Brian Baldwin said the poisonings will be resumed for the first time in 10 years because of increasing complaints from sheep and cattle ranchers.

The Swiss-based federation, which represents more than 250 animal welfare organizations in some 50 nations, has written to the Ottawa office of the Canadian Wildlife Service, part of Environment Canada.

MANAGEMENT STALLING, SAYS CUPW

VANCOUVER (CP) — The president of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers said Thursday stalling in contract negotiations by management could result in a dispute which would affect the public.

Jean-Claude Parrot told a news conference that postal workers have decided to make public their position because government negotiators are resisting union initiatives in reaching a new contract agreement.

The union's last contract expired last June.

Wages are not an issue in the dispute, he said.

Losers at the Polls But Winners in Court

Two former candidates for aldermanic seats in Courtenay lost at the polls but won in court Thursday after suing a newspaper for libel.

In a B.C. Supreme Court judgment, Justice Alan Macfarlane awarded $3,500 each and court costs to Ruth Masters and Richard Von Fuchs for libel in a letter to the editor published in the Comox District Free Press shortly before the November 1976 municipal election.

Miss Masters placed fourth and Fuchs was sixth among seven candidates for three aldermanic posts in the Vancouver Island city that year. Fuchs ran again in 1977 but received fewer votes than the previous year and again placed sixth in a field of seven.

The letter, signed by A.E. "Pat" Fox, referred to Miss Masters as "an old maid" and Fuchs as "a full-time career layabout," court was told. It also said they were seeking election to advance communism and implied that if elected they couldn't be trusted with public funds.

Personal references to Miss Masters "are in poor taste, are insulting and are an attempt to ridicule the candidate," the judge ruled.

But to describe Fuchs, who showed a record of almost continuous employment, as a layabout was "a statement of fact and it was false," Judge Macfarlane said.

Also, no fair-minded person could think either were communists "unless such person perceived all socialists to be communists," he ruled. To imply they could not be trusted with public funds left a defamatory imputation.

Defeated PC Urged To Stay

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta MLA who defeated MP Stan Schumacher for the federal Progressive Conservative nomination in the Bow River constituency said Thursday he wants Schumacher to stay in the party.

Gordon Taylor (Ind-Drumheller) said he will try to talk to Schumacher to encourage him to remain with the party and help defeat the Liberals.

"I'd like to see him stay in the party," said Taylor. "He's been a long-time Conservative."

Robert Coates, national president of the Progressive Conservative party, announced earlier this week the party will not negate an October nomination vote which selected Taylor over the sitting member, Schumacher.

Speaker Admits Jet Trip

By KEN POLE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — James Jerome, the Liberal MP who is Speaker of the House of Commons, used a government Jetstar recently for a brief visit to New Orleans. What's more, he freely admits it and is prepared to defend his actions despite the fact that the jet had to make two round trips from Ottawa.

The occasion was a meeting Feb. 10-12 in the Louisiana city of the Canada-United States Parliamentary Association, which also was attended by a delegation of about three dozen MPs.

The other members of the Canadian group went down Feb. 9 aboard a defence department aircraft, but Jerome said in an interview Thursday he was forced to fly down alone Feb. 10 in the smaller aircraft because it was vital that he be in Parliament that day.

Because it proved impossible to make commercial connections, he was forced to take the Jetstar, which returned to Ottawa because Jerome expected to return on the larger aircraft.

However, this also proved impossible because of the need to be back here early on the following Monday, so the Jetstar was dispatched to New Orleans tm pick him again — a second round trip of just under 3,500 miles. He was accompanied on the flight back by Mrs. Jerome as well as Newfoundland Conservative MP John Crosbie and his wife.

Opponent Helped

MONTREAL (CP) — The Sun Life Assurance Co. has told lawyer Richard Holden that it will give him a complete list of policyholders, allowing him to mail out appeals against the company's decision to move its head office to Toronto from Montreal.

Holden said he received a letter Thursday from Sun Life lawyer A. G. McCracken saying that the company is "prepared in principle" to hand over a list of the 932,000 policyholders eligible to vote on the move at a special meeting to be held in Toronto in April.

Cooler Sun Altering Earth?

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The temperature on the surface of the sun fell 11 degrees last year, the first time such a drop has been recorded and it is a change that could trigger variations in the earth's climate in the next few years.

An 11-degree drop in the surface temperature of the sun is a change of only ½ of one percent, said Dr. William Livingston of the Kitt Peak National Observatory in Tucson, Ariz., where the changes were measured, but scientists have said that a 2 per cent decline in the sun's surface temperature over a period of as little as 50 years would be enough to "glaciate" the entire earth.

"We presume the changes we see are cyclic and that the temperatures will stop falling sometime in the near future," Dr. Livingstone said Tuesday. "I can't imagine anything else happening."

The decline in solar surface temperature began in January 1977, around the time the 11-year sunspot cycle passed its period of minimum activity and began to increase. More and more sunspots have broken out on the sun's surface since the start of 1977. The period of maximum sunspot activity is expected late next year or early in 1980.

"We think we're seeing a direct correlation here, that as solar activity goes up the sun's surface temperature goes down," Dr. Livingstone said. "It's the opposite of what you might guess, but we believe that when you have a rise in sunspot activity the total temperature must go down as an adjustment to conserve solar energy."

Whatever it is that Kitt Peak scientists have seen they are seeing for the first time. Their observations were made using the McMahon solar telescope, which is the newest and largest of its kind anywhere in the world.

The solar telescope tracks the sun with an 80-inch mirror that delivers an unblurred image of the sun more than three feet across to a device called a spetroscope that analyzes sunlight components. The device breaks down sunlight ino a continuous rainbow of color where temperature changes can be identified in individual chemical elements as they burn on the sun's surface.

A growing number of scientists believe that changes in the sun trigger changes in the earth's climate. Scientists now believe the 11-year sunspot cycle has a strong connection with drought on the earth. The drought in southern New Mexico that ended in August of 1972 came to an end at the same time that large solar flares appeared on the surface of the sun. A second drought ended two years later when flares again streaked from the sun's surface.

The most striking historical evidence came in the 70 years that ended in 1715. In that time, there were almost no sunspots and no aurorae in the earth's atmosphere. The same period became known on earth as the Little Ice Age, when the coldest temperatures in the last 1,000 years were recorded in the northern hemisphere.

What's Not Known

LONDON (Reuter) — An encyclopedia has been published that is designed to shrink as man finds out more about his world.

Most encyclopedias require additions as new discoveries are made. But chapters will need to be cut from The Encyclopedia of Ignorance, a compendium of what man does not know in the sciences, as discoveries are made about how gravity works, how plants make flowers or why individuals become addicted to drugs and alcohol.

The book contains contributions from 60 eminent scientists writing on what they don't understand in their fields, but would dearly like to.

Such discussions, naturally containing a good deal of what is known, take the reader along the frontiers of chemistry, physics, biology, astronomy and medicine.

Otto Frisch, who in the late 1930s coined the term and helped explain the phenomenon of nuclear fission, opens the book with the biggest qustion of all: Why?

Why does what happens in nature happen? Is it probability or natural "law?"

"To some people this idea or probability as a physical attribute of, say, an unstable atom seems distasteful: The idea of inexorable laws, even if we can never follow their work in detail, has not lost its appeal," Frisch writes, noting that physicists are finding probability easier to accept in their calculations.

Sir Hermann Hondi, former chief scientific adviser to the British defence ministry and now performing this function for the department of energy, carries such philosophical speculation further by noting that despite scientists' desire for "complete" theories, "our most successful theories in physics are those that explicitly leave room for the unknown."

The encyclopedia—two volumes in paperback, one in hardback—becomes more concrete with scientists wondering about the "shape" of space, how the planets formed and what goes on inside the sun.

In the life and earth sciences section Nobel Prize-winner Francis Crick, who helped describe the double-helix shape of the genetic material DNA, finds the most exciting problems in the development of biological systems.

"Our ignorance of developmental biology has the following curious feature," he writes. "We understand how an organism can build molecules . . . although the largest of them is far too minute for us to see, even with a high-powered microscope; yet we do not understand how it builds a flower or a hand or an eye, all of which are plainly visible to us."

The most challenging void in this field is the question of how a nervous system is constructed in an animal, how the nerves know where to grow and what to hook up with, he writes.

Other experts wonder about sleep, nutrition, learning, addiction, evolution and pain.

READY FOR ALIENS

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — If man goes voyaging in outer space he should be prepared to get along with any extra-terrestrial strangers he encounters, a U.S. diplomat suggested Wednesday.

Michael Michaud, policy director of the U.S. state department's office of international security, was commenting on the prospects for finding other life in the universe. He spoke at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Ultimately man may attempt to visit other galaxies, Michaud said, "a scale of endeavor that seems as far beyond us now as a flight to the moon would have seemed to a stone-age man."

He added: "Other intelligences may be engaged in similar efforts. An attempt to co-operate might be more productive than a competition."

He warned against overconfidence and arrogance as man reaches out into space. "We must avoid concluding that only one model of the future can be the right one, and keep some options open."

He said that, should man encounter alien intelligence, he should try to get along "before either side embarks on unilateral actions that could limit the future of the other."

Whole Town for Sale in Alaska

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — If the dream of owning your own home is too tame for you, how about buying a whole town. Alaska has two prospects on the market.

The 240-acre townsite of Cantwell, about 300 kilometres north of Anchorage and a stone's throw from Mount McKinley, is going for a paltry $795,000. The business district of Northway, just off the Alaska Highway 80 kilometres from the Yukon border, is offered for $1 million.

Both communities boast excellent hunting and fishing.

About 300 people live in the area, including staff for a nearby reindeer research station. Cantwell is near proposed dam sites on the Susitna River. The exploratory phase of that hydroelectric project is due to begin this spring. Sizeable deposits of copper, limestone and gypsum lie within five miles of the town.

The current owners, four businessmen who bought the town at a bankruptcy sale in June, 1976, by putting $135,000 down and picking up a $465,000 mortgage, say their own businesses kept them too busy to develop Cantwell.

George Cornelius of Strout Realty in Anchorage says he has never tried to sell a town before. But Cantwell has been on the market only six weeks, and Cornelius says he has had several offers — two from Alaska and others from Pittsburgh, Chicago, Los Angeles, New York and Portland, Ore.

Northway lies on the route of a proposed pipeline of Northwest Alaskan Pipeline Co., which will carry Prudhoe Bay gas to markets in the U.S. Midwest. And Metropolitan Realty, which is handling the sale of the town, has said there are deposits of copper, molybdenum and gold within a 60-mile radius.

Dawson Lindblom of Metropolitan also reports queries from the East, mostly from "younger people — more rugged types of individual who like to get away from the city and have a few bucks in their pockets."

Husband Not Total Master

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A husband does not legally have the sole say in handling a couple's property, a state judge has ruled in declaring unconstitutional Louisiana's so-called head and master law, a survivor of the days of Spanish machismo.

The law, embedded in Louisiana's legal code back in the late 1700s, when Spain held a huge area, states:

"The husband is the head and master of the partnership or community of gains. He administers its effects, disposes of the revenue which they produce, and may alienate them by an onerous title, without the consent and permission of his wife."

However, Civil District Judge Gerald Federoff struck down the law in a ruling in a suit brought by Corpus Christi Parish Credit Union against Selina Martin and Lawrence Joseph Martin, of New Orleans.

Martin signed a mortgage in 1974, over his wife's protests, as collateral for a $5,000 loan he took out for his mother. Martin was then jobless and his wife was the family breadwinner.

Mrs. Martin, since divorced from Martin, was told by the loan company that her consent was not necessary to make the note legal.

'Eyesore' Hangar Torn Down

The old "green hangar" at Patricia Bay airport, used for storing equipment for members of the Royal Air Force with the Commonwealth training program during the Second World War, is being torn down.

A spokesman for the federal environment department said the building was an "eyesore" and of no further use.

"It was put together in a hurry at the outbreak of the war," he said.

Major Oil Discovery Offsets Crude Decline

The Fort St. John oil discovery by Scurry-Rainbow will help reverse a major economic weakness in British Columbia, a decline in crude oil production.

The find, the first major one in more than five years, will add about 1.4 million barrels of oil annually to British Columbia's production when all wells are drilled.

The significance of the oil coming on stream was emphasized by a report released today by the provincial ministry of economic development, showing B.C.'s crude oil production for the first nine months 1977 at 10.4 million barrels, down 6.7 per cent from the same period in 1976.

The Scurry-Rainbow discovery is already pumping crude oil into the system at the rate of 365,000 barrels per year but this will rise by more than one million barrels as further wells are drilled into the oil pool.

More significantly, the news is attracting other major oil companies into the district and this exploration drive should result in additional discoveries.

Meanwhile, natural gas exploration is also being expanded. Gas has been a strong element in British Columbia's petrolem industry with most exploration companies being dubious about the chances of finding large amounts of new crude oil, before the Scurry-Rainbow strike.

Natural gas production has been increasing and provincial government figures show that during the first nine months of 1977 more than 284 billion cubic feet of gas had been produced in B.C., up 2.8 per cent from the same period a year earlier.

The provincial government report showed that, except for crude oil production, the B.C. economy had been performing strongly in 1977.

Shipments of manufactured goods during the first 10 months of the year totalled $8.4 billion, up 17.2 per cent from the same time one year earlier.

Coal production was up 23 per cent and copper production rose 20 per cent. They are the two main minerals in the province.

Lumber production increased 14.5 per cent and newsprint production was up about one per cent.

Retail sales in British Columbia during the first 10 months totalled $5.8 million, up 8.4 per cent, the report showed.

Exports from B.C. for the first 10 months totalled $6.6 billion, up 19 per cent, while imports totalled $3 billion, up 16.2 per cent.

SEX CHEMICAL FOR BUDWORM

HALIFAX (CP) — The Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and federal governments are to conduct field trials this year to study the use of sex attractants as a natural control measure against the spruce budworm, the Nova Scotia lands and forests department announced today.

Under the program, scientists will use an artifically-produced sex chemical to confuse male budworms trying to find female budworms who emit the same substance naturally to attract mates.

Scientists say the confusion would result in a reduced number of matings and limit the size of the succeeding generation of budworms.

The work is to be co-ordinated by the Maritimes Forest Research Centre at Fredericton and will involved scientists from the University of New Brunswick and St. Francis Xavier University.

CITY MAY SUE BCTV

VANCOUVER (CP) — A British Columbia Supreme Court judge ruled Wednesday that the city of Prince George has the legal capacity to sue B.C. Television System Ltd. for libel.

BCTS claimed that the city could not sue in a corporate capacity in the libel action.

Prince George claims it was libelled in a series of broadcasts and that its governing reputation and standing has been lowered.

Student Job Program Racing against Clock

The Provincial Youth Employment Program has a month to become a job-finding organization for thousands of students entering the work force this year.

Field co-ordinators are establishing offices in communities across the province and lining up potential summer employers.

The program budget, approved by the provincial treasury board, could exceed $15 million this year.

Funds this year have been designated for business, $3.7 million; farms, $1.5 million and $1.8 million for non-profit organizations.

But the biggest problem is getting potential employers to fill in and return application forms before the Mar. 24 deadline, according to funding manager Virginia Greene.

Jobs must be for a minimum of 40 days between May 1 and Sept. 29. The government subsidy, 50 per cent of salary up to $2 an hour, ends after 110 days.

Businesses must have been registered for at least a year prior to Mar. 24, 1978 to be eligible.

Job aplicants must by between 15 and 24 years of age.

Application forms are available at the Greater Victoria field office, 1250 Quadra St., V8W 2K7. The telephone number is 382-5151.

TOWN TALK

A Salt Spring Island woman and a Victoria man are among 111 winners in the Bank of Montreal's nationwide Dream Draw.

Mrs. Ann McPhee of Ganges was awarded one of 10 $5,000 "dream vacation" prizes by Jerry Stennes, manager of the bank's Ganges branch.

Seven other British Columbians won prizes in the Dream Draw.

The contest, designed to encourage people to save, gave away a total of $300,000 in prize money, including 10 "dream vacations" like that received by Mrs. McPhee.

The future of the Maple Bay Marina and Shipyard Ltd. near Duncan, operated by the Bentzen brothers for 18 years, still is in doubt after going into receivership in September, 1976.

John Bentzen says the marina is still in receivership and although there have been several bids to buy it, bidders have had trouble finding financing.

The brothers also had hoped to sell some of the 23 acres they own for condominiums but developers have run into financial stumbling blocks.

Another concerted effort to sell the marina will be made in the spring. Bentzen, meanwhile, is continuing to run the business.

Telling Gilbert Islanders about the Garden of Eden is like carrying coals to Newcastle, however unexpected.

David Smith, an ex-Scotsman teaching school in Bikenibeu, an island one degree north of the Equator at longitude 174, wrote to radio station CJVI to report picking up their broadcast on his AM band last Aug. 17.

It included an ad for the Garden of Eden Shop and another for a used car lot on Oak Street, both of which would probably sound alien to South Seas listeners.

The station often gets correspondence from DX listeners in remote parts of the world, as well as the American southwest. DXing (long-distance reception verified by the broadcaster) is a hobby in many lands, sometimes made possible by tropospheric skips in normal transmission.

Due to conditions at certain times of the year and its comparatively low frequency, CJVI gets reports of being heard regularly in the far north or far south, such as Chico, Calif., the Gilbert Islands, Norway and Finland.

Legislation passed by the provincial government last March has driven a number of firms out of business. And Victoria Better Business Bureau manager Bill Tindall couldn't be more pleased.

You see the firms that are no more had been involved for years in offering tax rebates. Offering isn't exactly the best word to describe the practice. Ripping off is more apt.

But by limiting the fee a tax rebater can charge to 15 per cent the government has forced firms that specialized in the field to pack up and move somewhere else, as indicated by a notable absence of ads for the service in the classified section of local newspapers.

Tindall says a few small bookkeeping firms here are still offering a rebate service at the 15 per cent fee, but that's beneficial for the community.

Trying to accommodate hearty appetites and heart ailments can be a problem for any cook, but help is on the way from the B.C. Heart Foundation.

The organization says it is compiling a cook book based on practical — and some exotic — recipes for those suffering from minor or major heart ailments.

It's also intended as a guide for "those who want to make sure they're treating their body well and filling it with the right kind of 'heart' fuel," says the foundation.

Victorians are invited to contribute their own favorite recipe or cookery idea, or "a bit of wit and wisdom that fits into the heart theme."

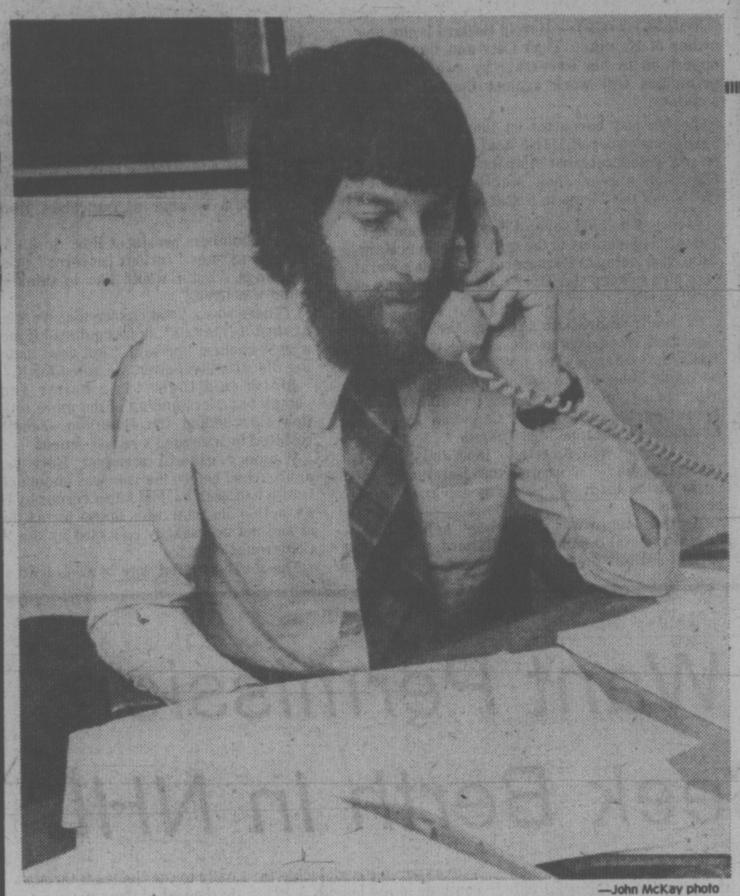

They can either mail the information to the B.C. Heart Foundation, 1008 Blanshard Street, Victoria, or call 382-4035.

For those males who believe that the way to get ahead is to get a body, Victoria may be lining up some shining (with body oil) examples to emulate.

Warren Langman, owner of the Victoria Health Club, says he is hoping to stage the Mr. North America contest in Victoria later this year.

If his negotiations are successful, the city will be invaded by pulsating pectorals and bionic biceps as body-building champions from many parts of the United States and Canada go through their posturing routines in search of he-man honors.

PETER JONES . . . a quiet compassion

THE RENTALSMAN

Threats to Life, Helping to Move All Part of Job

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Peter Jones has had his life threatened.

He has had to have people committed to the Eric Martin Institute.

At least six times he and a friend have helped move tenants who could not afford to do it by themselves.

Jones isn't a social worker or a policeman.

He's a rentalsman officer in Victoria and March 1 he and other staff members will mark the first anniversary of the official opening of the office here.

"Take, for instance, a couple with four children. The husband is unemployed and they can't afford to pay the rent," says Jones.

"The landlord can't afford to carry them. At that point we can refer them to Community Action for assistance in finding a place with a lower rent."

He cites the case of a couple having marital problems. One day there is a fight and the neighbors are disturbed.

"There are grounds for termination of tenancy — and a lot more hardship," he says.

In the first month of operation there were 1,588 phone calls, 72 landlords and 87 tenants were interviewed and there were 178 cases in the files.

In the first month of this year the phone calls rose to 2,777, the interviews to 418 and 377 cases were being processed.

The office's jurisdiction includes the whole of Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands.

Jones, who was a rentalsman officer in Vancouver before coming to Victoria, sees his main role as that of a mediator rather than decision-maker.

He says those seeking help from the rentalsman office range from tenants on a $30,000-a-year income to those forced to live on $2,000.

He estimates that 70 per cent of the problems he sees are mediated.

"The rentalsman is a fairly new concept for Canada," he says. "It's a very good attempt, a successful attempt, to assist people in sorting out their problems as fairly and quickly as possible."

He says other provinces, such as Alberta and Ontario, have examined the B.C. rentalsman department to determine whether it would be worthwhile for their areas.

★

In dealing with the problems, many of the social ills of society come to the surface, triggered by the high unemployment rate, marital problems and other tragedies.

"A lot of our problems are the result of social ills," Jones says. "A lot of the people come to us with a frustrated attitude. They don't know what their rights are and what is going to happen."

While preferring to mediate, there are times when Jones must act like a Solomon and make a decision. When this happens, he explains, there is bound to be some resentment by the side that lost.

When it can help, he enlists the services of Community Action, the Law Centre and other community agencies to help tackle the problems that are brought before him.

Jones says there is no serious shortage of housing for childless couples or single people, but for families with children the problem is compounded.

"One of the most controversial issues is when, under the Human Rights Act, you can discriminate against age — children. When you have children you may have problems finding a home," he adds, noting that many apartment buildings ban children.

While some of those against whom he has been forced to rule may not agree, Jones argues the rentalsman's office has improved the lot of thousands of British Columbians.

"One of the concepts was to take the problems out of the courts and into an administration department. The courts were being bogged down with landlord and tenant cases," he says.

"We have enough discretionary powers to deal on a humanitarian basis.

Suite Owners Hamstrung?

Condominium councils will be hamstrung by changes in the Strata Titles Act, the Greater Victoria Strata Corporation warned Thursday.

The association decided at a meeting Thursday night to press Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair for amendments to end what president L.W. Jones called abuses of the laws by developer-owners.

Also at month's end, changes in the Strata Titles Act, passed in September, will be proclaimed.

Some of the changes worry the association.

As an example, Jones said, one Victoria developer has sold only 40 of 55 condominium units in his building and has put the other 15 units up for rent.

Jones said this hamstrings the condominum council because, by law, it must have owners of 75 per cent of the condominium units present in order to pass any bylaws.

But the most that council can bring together is 73 per cent, 40 of the 55 units, and so the council could never pass a bylaw.

"This is a ridiculous situation," Jones said. "How can a council function if it can never pass any bylaws?"

Changes being proclaimed at month's end will not help, Jones said. Amendments will force owner-developers to state in advance how many units they plan to rent and for how long.

Jones said owners have indicated they will get around this requirement by selling their rights to a second party who will, in turn, rent out the condominiums. Jones said the legislation controls the original owner of the building but does not restrict a second party or company that purchases the rights to rent out condominiums.

Hospital Heads Huddle

Hospital administrators will meet with health ministry officials Tuesday to try and thrash out a solution to the acute bed shortage caused by the government's new long-term program.

Hospitals have been forced in recent weeks to house patients in corridors and storage areas because beds are being taken up by extended care patients.

Executive director of health programs, Dr. Chapin Key, said today he called the meeting.

"We want to solve some of the problems we see surfacing which, in some places, may be reaching a crisis situation," Key said.

He conceded that the government's new program has caused problems for hospitals like the Royal Jubilee Hospital which have large emergency departments.

Representatives from RJH, Victoria General Hospital, Vancouver General Hospital, St. Paul's Hospital, Royal Columbian Hospital and the B.C. Health Association, representing all hospitals in the province, will be at the meeting.

Also attending will be Isabel Kinnett, executive director for long-term care, Jack Bainbridge, associate deputy minister for long-term care, and Glen Wright, associate deputy minister for hospital programs.

Asked if he had any solutions to the bed shortage problem, Key said he does, but would prefer to have them first discussed at Tuesday's meeting.

"They might not be acceptable," he said.

No Motive Found In Slaying

Police are still without a motive today for the slaying Wednesday of a 20-year-old North Saanich man who collapsed in a friend's driveway a few minutes' walk from his home at 587 Birch.

Anyone who has information about the activities of Gerhardt Malcolm Kirmhse between 10:30 a.m. and noon that day is asked to contact Sidney RCMP. The number to call is 478-9721.

Kirmhse apparently was beaten or struck with a blunt weapon, possibly in a car, but managed to reach the residence of the acquaintance he had intended to visit at 11091 West Saanich.

He got to the door about 12:15 p.m. then slumped to the ground and was dead before he could get medical attention.

An inquest will open at 7:30 p.m. Monday in First Memorial chapel before coroner Edmond J. de St. Jorre.

Metal detecting equipment borrowed from the armed forces may be used to sweep areas north of Patricia Bay in the vicinity of Wain Road and West Saanich Road.

Premonition Nips Blaze?

Sunshine streaming through an upper floor window and reflected from a makeup mirror ignited clothing at the home of C. G. Reed, 345 Quebec, Thursday afternoon.

He said if his wife had not had a premonition that something was amiss, they might have returned home to find the apartment in flames. The Reeds had been shopping downtown and ordinarily would not have gone back to the apartment until later.

Reed said the article of clothing, of light material, was lying near the makeup mirror on a dressing table. When they first looked about the apartment they smelled what they thought was smoke from a garbage fire outside. However, it was wisps of smoke coming from the dressing table where the piece of clothing burst into flame as Reed went into the bedroom.

Deputy fire chief Mike Belton said the fire department was not called, but he could well believe that sunshine caused the fire. "We once had one from sunshine passing through a bottle of water that set fire to shingles. We didn't believe it until we set it up and it happened again," the deputy said.

Fire Hazard Posters Eyed

In a move to put the pressure on building owners who don't measure up to Victoria safety standards city council's finance committee Thursday approved a fire department proposal to post hazardous buildings.

Fire Chief Eric Simmons showed the committee a poster that he said should be placed in offending buildings either on the door or right next to stairs or elevators so that people using the building couldn't miss it.

The poster would feature the words "Fire Hazards" in large red type, under which the building's safety shortcomings would be listed.

Simmons said that at present there were 16 buildings in the city that deserved to be posted.

The finance committee approved the plan, but only after expressing some concern about the shock effect the poster would have.

Mayor Mike Young said he wondered about using the word "hazards".

"I don't want to unduly scare people, but on the other hand there are times when they should be — it's difficult," said Young.

$2,826 for Falling Fingernails

A Saanich woman whose natural fingernails fell off after treatments to extend them with false nails has been awarded $2,826 damages in county court.

Marcia Valerie Kory sued Western Nails 'N Lashes Studio Ltd., T. Dyson Holdings Ltd., and Victoria Studio 24 Holdings Ltd., all carrying on business under the firm name and style of Nails 'N Lashes Studio.

She sought damages arising from negligence against the defendants, who were said to have failed to exercise due care towards her in equipping her with false fingernails.

She went to a studio on Kingsway in Vancouver in 1975 and underwent the treatment, which consists of liquid acrylic plastic being applied to the roughened natural nails. When it is hardened and bonded to the natural nail, it is shaped to simulate a long natural nail and colored with ordinary nail lacquer.

Judge Montague Drake, in a written decision, said the process normally takes about two hours but this visit took four to five hours. Three or four weeks later she went to another studio on Bidwell in Vancouver and had repair and maintenance work done, he said.

Within a month, she visited a studio in Victoria.

The judge said she was by this time 'a bit fed up' having spent a good deal of money with the result that her nails 'looked bad' and her fingertips were painful.

There was a long session of work on her nails — perhaps as long as six hours — and her fingers felt very sore afterwards.

There were two more visits to the Victoria studio and on the last visit a natural nail fell off and it was noted that what remained was, in the plaintiff's words, "green and smelly."

Drake said it was surprising, in view of the evidence which suggested a degree of septicaemia, that she did not seek medical attention earlier. But she did seek attention shortly after the final visit.

"In the end, all her fingernails fell off," he said.

He said her failure to consult a doctor earlier may well have exacerbated her sufferings, which were acute and prolonged.

Drake said had ordinary competence been exercised by employees of the studios she would have been free from infection and consequent injury.

"I can come to no other conclusion, on a balance of the probabilities in the matter, but that these unfortunate occurrences were the result of a want of due skill and care on the part of persons employed by the various defendants," he said.

"If the plaintiff's fingernails, as was suggested, were abnormally sensitive this should have been apparent to the defendants, who must in any event take the plaintiff as they find her."

Harold Ballard Flashes His Winning Smile

Ballard Blessed By CFL

TORONTO (CP) — Harold Ballard is the new owner of Hamilton Tiger-Cats and figures the opposition to his ownership by two Hamilton politicians will work against them in future elections.

"They're just barnacles on the electors," the blusterous owner of Maple Leaf Gardens said of efforts by federal labor minister John Munro and Hamilton mayor Jack MacDonald to block the sale of the Ticats to Ballard.

Munro, who held several press conferences to voice his objections to the sale, represents Hamilton East riding in Parliament. He made several late bids to keep the Tiger-Cats in the hands of local owners.

"I really appreciate the way the people of Hamilton stood behind me all the way," said Ballard, Gardens owner and president of Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League, after being informed of the unanimous vote approving the sale at the Canadian Football League's annual meetings Thursday.

He said he had received "thousands, and I mean thousands" of names from Hamilton residents in the form of letters, by telegraph and petitions.

"I think Munro was the greatest help to me; Munro and MacDonald," said Ballard. "It (their opposition) was the turning point for me. I think they'll have a hell of a job winning their next elections."

The only other major concern was voiced by former Winnipeg Blue Bombers president Earle Hiebert, who attempted to drum up opposition after Ballard's comments about trying to do away with the gate-equalization payments.

The gate-equalization fund, in which the more prosperous clubs subsidize less fortunate teams, has kept a number of franchises from going under.

New Bombers president Ross Smith admitted harboring some "serious concerns" prior to the meetings, "but I would like to think that my mind was open."

"There was a good chance that we would vote against it (the sale), in fact quite a bit more than a 50-50 chance," he said. "But now, understanding the situation better, we voted for it."

Smith said there "is a better and more complete understanding of the more total situation surrounding the Hamilton scene" which resulted in Winnipeg's reassessment.

Winnipeg general manager Earl Lunsford, approached before the vote was announced, said Qmith had been backed into a corner by Hiebert, an action he said was taken by an individual and not necessarily endorsed by the Western Conference club.

The much-awaited vote by CFL teams on the transfer of ownership from Hamilton trucking magnate Mike DeGroote to Ballard was announced at a 5 p.m. news conference.

Smith was asked if he was concerned that Ballard, noted for his long memory when things go against him, might show any ill feelings at future meetings with the Winnipeg team.

"I think he can hand it out pretty well," Smith admitted. "If he has any animosity toward me, I think I'll find it out pretty quickly."

Ballard repeated earlier statements that he plans to press for addition of more seating at Ivor Wynne Stadium, the Ticats' 34,100-seat home park.

"Seats will be added if I have to do it myself," said Ballard. "I won't run after the taxpayers to pay for it. I also will have to look at ticket prices.

"We'll have a rough club like the people of Hamilton want. I don't expect to spend too much money but to get into the playoffs I will.

"I'm going to have an ambulance on each side of the field to carry off the others players."

Ballard, who confirmed his purchase price was $1.3 million, said he doesn't expect to make any money from the football club for at least two years. Why, then, did he buy it?

"I always wanted to own a football club," he said.

Jets Want Permission To Seek Berth In NHL

WINNIPEG (CP) — Almost since the birth of the World Hockey Association, Winnipeg Jets have been one of its most attractive and successful franchises.

With superstar Bobby Hull leading the way, the Jets played before many of the largest crowds in the league and were one of the best road attractions the WHA had.

The Jets went public nearly four years ago and became one of the few franchises to show an annual operating profit.

But, today, the Jets are on the verge of a financial collapse that might well spell the end of the WHA after six seasons.

At a meeting Thursday, the team's management committee outlined a proposal that will either put the team into the National Hockey League or spell the end of it as it now exists. It may continue to operate in the WHA if previous owners Ben Hatskin and Saul Simkin exercise their option to resume private ownership and decide to continue in the league.

The committee said the WHA is being asked for permission to pursue an NHL franchise for Winnipeg without legal repercussions or compensation payments.

Hatskin and Simkin are being asked to write off the remaining $1.2 million still owed them from the sale of the Jets.

If the league and the previous owners agree to those proposals, the Jets will then attempt to raise $400,000 locally to see the team through to the end of the season.

If either the league or the previous owners balk, the Jets will cease to operate publicly and the franchise will be folded and turned back over to Hatskin and Simkin.

Bob Graham, chairman of the board, told a news conference the club is not overly confident about the future of the WHA and Jack McKeag, team president, said there are three teams that likely will not be back next season, leaving only five.

If the Jets go, only four would be left.

"The problem concerns the longevity of the league," said Graham. "We're concerned the WHA may still be around, but as a minor league. The days of the WHA pretending to be a major league are perhaps over."

Houston Aeros are pursuing an NHL franchise and Edmonton Oilers are also highly interested in the NHL.

Indianapolis Racers and Cincinnati Stingers are in severe financial situations because of poor attendance.

The loss of the Jets, with their drawing power of Hull, Ulf Nilsson and Anders Hedberg, would almost certainly prompt the total collapse of the league.

The Jets are giving themselves 10 days to complete their latest plan. That deadline was set because that's how much time they have to respond to New York Rangers' offers for Hedberg and Nilsson.

If the Jets don't come within $20,000 of the Rangers' reported $475,000 a year each, the pair have the option to leave at the end of the season.

Advice to Canucks: Play More, Cry Less

Don Lever was on television Wednesday saying he didn't say what two newspapers said he said.

He'd never call his teammates on Vancouver Canucks gutless, he said, because he had too much respect for them. The problem, he suggested, was "the newspapers".

I have just read both newspapers and their accounts of a dressing room interview with Lever following an 8-3 loss in Detroit.

The Province quoted him thusly:

"There are 10 guys out there who are so gutless it's ridiculous. You don't have to mention their names. Everybody knows who they are."

The Sun's Arv Olson ran the following from Lever:

"There were at least 10 guys with no guts out there tonight and they should be ashamed of themselves."

But Lever now says he didn't call anybody gutless. Who is the poor hockey fan to believe?

If the newspapers are correct, Lever called 10 of his teammates gutless, then had a change of heart and found it easier to blame the papers than to admit he'd opened his mouth when he shouldn't have.

If Lever is correct, then two competing hockey writers decided independently to make up a statement from Lever, each opted for the word 'gutless', and each picked the arbitrary figure of 10.

Take your pick.

Not that it's a big deal. The Canucks have won five games in their last 26. If the team captain is wasting his time worrying about what he did or didn't say two days ago, it may give a clue to the problem.

Another clue is the speed and efficiency of the team's bush telegraph. Olson's story on the Detroit game appeared in Monday's paper, which doesn't even come out until 2 p.m. eastern time. Yet coach Orland Kurtenbach knew the contents well enough to give Olson a lengthy dressing down that night on the team's arrival in Washington, and to complain about the headline.

Again, a decision: Either we have a hell of a fast newsboy with a Sun route in Washington, or the coaching staff has its beady eyes on the reporters and its rabbit ears on the telephone. Who the hell's watching the hockey team?

No one plays the blame game as well as the Canucks. They've boycotted one radio post-game show because the man doing it says nasty things about the team on his editorials. They've blamed the home fans for not giving them the brand of support they feel they deserve. Now the newspapermen are at fault because they keep quoting the hockey players.

The sad part about this latest plea-copping is that it was done by the two men who warrant more respect than perhaps anyone else connected with the club.

Lever, the team captain, has been the epitome of guts. The injury that shattered his cheekbone should have kept him out far longer, but his pride drove him back. He has tried to make himself a leader, and driven no one harder than he's driven himself.

Even among those who may question some of his coaching theories, Kurtenbach generates enormous personal respect. He may not believe it but the media—almost to a man—are pulling for him and hoping that he makes it. They look at the talent that's been handed him and wonder how he or anyone could ever be expected to win with it—but they hope, because they admire the man.

But they've both come down with rabbit ears, It is a shame, and a waste.

* * *

For the record, chaps, I'd like to explain a few things about sports writers who follow hockey teams:

Contrary to what you might believe or prefer, a hockey reporter is not part of the team.

Newspapers spend large sums of money sending him on the road with you. He is there to write about what happens and/or might happen and file reports back to the people who pay your salary.

He has no axe to grind. He gets paid whether you go 80-0 or 0-80. He is not paid more for sensational stories than for ordinary stories.

He is not there to tear down— but he's not there to build up, either. He is there to report what's happening—on the ice, primarily, but off the ice, too, if it has any bearing on the plans or performance of the hockey team. It's his job.

I hope that helps, Don. There's just one thing I'd like to add—for you and for those 10 mysterious Canucks you either said or didn't say were gutless: Your job is to play hockey. No one is suggesting it isn't hard work. But on the average you make $90,000 per year for doing it, which is a hell of a lot more than is earned by the people who pay to watch you.

The next time you play at home, look up in those stands you find so inhospitable. You'll notice a lot of empty seats. There is a reason. The people are growing tired of you—tired of your losing, sure, but most of all tired of token effort.

JAPANESE DEFEAT OLYMPICS

BURNABY (CP) — An all-star men's university volleyball team from Japan used a quick attack and strong blocking to defeat British Columbia Olympics 15-4, 9-15, 15-7, 15-4 in an exhibition match in this Vancouver suburb Thursday night.

Olympics, B.C. senior champions and Canadian finalists last year, were the first club to win a game from the powerful Japanese side, which earlier on its tour downed University of Victoria and University of B.C.

Khalsa, Nooksak Move Up

Both Khalsa, which topped Division I in the regular season, and Nooksak, the Division II winner, were among the seven squads advancing to the Gold flight playoff during elimination rounds battles between the two divisions of the Victoria and District Senior "B" Volleyball League on Thursday.

Others advancing to the Gold flight were Namdor II, Great Pumpkin, Namdor I, Royal Roads and Mt. Douglas Grads. Dropping to the Silver flight were Multigrade, CFB Esquimalt, Spice, Zooid, Camosun College, Scorpions and Allenby-Ford.

Playoffs begin next Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in CFB Esquimalt snd Royal Roads gymnasiums.

Red Wings Find Respect

By The Canadian Press

Detroit Red Wings, the lowliest National Hockey League club in the 1976-77 season, have found new respect in the current campaign, thanks largely to first-round junior draft pick Dale McCourt.

Rookie McCourt scored on his first three shots Thursday night to pace the Red Wings to a 5-3 home-ice victory over Atlanta Flames, the Red Wings' 21st victory of the season. It gave them 50 points and, at this stage, a tie with Pittsburgh Penguins for the league's final wild-card playoff position.

While the accomplishment doubtless appears modest to many, it represents a distinct improvement for the Red Wings, who were 16-55-9 for 41 points last season.

In other games, New York Islanders edged Colorado Rockies 5-4, Buffalo Sabres blanked Los Angeles Kings 5-0 and Minnesota North Stars upset Philadelphia Flyers 4-0. (See summaries, standings page 29).

McCourt, a 21-year-old centre who was the first choice in the NHL draft last June, provided Detroit with a 2-0 first-period lead with goals at 2:59 and 13:22, the second score coming on a 50-foot shot on a power play while Atlanta defenceman Greg Fox served a hooking minor.

The Flames rallied with second-period goals by Guy Chouinard and Bill Clement, but McCourt then gave the Red Wings a lead they never relinquished, taking a pass from Paul Woods and beating Flames goalie Yves Belanger.

A's Trim Blues

Victoria Athletics held two-goal advantages at the end of both the first and second periods en route to a 6-4 decision over Chemainus Blues in South Island Big Six Hockey League play Thursday night at Pearkes Arena.

Ross Swanton set the pace for Athletics by scoring the only two goals in the first period. Danny Peck, Brian Hamilton, John Entzminger and Mark Purdy added single goals for Athletics, who were ahead 5-3 going into the third frame.

Rick Boyd (2), Greg Bush and Jim Luck replied for Blues.

Tag Crown Retained

Guy Mitchell and John Quinn downed The Avenger and Wild Don Wayt on a disqualification in the feature tag team championship match of a professional wrestling card Thursday night at Memorial Arena.

However, since the decision was by disqualification, The Avenger and Wayt retained their title.

In other bouts, Igor Volkoff downed The Outlaw, Gama Singh outgrappled Sandor Novack, Gary Young downed The General by disqualification and Mike Hammer and Eric Froelich battled to a draw.

Reynolds Rolls Along

Reynolds Roadrunners, who came up with a 13-0 record in regular-season Greater Victoria High School Girls' Basketball League play, kept right on rolling Thursday night during opening games of the Lower Island championship tournament at Victoria High School.

Roadrunners had little difficulty downing Esquimalt 56-23 while Mt. Douglas Rambiers defeated Spectrum 71-40, Parkland tripped Belmont 47-37 and Victoria crushed Oak Bay, 66-28.

Elaine Harris sank 16 points to lead the Reynolds' attack while Anna Shotton was high for Esquimalt with nine.

Mt. Douglas was led by a 15-point production from Donna Braden and Heather Boyd had the same number for Spectrum.

Stasia Gallagher dunked 23 points to spark the Parkland offence while Bobbie Chalmers and Lori Jackson each canned 12 for Belmont.

Victoria's Sandy Lewis had 21 points and Tricia Bell hit for 12 to top Oak Bay.

The tournament continues today at Mt. Douglas, starting at 4, and resumes at 5 p.m. Saturday at Reynolds. The final is scheduled for 8.

The top five teams from the tourney advance to the Island championship playoff Feb.23-25 in Courtenay.

In Greater Victoria Boys' League play, Belmont Braves thumped Esquimalt Dockers 78-55 to pad a lead in the "A" Division and Oak Bay Bays bounced Parkland Panthers 79-46 to stay ahead in the "B" Division.

Tom Raine set the pace for Braves, who are now 8-1, with 12 points. Bill Barber matched that total for Dockers.

Bays, unbeaten in 10 starts, were led by a 26-point effort from Wayne Andrews.

Akamina-Kishinena Deserves Park Status

OUTDOORS

Some rambling notes along the trail:

This writer hopes the provincial environment and land use committee looking into the disposition of the Akamina-Kishinena Valley in southeastern British Columbia reaches a decision to set the area aside as a class "A" park . . . Various government agencies and environmental groups in both Canada and the United States have asked for just such a move because of the rare wilderness aspects of the region . . . The valley, adjacent to Waterton Lakes National Park in Alberta and Glacier National Park in Montana, was set aside as a recreational reserve by the provincial government in the 1950s . . . Now it appears the logging and mining industries are interested in exploiting the valley and the wilderness values which make such areas increasingly rare and valuable in this age of high-pressure living will be lost for all time.

Some people in Port Alberni are becoming concerned over the increasing number of commercial prawn fishing boats in Alberni Inlet . . . Over the past three years the pressure has increased tremendously right from Port Alberni to about 25 miles down the Inlet . . . One report on the situation likened the daily early-morning exodus of boats to the armada that assembled for Dieppe . . . Each boat is laying out between 100 and 200 traps . . . This writer hopes federal fisheries is keeping close tabs on the picture . . . Remember how the herring population crashed prior to a ban on commercial fishing which could only recently be lifted?

Lake fertilization under the federal-provincial salmonid enhancement program appears to be generating benefits for recreational as well as commercial fishermen . . . The concept of increasing the nutrition of lakes through artificial fertilization has proven itself in Great Central Lake, where the sockeye salmon populations have been enhanced . . . Now it appears the process is helping increase the average size of kokanee (land-locked sockeye) in Mohun Lake near Campbell River . . . After one year of fertilization under a joint venture between the federal Fisheries Research Board and the provincial fish and wildlife branch, the kokanee in Mohun have increased in average size from six to eight inches . . . This means recreational anglers are more likely to keep their kokanee catches and take a little pressure of the cuttroat trout population . . . Anglers spent about 10,000 hours fishing Mohun Lake in 1976 and the same amount of time in 1977 . . . Each year they caught about 8,000 fish, of which 30 per cent were kokanee . . . After two to three more years of fertilization, the benefits in terms of increased size and survival rates should more than offset the cost of the experiment.

Nelles Run Scheduled Saturday

Competitors in the annual Admiral Nelles cross-country race will be shooting at two records when the gruelling 6,080-metre event gets underway Saturday at 2 p.m. on the Royal Roads Military College course.

During the 1977 event, Tom Griffin of Victoria Mercuries set a course record of 18 minutes, 57 seconds and Douglas Poucher of Royal Roads established the military record of 20: 42.

A total of 93 teams competed last year, including the Victoria Flying "Y", Victoria Mercuries, Vancouver Optimist Club and the Vancouver Roadrunners.

A pre-race briefing will be held for all team coaches or captains at 1 p.m. in the Cadet's Social Club.

Carmichael, Horrigan Hold Final Cards

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

Rinks skipped by Gordon Carmichael of Victoria Curling Club and Tim Horrigan of the Racquet Club will carry the final colors for our town and Vancouver Island into the eight-rink, double-knockout British Columbia mixed playoffs at Nelson beginning tonight.

All the other hopefuls have been swept aside.

Last weekend, Horrigan, Steve Skillings and Keith Dagg were among the also-rans as veteran Bernie Sparkes, 39, was cruising to his fifth Pacific Coast Curling Association championship, his third as a skip. Sparkes has since gone on to defeat his former third, Bert Gretzinger, to win the B.C. title and should prove a worthy representative in the national championship at Vancouver's Pacific Coliseum, March 5-11.

It was nip and tuck against Gretzinger, Sparkes getting the breaks he needed with three misses in the 10th end of the third game. Until then, it appeared the championship had been slipping away as Gretzinger's crew peeled off everything that Sparkes' group threw. Bernie admitted afterwards he was fortunate.

Before that Sparkes had made a bridesmaid out of Gary Sigurdson in the PCCA final for the third time. This one was noteworthy because actually Sparkes hadn't beaten Sigurdson in the last two years, was 0-3 against him this season and, on the Wednesday preceding the playoff, Sigurdson had trimmed Sparkes 8-3 in Super League play.

But in the PCCA final, it was all Sparkes. Or as Sigurdson said afterwards: "When I got behind early, I knew it would be tough. You can come back against the rest, but you don't come back against Bernie."

The Brier trip will be the ninth for Sparkes. Garnet Campbell holds the record with 10 appearances in the national final.

★ ★ ★

Keith Dagg of Victoria Club was clearly the best of the three Victoria rinks and it was only by the narrowest of margins that he was prevented from a second chance at Sparkes by Sigurdson. Dagg's comeback should be well launched by that effort.

Incidentally, this year's PCCA playdown probably marks the end of the Sigurdson rink as presently constituted. Dale Walker has already moved to the Squamish area and it seems unlikely he would make the long haul to Cloverdale to continue the association.

Ooops! Mrs. C. Kelly of Esquimalt is in trouble. It seems the "D" Event results of the Valentine bonspiel somehow got misplaced and went unprinted; she got blamed and wondered if the media could get her off the hook she shouldn't have been on in the first place. No problem. Thie missing prizewinners are rinks skipped by 1. Shirley Riches (Onalea Crothers, Alma Dallin, Pat Clement) of Esquimalt; 2. P. McConnell (Pat Lund, J. McClosky, D. Caldwell) of North Shore; 3. Muriel Lowry (Moe Tarrant, Jane Kelly, Joan Fifield) of Esquimalt; and 4. Marge Campbell (M. Barr, D. Burns, Marion Barber) of Esquimalt.

Locally the Ladies Interclub is on next week as is the Silver Anniversary Ladies at Victoria Club, Feb. 23-26.

The final major men's event of the season, the B.C. Super League championship will be held at the Racquet Club, Feb. 25-26. It will be a double-knockout event, featuring $3,000 in prize money with $1,500 to the winning rink.

Among the entries expected from the mainland are Roy Vinthers, the 1976 Brier rep; Jim Armstrong, the B.C. champ in '74; the Giles brothers, Guy Lizzee and Gerry Martin. Efforts are also being made to have Sparkes attend if possible. He may be able to use the event as a tune-up for the nationals.

Gorman Gets New Contract

SEATTLE (AP) — Lou Gorman, director of baseball operations for Seattle Mariners, was given a new three-year contract and a salary increase, a spokesman for the American League team has confirmed.

"Gorman's performance has been outstanding and the Mariners feel he should be rewarded with this new contract," said Dick Vertlieb, the team'sexecutive-director.

Gorman came to the Mariners in 1976, after serving with Kansas City Royals since 1969.

Austin Rink In Nationals

A rink skipped by Dick Austin of Victoria has qualified for the men's Canadian Firefighters curling championship at Edmonton in April.

Austin, the president of Victoria Curling Club, skipped his foursome of third Al Beasley, second Ray Burley and lead Jerry Lister to eight straight victories and the the B.C. championship at Trail this week defeating Al Heath of Burnaby 10-4 in final on Thursday. It is the second time that Austin has made it to the final. In 1974, he had Beasley, Lister and Ian Hooey with him at Thunder Bay.

Meanwhile, at New Westminster, The Doris Bueckert rink of Prince George, which had clinched the B.C. senior women's championship earlier, finished out the eight-rink, round-robin tournament on a losing note, dropping a 9-5 decision to Victoria's Elin Petch. It was Bueckert's only defeat and the third win for Petch who finished at 3-4. Runner-up to Bueckert was Carol Trueman of Vancouver Arbutus with a 5-2 mark.

Bueckert will compete in the Canadian championship at St. John's, Newfoundland, next month.

★ ★ ★

In Vancouver, the Elizabeth Hollands rink of Duncan lost its first two games in he junior women's championships.

Bye bye winter — hello spring!
My baby's grown like anything.
She doesn't fit inside her crib.
(She'll soon be into women's lib)
We've baby-bunting bags and toys
That would do for other girls and boys.
There's a buggy and a sweet car bed
(We need a tricycle now instead)

I'll "kill two birds with just one stone"
By picking up the telephone
And advertising what we've got (Fifty dollars takes the lot)
Then I'll cast my searching eye
Over the other ads and maybe buy
My growing girl a good used trike —
Re-cycling money's what I like!

Morgan Has Lead in L.A.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A bunched field in the $200,000 Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open golf tournament set sights today on an optometrist who leads his closest competitors by two strokes.

Dr. Gil Morgan, who has postponed a career of looking into eyes to look down the fairways, fired a five-under-par 66 in Thursday's opening round tournament and says it might be nine years or so before he stops playing competitive golf.

The 31-year-old eye doctor from Wewoka, Okla., shot seven birdies with putts of up to 30 feet to lead 146 rivals in the quest for a $40,000 winner's purse in this 72-hole event at the Riviera Country Club.

Dr. Morgan, winner of the B.C. Open at Endicott, N.Y., last year, banked $104,817 in tournament earnings in 1977 and admits that's more than he would make any of his first few years as an eye doctor.

"I think I'll continue playing golf until I'm 40 or until I'm not competitive," he said.

On the current situation, he said: "I think this is a course, if conditions stay the same, where it won't take real low numbers to win. After winning last year, I've set my goal on winning multiple tournaments."

He faces tough competition here. Deadlocked at 68 after the first round were Danny Edwards and Forrest Fezler with five more at 69, another five at 70 and yet another five at 71.

A dozen were at 72, including Jack Nicklaus, Billy Casper and last year's Los Angeles winner, Tom Purtzer, plus Bill Rogers, who captured the Bob Hope tournament just last week.

Winds ranged up to 35 miles an hour for the opening round although skies were sunny and the 7,029-yard Riviera course was drying out from the rains of recent weeks.

"It will get faster as the days go by." Dr. Morgan commented.

Unknown Aussie Leading But Arnold Palmer Falters

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Vaughan Somers, a little-known player from the Australian state of Queensland, blitzed his way to the lead in the $50,000 Victorian Open today with a five-under-par 67.

Palmer, looking tired, shot a par-72 to add to his opening round of 73 Thursday, putting him eight strokes behind the leader.

Extra Attacker Pays Off For Trios

Gary Carruthers scored at 19:15 of the final period Thursday to give Oak Bay Trios a 2-2 tie with Saanich Braves in a Patterson Division game of the South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League at Oak Bay Recreation Centre.

Rob Wilson scored the other goal for Oak Bay, which led 1-0 at the end of both the first and second periods. Ed Beauchemin and Tracy Patterson replied for Braves.

The result gives Saanich (6-2-2) a one-point edge over runner-up Fuller Lake Flyers (6-2-1) while Oak Bay (4-5-1) is third.

Ready Soon: A Quarter Tonner Designed For A World Event

A potential winner in three-quarter ton competition is being built at Maple Bay Marina near Duncan by Finn and Hazel Nielsen.

The Nielsens, well-known to Juan de Fuca racers for their quarter-tonner Fred, decided to build Riotous Assembly when they heard the three-quarter ton world championships will be hosted by the Royal Victoria Yacht Club this year. The championships will be sailed from May 30 to June 12.

Riotous Assembly is off the drawing board of New Zealand designer Paul Whiting, whose Magic Bus did so well in the 1977 championships held in Texas.

She's light, weighing in at less than 6,000 pounds, and has cedar planking and decks with a daggerboard in an aluminum box.

Her sails have been ordered from New Zealand.

A good sea boat, she has an 11 foot, six-inch beam and is 34 feet four inches over-all.

She is due to be launched March 11 and you can bet local sailors will be keeping an eye on her during her working-up trials.

The RVYC has another long-distance race on Sunday, starting in the vicinity of Flower Island in Cadboro Bay. Some of the boats taking part were out last Sunday when a 45-boat fleet competed in the Turkey Head Sailing Association's two races off Oak Bay.

Jack Foster's Sly Fox won both sailouts, which is not surprising when we hear veteran competitor Bob Grundison was aboard.

AROUND OUR SHORES

The second time around she was followed by Kila Kila, Danish Pastry, Drambuie, Sunshine, Umpka, Walter Roots's Morning Calm, Freeway, Ted Trenholme's Impatience and Minstrel.

Eight Crown 23s raced one-design in the two events. Top boats in the first race were Jack Gilbert's Koliloa, Mike Balderstone's Menos, Sandy MacMillan's Ambergreen and Dennis Robinson's Hobo. The next time it was Menos, followed by Ambergreen and Bob Tubman's Banshee.

* * *

RVYC's Catalina 27 fleet have two races on Saturday, beginning at 10 a.m. while the club's Laser sailors will have series racing beginning at 1:30 p.m. Dave Teece won the first of three races sailed last Saturday, edging out Dave Richardson and Doug Gray. Top three sailors in the other two races were Dave Richardson, Doug and Dave Teece, in that order.

The club's Cal 20 fleet are also racing one-design this year. Top boats in the last race were Frank Cushion's Por Gusto, Peter Fisher's Klahanie, Tony Marshall and Brian Waddingham's Sunbeam, Harry Marshall's Tongariro, Ward Palmer's Calindigo and John Martin's Refuge.

* * *

Fifty-six boats were on the line Saturday when the Canoe Bay Sailing Club raced a six-miler in waters off Sidney, the over-all winner being Gordie Inglis' Water Melon.

After her came Phil Samson's Aquae Sulis, Roy Hingley's Romada, Daryl Foster's Tzonqua, Holger Brix's Caliente, Willi Fahning's Dominique, Roger Vale's Temenos, Don Wilson's Menehune, Roy Shepherd's Lorikeet and Bea Richmond's Lunar Wind.

The club will have the first of its 10½-mile Sidney Channel races on Sunday. The race gets under way at 9:30 a.m.

Over in Esquimalt Harbor, Laser sailors of the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, will have series racing, starting at 1 p.m.

The Victoria Canoe Club has another sortie on Sunday, this time around Matheson Lake. Members should meet there at 1:30 p.m.

BEARS SIGN NEILL ARMSTRONG

CHICAGO (AP) — Neill Armstrong, who spent six seasons as head coach with Edmonton Eskimos of the Canadian Football League, was named to the same post Thursday night with Chicago Bears of the National Football League.

Armstrong, defensive coordinator for Minnesota Vikings the last eight seasons, becomes the ninth head coach of the Bears and replaces Jack Pardee, who left the team last month to become head coach with Washington Redskins.

Armstrong, 51, is a 13-year NFL veteran as a player and assistant coach. He played with Oklahoma State when the team won 21 consecutive games from 1947 through 1951 and was a member of Philadelphia Eagles as a receiver and a defensive back.

He was an assistant coach from 1962-1963 with Houston Oilers before taking the head coaching job with the Eskimos in 1964, replacing Eagle Keys.

Under Armstrong, the Eskimos made the playoffs four out of six years, but failed to reach the Western Conference final.

Hot Kebasas Next for Causeway

Hot sausages will hit the street this summer — but only because ice-cream paved the way.

Members of city council's finance committee looked a little askance Thursday when they received an application to allow the selling of hot kebasa sausages from a portable vending cart on the causeway.

The committee gave approval, but only after expressing some misgivings about what it all might lead to.

In her application Laura Andraski said she'd dress in attire appropriate to Captain Cook festivities, but that patriotic gesture didn't hit a responsive note with the committee.

What swayed aldermen was the fact that last year they gave permission for a vendor to sell ice-cream on the causeway.

"I think we have opened the door and it would be very difficult for us to say no," said Ald. Robin Blencoe in supporting Tindall's position.

Committee chairman Ald. Murray Glazier voiced some reservations, however, saying that "ice-cream is one thing . . . but if you start selling sausages why not lunches or a full course meal?"

Mayor Mike Young came to the aid of sausage lovers, however, saying that "I personally prefer kebasa to ice-cream."

After the finance committee gave the nod to Andraski's application Tindall warned that soon there would be another request forthcoming — this one asking for permission to sell frozen yogurt on a stick.

Phone Switch

The telephone exchange in the Gordon Head area will undergo a further expansion next year and should be fully automated by early 1980, a spokesman for B.C. Telephone said Thursday.

Bert Parker, customer service manager for Victoria, said the additional lines into the area will have the prefix 721.

Parker said the 721 exchange is within the Greater Victoria toll free calling area.

CNIB BOYCOTT NEAR AN END?

The Telecommunications Workers Union will recommend to its members Sunday that they end their boycott of a cafeteria operated by the Canadian National Institute for the Blind (CNIB) in the main Victoria B.C. Telephone Co. building here.

Union members have been boycotting the cafeteria because it did not shut down during the recent 81-day B.C. Tel strike-lockout which ended Monday.

Richard Belfit, spokesman for the TWU, said the union has come to an understanding with the CNIB.

He said the CNIB agreed to compensate an employee who was left without work after refusing to cross the picket line, and to allow her to return to work.

SENIORS UNIT URGED

The Royal Jubilee Hospital is proposing a special geriatric assessment centre for the capital region.

The hospital notes in a report Victoria has a higher proportion of the elderly (16 per cent) than any other part of Canada (10 per cent).

"The operation of a geriatric unit in conjunction with an acute-care hospital has much to commend it and has proven highly successful in other centres," the report says.

It says the centre could also serve as a day hospital for the elderly and would be a base for staff who would follow the patient's progress in his own home or a long-term care facility in the region.

Three Loot Grocery Store

Saanich police are looking for a white and yellow van to lead them to three youthful burglars who took a quantity of goods from a Burnside grocery early today.

Three youths were seen by a passerby emerging from the Capital Market, 50 West Burnside, at 5:36 a.m., loading pots, pans and food into a newer model yellow Volkswagen van with white top.

When they realized they had been spotted, the three drove off.

Labor Disputes At 6-Year Low

Man-days lost in B.C. in 1977 because of labor disputes reached the lowest level since 1971, the ministry of labor said Thursday.

Last year, there were 443,668 man-days lost because of labor disputes.

The ministry said preliminary statistics indicate that the lost man-days resulted from 60 disputes involving 31,545 workers of the province's workforce of 974,000.

In its monthly labor research bulletin, the ministry said that 1977 was about 70 per cent less than the 1.47 million man-days lost in 1976.

It said that of the 1977 total, 138,138 man-days were lost in disputes falling under provincial jurisdiction, and 305,530 man-days were lost in disputes under federal jurisdiction.

There were 207,492 man-days were lost in December.

In 1976, 18,111 man-days were lost in the federal field, while 1.45 million were lost under provincial jurisdiction.

The 1971 total was 276,999 man-days lost. Prior to that, the most recent low was in 1963 when 24,056 man-days were lost.

The ministry noted that 45.1 per cent of the province's workforce belonged to unions last year, compared with 44.9 per cent in 1976. Greatest relative union strength was 1958 when 55.4 per cent of workers were organized.

UVIC OFFER NOT RETURNED

An application is expected to be submitted soon to Saanich council for permission to subdivide a 10-acre tract of land in Mystic Vale at Cadboro Bay following the University of Victoria's failure to buy the property from owners Robert and Byron Price of Belvedere Estates.

Floyd Fairclough, director of university property development, said no reply to a cash offer had been received from the owners when the deadline expired.

He said the higher of two appraisals conducted by Victoria firms was presented to the owners.

"They didn't even reply to our offer," he said. "But we are still hoping to negotiate a settlement . . . we've not given up on acquiring the land."

The university has been trying for years to buy the property for parkland.

PILGRIMS DROWN

ALLAHABAD, India (Reuter) — Fifty-three Hindu pilgrims, returning from a bath in the Ganges River, were killed and 12 injured when their bus plunged into a river, 100 kilometres from this northern Indian city.

Pinball Control Legal

A downtown pinball arcade which challenged a city bylaw saying it would finish its business has lost its court case against city hall.

In a written judgment handed down Thursday, Mr. Justice J.G. Ruttan of B.C. Supreme Court said there was no evidence of a direct or indirect prohibition "under the guise of regulation" to prevent the operation of the Marble Machine arcade, 648 Yates, operated by Ace Vending Ltd.

The arcade claimed that a city bylaw passed last fall, limiting amusement establishments to two pinball machines and two of the amusement type, was illegal, discriminatory and beyond council's powers. The arcade has about 30 machines and opened more than a year ago.

Ruttan said it was argued that to limit the operation to four machines was tantamount to a prohibition "but there was no evidence before the council or introduced in court beyond the bare assertion that he would be affected badly, economically."

"There was a current belief that some such regulation should come in as there had been complaints and some comment at least from the police department. Police reports and complaints by parents were quite relevant to be considered. Such speedy action is not evidence of bad faith.

"In the absence of evidence to the contrary, I can only conclude that the motives of the councillors were entirely in the interests of the community at large and should not be interfered with."

The city was represented in court by Jakob de Villiers. Scott Johnson appeared for Ace Vending.

CBC to Show Plans At Victoria Hearing

Victorians will have their first look at detailed plans for the CBC's new broadcast centre on Blanshard Street when the Canadian Radio-telecommunications Commission opens a hearing in the Royal Oak Inn at 9 a.m. Tuesday.

CBC regional director Len Lauk said an architect's model will be displayed, and both he and representatives of the design firm will attend the hearing, designed to update the commission on the CBC plan to open a $7 million radio-television studio in the 2100 block at Kings.

Lauk said the new facilities, originally scheduled to go into operation this year, will be about another year in coming and it is hoped the CRTC will recognize the reasons for delay in using the broadcast licence already granted.

He said he is partly to blame because he wanted to be sure the new building was suitable for its purpose and its surroundings, which he considers vital in a land use and site-conscious city.

Tenders will be opened the same morning in Montreal for subcontracting phases of the new building, with general contracting bids to be opened Feb. 23.

Lauk said the original estimate of $7 million included all broadcast equipment and not just the construction costs. He said he could not make a current estimate of the development cost.

Earlier, it had been suggested the CBC was complying with government spending cutbacks in halting or delaying the new building, but Lauk denied this.

SUICIDES INCREASE

There were 450 suicides in B.C. in 1977, an increase of 11 compared with the previous year, a ministry of health official said Thursday.

Ken Watt, a research officer with the division of vital statistics, said there were 412 suicides in the province in 1975.

School Staff Cutbacks Necessary - Stables

Reductions this year by the Greater Victoria school board in construction, maintenance staff and teachers were neccessary, superintendent Allan Stables said Thursday.

Trustees had no choice in the face of declining enrolment but to cut 60 teachers and 42 maintenance and clerical positions from the district payroll, he told the Rotary Club during a noon meeting at the Empress Hotel.

Stables said it was either that or increase the budget by between 15 and 20 per cent.

Even though student population is dropping, the costs of education supplies and salaries have gone up and a six per cent salary raise this year resulted in a $2.4 million budget increase before the board considered any other items, according to Stables.

The district curriculum has been adrift for the last 12 years on a wave of freedom, Stables said.

"From the early '60s to the mid-'70s it was do your own thing," he said. "We had courses like window box gardening and egg dropping from the window.".

And the school board faces significant problems as a result, he said.

It must put respect for excellence and integrity into the system, Stables said.

Bride Still Picks Elegant Gown

By JUDY CREIGHTON
CP Family Editor

TORONTO (CP) — Inflation and a sluggish economy haven't affected he Canadian marriage business, say those in the thick of it.

Although families planning weddings this spring and summer may decide to cut down on the number of guests because food and catering costs are higher, the trend toward more formal and elaborate ceremonies is continuing.

Mildred Colman, a Toronto bridal and wedding consultant, said in an interview that traditions die hard and the greyer the economic outlook, the more people try to make their children's wedding a joyous and sometimes extravagant day.

"We've noticed that the groom's parents are participating in weddings," said Mrs. Colman. "They help the bride's parents with the costs by splitting the bill. If both families are in harmony, this works very well."

Mrs. Colman said that "as liberated as many young women are today" they still want to have their day they've dreamed about — their wedding."

Toronto bridal couturier Yeteve Rosen concurs. She is working at least 50 hours a week designing and preparing gowns and said the trend in bridal gowns is "incredibly elaborate and heralds a return to the days of elegance and grace."

Mrs. Rosen said she is getting more requests for long, flowing veils, most of which can be worn over the face for the ceremony.

On the average, brides were willing to spend up to $500 on the gown.

Mrs. Rosen said that many brides are now back to buying their attendants' gowns so they can not only have control over the design and color but also are able to give it to the bridesmaids as a gift.

"A typical bridal attendant's dress runs from $65 to $80," she said. "The average bridal party now has up to four bridesmaids."

Andy Posch, proprietor of the Rosedale Flower and Gift Boutique in Toronto, said that so far as flowers for weddings are concerned, "people want soft and elegant bouquets rather than the stiff, old-fashioned floral arrangements of the past."

"The favorite of most brides this year is a combination of rosebuds and daisies or for the more exotic, orchids and tropical flowers."

Posch said the average bride's bouquet costs about $45 to $60 and her attendants' $25.

"We have most clients taking the flowers used in the church ceremony to the reception," he said. "The bride's bouquet is used as a centrepiece at the head table."

The trend away from traditional black for the groom and the groomsmen is growing, said Blackie Black, a Vancouver supplier of men's formal wear.

"Those young fellows who graduated from high school in colorful tuxedos say they'd like to get married in something other than basic black."

This spring and summer, grooms will be wearing formal attire in textures of silk shantung, polyester or gabardine in a variety of colors including bamboo beige, canton blue, jade green, rice white and rust.

Prize Dog Found

LONDON (AP) — Tyegarth Bottoms Up, a prize boxer that disappeared Friday from the Crufts Dog Show in the Olympia Music Hall, was found unharmed in a kennel for stray animals. Owner Sheila Cartwright said she took a "shot in the dark" and went to the Battersea Dogs Home on Monday. The police had found the 13-month-old bitch near the Thames River without a collar.

Wife Not Dead, Sues

MONTREAL (CP) — A Montreal man who received condolences from a hospital here on the death of his wife is suing the hospital for $100,000 after finding his wife still alive.

Fernand Demers received a sympathy letter in September, signed by two priests on behalf of a suburban Verdun hospital, saying his wife had died four days before. He phoned several funeral parlors and the city morgue trying to locate his wife's body.

Finally he went to the hospital where his wife had been a patient for four months and to his "great surprise," met her in one of the corridors.

His suit, filed Wednesday, alleges that he suffered shock from receiving the sympathy letter and that his dignity was seriously damaged by the affair.

Good Samaritan Shames a Cynic

DEAR ABBY: To all those cynics who say that everyone is out for himself, I would like to relate the following incident:

Over the Thanksgiving holiday I visited some out-of-state friends. At the airport for my flight home, the limousine driver dropped me off at the wrong airline entrance, which was a long walk from the right airline. I had three heavy suitcases and I was getting very, very tired. I paused for a moment to adjust my suitcases when a young many about my age (27 or 28) came along, took the two heaviest ones and asked, "Where to?"

I told him, but in my cynical heart, Abby, I kept praying that he didn't run off with my suitcases.

We chatted as we walked, and he told me that in his spare time he comes to the airport just to help people. I must admit that I became a bit suspicious. After all, how many people do you find today who do that kind of thing?

When we reached my gate, he set my suitcases down, and said cheerily, "Have a nice flight." Then he quickly walked off before I even had the time to say, "Thank you."

When it finally dawned on me that all this fellow wanted was to help people, I felt ashamed of myself for being suspicious.

Abby, I'm not so naive as to think that everyone who does something for others does it out of the goodness of his heart, but it's nice to know that there are still some people in the world who aren't out only for themselves.

MANCHESTER

DEAR MANCHESTER: I don't want to discourage good deeds, but Good Smaritans who make a habit of hanging around airports to "help" people could find themselves in trouble.

For example, say some grateful traveler forces a dollar or two on Good Smaritan, he (Good Sam) is in violation of working at the airport without a licence or union membership, for which skycaps pay a pretty penny. Also, whether a Good Samaritan helps people for fun or profit, in effect he's competing with those who "help" people for a living.

DEAR ABBY: That letter signed HAD ENOUGH sent my blood pressure right through the ceiling.

HAD ENOUGH complained because after dinner all the men (and a few of the women) retired to the living room while the rest of the women got busy clearing the table and doing the dishes.

Well, I too, have "had enough." I'm sick and tired of going to family gatherings (it's not even MY family — they belong to my husband), and just because I'm a woman, I'm expected to clean up.

I have had it up to here with the women rushing around waiting on the men and cleaning up while the men go into the living room to shoot the breeze or watch a game on TV.

Does a deep voice and a beard excuse a person from kitchen duty? Today, when both men and women work outside the home, the old saying "A woman's place is in the kitchen" is stupid, unfair and out of date.

LIBBY.

DEAR LIBBY: (Is that short for "liberated"?) I'm with you. For a letter from another woman who has also "had enough" — but for an entirely different reason — read on:

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the wife who complained because some of the wives at the family Christmas dinner didn't help with the dishes, and for that reason she dreaded the large family dinners: I feel sorry for her.

On Christmas Day there are many wives who are without family, food and even heat in the house.

There are wives whose husbands are drunk, unemployed or mentally unstable. Some men beat their wives and children, and turn Christmas into a day of sorrow and terror. There are wives whose husbands are deceased prematurely, or whose children are sick, handicapped or runaways.

There are wives who know that their husband (or a child) is terminally ill and will never see another Christmas.

So if HAD ENOUGH dreads Christmas because she will have to clean up without the assistance from a couple of wives, she will never appreciate the fact that Christmas is a time for loving, forgiving and celebrating the birth of Christ.

ALSO HAD ENOUGH.

Jackie Starts A New Job

NEW YORK (AP) — Jacqueline Onassis, who quit her job at Viking Press because of a novel that depicted Senator Edward Kennedy as U.S. president and the target of an assassination plot, has taken a job at Doubleday and Co. as an associate editor.

Sam Vaughan, vice-president and publisher of Doubleday, confirmed today that Mrs. Onassis began work this week. He declined to disclose her salary.

"We felt she's a good editor," Vaughan said when asked why Mrs. Onassis was hired.

Mrs. Onassis worked as a consultant-editor for two years for Viking before she resigned in October, citing her objection to the novel Shall We Tell The President, by Jeffrey Archer, which Viking published. The novel puts the last of the Kennedy brothers into the White House in 1980 and tells of a plot to kill him.

The New York Post reported that Mrs. Onassis brought Doubleday a manuscript she first saw and liked while working at Viking. The book was written by Dr. Stephen Appelbaum, a psychoanalyst at the Menninger Clinic in Topeka, Kan., and examines new therapies, the newspaper said.

Vaughan said Mrs. Onassis has "a number of books she's interested in."

An Answer to Junk Snacks

Tired of snacking on plastic-wrapped nutritional disasters? Weary of paying outrageous prices for potato chips and pretzels? If so, then do what Mother reader Joan Dickenson did and make these Snackin' Crackers!

My family used to beg me to bring home salty snacks from the grocery store, but I didn't like the idea of feasting on nutritionally empty foods. So, I did some experimentation in my kitchen and came up with some crackers that are inexpensive, nutritious, easy to make and my family loves them!

SNACKIN' CRACKERS

- 2 cups whole wheat flour
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ cup sesame seeds
- ¼ cup raw wheat germ
- ¼ cup vegetable oil
- ½ cup cold water
- Water (amount varies).

Blend together the first four ingredients. Then add the oil and mix well with a fork. Pour in the cold water, mix and continue to add water a tablespoon at a time until the dough is soft and workable. (Flours very in their ability to absorb moisture, so I can't tell you how much more water to use.)

Turn the dough out onto a floured board and knead it for at least 10 minutes (the longer the better).

Pull off a golf ball-sized lump of dough and roll it into a ball. Then — using a floured rolling pin — roll the dough out until it's cardboard thin . . . as thin as it will get without tearing. You should now have cracker that's about 5 inches in diameter. Repeat this procedure until you have used all the dough.

Next, heat an ungreased cast iron skillet as hot as you can get it. Bake each cracker in the skillet until it's light brown on the bottom. The flip it over and just barely brown the other side. Allow the crackers to cool thoroughly on a towel before storing them in an airtight container. You can vary this basic recipe in dozens of ways. For example, instead of using two cups of whole wheat flour, you can use one cup of finely ground corn, rye, oats, buckwheat or rice and one cup of whole wheat flour. or, you can replace the sesame seeds with one-half cup of sunflower seeds, poppy seeds, soy grits, shredded coconut or chopped or ground nuts.

You can make your crackers real gems of good nutrition by substituting a quarter cup of wheat germ.

Remember — you don't have to eat "junk food" from the store. Not when you can make really good treats like these crackers.

Jogging Family Man

LONDON (AP) — Every two days, say British press reports, Big John Knight dons a track suit and races over the rugged Cornish hills of southwest England to visit his neighbor, who is also his common-law wife and the mother of 11 of his 20 children.

After a 48-hour visit with Clare, 37, the newspapers say, he jogs two miles back to his own rustic cottage to be with his 33-year-old legal wife, Carole, and their children. The ninth weighed in at more than 12 pounds Sunday.

The 42-year-old former civil servant supports his stair-step brood through state welfare payments of $250.57 a week, according to the reports.

"I'm no scrounger," London's Daily Mirror quoted Knight as saying. "I'd gladly work if someone offered me a job I'd like—like teaching, or lecturing on religion."

Clare, who has five children by an earlier marriage and six by Knight, is expecting her 12th child in April.

Clare said the family had been plagued by letters from angry Britons who criticized their lifestyle and means of financial support, the Daily Mirror reported.

All but one of Carole and John's children have been born without the aid of a doctor at the family's stone house about six miles from the village of Bodmin, the Daily Mirror reported.

"We had a doctor and a nurse present for the first, but it was a nightmare," the newspaper quoted Carole as saying. "All the others have gone smoothly without them."

The Daily Mirror quoted both of Knight's wives as saying they did not believe in contraception and planned to have more children.

"It's not that there are too many people in the world," added their husband. "It's the way things are shared out that's wrong."

SPEEDY PENSIONER

NEW YORK — Gary Muhrcke retired from the New York fire department four years ago and began collecting an $11,822 annual pension, claiming a back injury. But the disability did not keep him from winning a race up 85 flights of stairs in the Empire State Building.

The fire department is investigating.

Muhrcke, 37, topped a field of 14 marathon runners in Tuesday's contest, climbing the 1,575 steps in 12 minutes and 32 seconds.

The department confirmed Thursday that Muhrcke joined in 1962 and claimed that the injury occurred while fighting a fire in Queens.

"He applied for and received a three-quarter pay disability pension, which was granted on July 23, 1973," said an unidentified department spokesman.

"We are conducting an investigation," said Deputy Fire Commissioner Stephen Murphy, acting chairman of the department's Pension Fund Board.

Muhrcke said he can justify the disability pension, but added that "I'd go back on active duty in a minute of they'd let me."

Anger Kept Him Alive

KETCHIKAN, Alaska — Rescuers say anger appeared to be the driving force behind the survival of Anchorage pilot Michael George, who spent 10 days on an uninhabited Southeast Alaska island following a crash landing which killed his wife and four children.

"That was one of the first things we picked up on — his anger," Dan Vick of Petersburg, the skipper of a boat which rescued George, said in a marine telephone interview Thursday night. "I'll never forget it."

Vick said George told a bizarre story about meeting two men near the wreckage of his plane a day or so after it crashed Feb. 5 on the second leg of a vacation flight from Anchorage to Mexico.

"He said the men walked to within 30 feet of where he was lying," Vick said. "He said he yelled to them: 'Help. My plane crashed. My family has been killed. I need help.'

"He said the men just looked at him and turned and ran away. He couldn't believe it. He was as mad about that as anybody I've ever seen. He even remembered the color of their coats."

Vick said he was cruising slowly along the beach off Etolin Island about 60 miles northwest of Ketchikan late Wednesday when he heard a cry from the forest above the cliff-lined shore.

Vick said he and his crew and the crew of another nearby fishing boat went ashore and found George, 36, laying bruised and battered at the top of a 50-foot cliff.

"It took us an hour to get him down with lines," Vick said.

George was transferred by a Coast Guard cutter late the same night and transported to a Ketchikan hospital where he was reported in stable condition today.

Doctors said George escaped the crash with only broken ribs and bruises, but subsequently contracted "emersion foot," a medical term for the loss of circulation caused by spending long periods of time in wet footwear and could lose some toes from gangrene.

The bodies of George's wife Jackie, 33, and their three children who range in age from four to 14 were taken from the crash by helicopter Thursday.

Vick and transcripts of George's radio messages before the crash confirmed that he was badly off course when his twin-engine Cessna 320 ran out of fuel. The tanscripts also disclosed that he was experiencing electronic and wing icing problems.

Vick said George told his rescuers that he spent the first two days following the crash near the wreckage and took another two days to walk to the cliff overlooking the water.

"He said he walked five miles, but it really wasn't more than a quarter of a mile," Vick said.

Nun Charged In Deaths

BRUSSELS — A Roman Catholic nun was charged Thursday with killing three elderly persons by injecting them with overdoses of insulin, officials said.

Magistrate Leo Tas said Sister Godfrida, a drug addict, confessed to killing the three, aged 75 to 80, but said she did not explain why she killed them. He said the investigation is continuing to see if she is involved in other suspicious deaths at a home for the elderly.

Victoria's Book Sold

LONDON (AP) — A copy of Queen Victoria's private journal of life in the Scottish Highlands sold Thursday at Sotheby's for about $2,000.

It was a copy of the 1865 first privately printed edition of Victoria's Leaves from the Journal of Our Life in the Highlands, with some revised comments written in her own hand.

Busnapper Admits That 'It Was Crazy'

OAKLAND, Calif.— After 19 months of silence, one of three young men who kidnapped a busload of Chowchilla school children has tried to explain the episode. "It was a good plan," said James Schoenfeld, shaking his head and laughing half-heartedly. "But it was crazy." Sometimes chuckling, sometimes pulling nervously on his fingers, the 26-year-old Schoenfeld testified for three hours Thursday in a court session prior to sentencing. Schoenfeld, his brother, Richard, 23, and Fred Woods, 26, pleaded guilty last July to 27 counts of simple kidnapping in the July 1976 abduction of 26 children and bus driver Ed Ray. The captives clawed to freedom after being imprisoned in a buried moving van for nearly 17 hours.

LOS ANGELES — An autopsy has shown that the 21-year-old sister of actress Mary Tyler Moore died of an apparent drug overdose, coroner's investigators said Thursday. Investigator James Kono said the autopsy on Elizabeth Moore found "pulmonary edema, a lung congestion that is consistent with someone who has taken an overdose." Miss Moore died Wednesday at the home of her aunt, Alberta Hackett. Miss Hackett said her nieve had been upset "over her boyfriend, a romantic thing," but dismissed the possibility that her death was a suicide.

MOSCOW — The Soviet Academy of Sciences has awarded its gold Lomonsov Medal to American scientist Linus Pauling for outstanding achievements in chemistry and biochemistry. The medal is the academy's highest award and is given annually to one foreign and one Soviet scientist. The Soviet winner this year is M. Lavrentyev, a mathematician. Pauling has won two nobel prizes, the chemistry prize in 1954 and the peace prize in 1962.

TRENTON, N.J. — Paula Grossman, a transsexual teacher fired because school officials felt her presence in a classroom would have an unhealthy effect on students, should receive a disability pension, a New Jersey Appeals Court ruled Thursday. The Appellate Division of Superior Court, which in 1974 upheld the woman's dismissal from the Bernards Township school system, said her sex change operation has resulted in a physical incapacity to teach. The teacher, who now works in an office job with the city of Plainfield, should receive the pension despite being mentally and physically fit to perform her duties as a teacher, the court said.

NEWARK, N.J. — Alex Bradford, composer, gospel singer and Broadway actor, died at Beth Israel Hospital here, two weeks after suffering a stroke. He was 51.A native of Alabama, Bradford's gospel album, Too Close To Heaven, sold one million copies after its release 20 years ago.

ASUNCION — Paraguay's Gen. Alfredo Stroessner was re-elected to his sixth, five-year term as president in last Sunday's elections by 89.62 per cent of the votes cast, it was officially announced Thursday. The central electoral committee said the Liberal Radicals and the Liberals, the only parties to field presidential candidates, won 5.44 per cent and 3.66 per cent of the ballot, respectively.

Will It Be Love?

ANTWERP, Belgium — Zoologists at two European zoos are hoping it will be love at first sight between two rare, harpy eagles. But they may have a problem.

The Edinburgh zoo in Scotland has shipped its harpy eagle to Antwerp to be mated with a harpy in that zoo in the hope they will breed in captivity.

However, the zoologists are not certain of the sexes of the eagles.

Accused Trio Forced Knifepoint Sex, Youth Says

TORONTO (CP) — A 16-year-old youth Thursday identified two men accused of the first-degree murder of Emanuel Jaques as the men who once forced him to perform sex acts with them at knifepoint.

He also said the same of a man already found guilty of the same charge.

The youth identified Robert Wayne Kribs, 29, Saul David Betesh, 27, and Josef Woods, 27, as the men whom he met in a Toronto restaurant more than a year ago. The youth could not identify the fourth accused, Werner Gruener, 29.

Kribs was found guilty Wednesday of first-degree murder in the death of Emanuel. He changed his plea to guilty when the trial began Feb. 8.

Mr. Justice A. W. Maloney of the Ontario Supreme Court ordered that only the youth's first name, David, be reported.

The youth said he was confused about when the incident occurred but said over a year ago he was drunk and sitting in a Toronto restaurant when the three men asked him to join them and they went to a Toronto house.

He said the next morning his clothes were forcibly removed and he was then forced to submit to a variety of sex acts with Kribs and Betesh and at one point he was tied to a bed when he tried to struggle.

When he refused to perform one sex act, he said, "Stretch (Kribs) got a knife, put it to my throat and said 'You're going to die.'"

After the assault he was tied to the bed and pictures were taken, he said. The three men then drove him to his father's home, he said.

Earlier in the day, Crown Attorney Peter Rickaby produced two photographs of Emanuel. He is clothed in one of them and in the other he is naked in bed in a sexual pose with Betesh.

S.Sgt. Gerald Stevenson testified that the photographs, produced from film found in the luggage of the Kribs, Woods and Gruener, were among a series of photographs shown to the jury depicting clothed and nude boys as young as 14 whom Betesh had told police he and Kribs had sexual relations with.

$1B in Credit Offered Mexico

MEXICO CITY (Reuter) — Canada is to offer Mexico credit lines totalling 29 billion pesos ($1.05 billion), the Canadian embassy here announced Wednesday.

The embassy said in a statement that the decision to offer the credits was taken in the day by the board of the Export Development Corporation of Canada, following a visit here earlier this month by its chairman and president, John MacDonald.

The embassy said the credits are being offered to the Mexican government, institutions and corporations in the public and private sector, to cover the procurement of goods and services in Canada.

"These offers, which will shortly be made in writing to the institutions concerned, reflect the corporation's confidence in the future of Mexico and Canada's desire to expand bilateral trade with this country," the embassy statement concluded.

Nothing Sinister

The case involved 32 people—blacks and whites—who sang carols outside police headquarters in John Vorster Square on Dec. 20.

Magistrate J. A. Van Dam told the singers: "I don't know why this matter came to court.... On the evidence before this court, there was nothing sinister that could be attached to this particular gathering."

UNEMPLOYMENT UP IN ALBERTA

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. (CP) — Winter unemployment in southern Alberta is at its highest level in five years, says George Erler, Lethbridge supervisor of Canada Manpower.

Job vacancies listed with Manpower for the last three months of 1977 totalled 843, a drop of 42 per cent from the five-year peak of 1,459 in the last quarter of 1975, he said in a recent interview.

The job vacancy total for the last quarter of the year is a good early indicator of winter employment levels, Erler said.

Whales Love Being Patted

The scientists were astonished to find in 1976 that while humans are whale-watching, whales are human-watching.

Dr. Ray Gilmor, research associate in marine mammals at the San Diego Natural History Museum, says that for the first time in 1976 a whale approached a research boat and stayed alongside to be patted on the head and stroked.

Last year two or three whales came up to be patted at their breeding grounds in San Ignacio lagoon on the Mexican coast 640 kilometres south of here.

"This year it was about half a dozen," Dr. Gilmore said. "the number seems to be growing."

Some of the whales were up to 16 metres long and weighed 35 tons, he said.

The Bridge Expert

Back in the 1930s, a man in North Carolina had lost 19 consecutive rubbers. He was furious, primarily because he held nothing but poor cards, and he swore that he would shoot the next man who dealt him a poor hand. On the very next deal, he dealt himself a Yarborough (a hand containing no card higher than a nine). He promptly committed suicide by shooting himself.

Admittedly, holding poor cards in not calculated to produce winning results, as will be observed in today's deal. But this does not in itself mean that one is destined to become a loser.

Both sides vulnerable.
South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♠.

If there are quizzical eyebrows raised at South's opening bid, they deserve to be raised. Yet, is there a better bid?

West's opening lead of the spade five was captured by East's ace, after which East returned the spade nine, South's jack being taken by West's queen. At this moment, dummy's eight of spades had become the second highest surviving spade in the deck. West next cashed the spade king, figuring there was no way for declarer to enter the North hand to cash the now-supreme spade eight.

On the third spade lead East, having a discard to make, tossed away the heart jack, while South discarded the seven of clubs. To trick four West shifted to a heart, South winning the trick with his queen.

When declarer next cashed his ace and king of diamonds, he had the good fortune to catch East with the doubleton J-10. The board's nine of diamonds had just become established as an entry to the North hand.

South then led his eight of diamonds to dummy' nine, and on the established eight of spades he discarded his nine of clubs. The rest of the tricks belonged to him. Thus he ended up making one spade trick, three hearts, four diamonds and two clubs, with dummy's Yarborough producing two of those tricks.

SOLUTIONS MONDAY

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Saturday, February 18
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Emphasis on completion, taxes, property, security, efforts to establish a solid base. Leo, Aquarius could figure in important ways. Stick to number 1. Strive for new starts, insist on a clear, hard, cold, light-of-day agreement where property is concerned.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Perceive outlines, potentials — don't expect anything to be handed you on silver platter. Relatives, close neighbors "close in." You have right to more space, more room to live your own life. Aquarius, Cancer and Leo figure prominently.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Emphasis on fun-and-games in relation to celebration as "financial nut" is cracked. Sagittarian figures in picture — and so does the number 3. Element of luck rides with you — stick with concept that status quo is not final answer.

CANCER (June 21—July 22): Lunar cycle coincides now with time when best, most appealing productive qualities surface. You can get almost anything you desire. Strive also for what is needed. Be direct, independent, original and specific. Aquarian is in picture.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Good lunar aspect spotlights friendship, romance, fulfillment of long-standing aspirations. Highlights harmony within family circle. Make necessary domestic adjustments. Taurus, Libra and Scorpio individuals play key roles in scenario.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Accent on goal, ambition, honor, reputation, how you relate to professional associates, superiors. See places, situations, people in light of actuality. Avoid trap of self-deception. Define terms. Steer clear of one who broods and wants you to join in a crying session.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Harmonious lunar aspect coincides now with long-distance communication, bringing aspirations, priorities into sharp focus. Write, publish, submit concepts, formats, develop advertising or public relations program. Capricorn, Cancer individuals figure prominently — so does the number 8.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You gain rare insights; future trends are clarified. Your sense of knowing is heightened — give full play to intuitive intellect. If you dig deep, you could strike pay dirt. What you dream could be transformed into reality.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): New approach, attitude may be necessary. What was good for the past may be wanting for the future. Know it — give more of yourself, be more selfish, insist on satisfying your own standards of quality. Contractual obligation — or marriage — is very much in picture.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You may feel as if progress has been halted. Key is to know that you are preparing, building, that assets are being consolidated. Check diet, health resolutions. Don't bolt food. Moderate pace can result in marvelous benefits.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Movement, change, affair of heart, creative endeavors are compressed into exciting period. Gemini, Sagittarius figure prominently. You gain popularity — member of opposite sex is very much attracted and it is obvious.

IF FEBRUARY 18 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you have ability to feel pulse of public. You are drawn to law, drama. Aries, Libra persons play important roles in our life. August could be your most significant month of 1978, a year which features expansion of goals, the completion of a major project, added recognition, the end of one phase of your life in preparation for a new beginning.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"Joe's number and ours?" said Peter. "No, I never noticed any special connection."

Ted pointed to a sheet of paper on the table. "Look, Dad. Our number is just seven times his, and it has the same two digits as his but with a nine between them."

The boy was right, so what were the numbers?

(Answer Monday)

Yesterday's answer: TASTY was 10418 (FISH 9743, odd).

New Potatoes by May 24?

For a special treat to look forward to, start a few potatoes now in a large container of soil taken from the bottom of a compost heap. It may be around May 24 before new potatoes are developed enough for use, but what a lovely way to celebrate.

First you need two or three potatoes showing several sets of eyes. Try to get Netted Gems—readers have reported great success from table potatoes of this variety from vegetable markets. Be sure the eyes have not lengthened into sprouts. Potato roots form at the base of the eye that produces the sprout.

The next step is to get roots started indoors before planting the tubers outdoors, where they do better in a large tub or box at this time of year than in the open garden. In the past, gardeners have emphasized sprouting only, not realizing that the sets are drained of food reserves before roots are present to provide replacement.

My method just now is to put the two or three chosen potato tubers on a sunny window ledge for a day or two until they become greenish. Then bed them, each in a plastic (margarine) tub of loose damp soil from the compost heap.

An alternative for a larger number of sets is to place each tuber in a small hole made in the center of an inverted grass sod about 4 inches square and deep. Put the sods into a shallow box 3 inches deep, cover with a half inch of screened compost. Keep the box in a sunny, but airy spot in a frost-free porch or greenhouse until roots are formed.

At the same time sprouting will develop but should not be encouraged for they will be tender to cold nights outdoors.

When rooting is known to have started, plant the sods without disturbing them into a raised, sheltered bed outdoors or in a coldframe, there to grow that lovely clutch of potatoes. The tops must come slowly as the weather dictates.

If this system is not possible, root the potato tubers in the plastic tubs as suggested then transfer without disturbance to a large container, first gradually cooling the started tubers by standing the plastic tubs in a cooler place at night to prevent shock.

Prepare a large container, pot, 5-gallon pail, or wooden box outdoors in a sunny, sheltered spot. For best results it should be raised two or three feet above ground level, protected on the north and east from wind, and open to full sun and overhead light.

Again, compost soil is needed, for my first experience of early potatoes was from strays growing all winter in the warmth of a compost heap. They were found on the south side; the loose, rich soil was just to their liking.

Plant the rooted potato sets from the plastic tubs into the large container outdoors; three in a big washtub size. Cover with about an inch more of loose soil.

Over the top I have put a loose handful of dried grass stems from the outer edges of one of the compost heaps. This warms by day and retains soil warmth at night for an extra hour or two, while it prevents surface freezing during frost.

This year, my three sets were put into the container without previous rooting on January 15; I would love to find out if even one is rooted but should know better than to go poking around yet.

However, I have hopes of new potatoes for a celebration around May 24.

Lawns, hedges, and big old fir trees provide a cozy and secluded setting for this older English cottage style 2-bdrm. tucked away on a cul-de-sac in one of Colwood's better residential areas, close o golf course. A peek from the road will deceive you! You'd never guess that this house has 1400 sq. ft., one of the largest in-line LR-DR-FP's we could ever need, 2 F.P.'s, a 15x20 Mud room off the Kitchen, and a very private back patio screened by a thick hedge. Take a drive by first if you like, but come back Sat. aft. and be surprised! MLS, 30900, $69,900.

HOW TO WRITE

A GOOD

CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale: start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Friday; 8:00 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

DUNCAN - Mayor Ken Paskin has come under fire from members of council for actions following his recent meeting with North Cowichan Mayor George Whittaker over amalgamating the two communities.

Following the mayors' meeting it was announced the matter would probably go to the public June 17.

Duncan Ald. Mike Coleman criticized Paskin for failing to consult council before releasing information to the public.

"I'm somewhat concerned a committee was struck to provide recommendations to both respective councils," he said. "Councils should have received these recommendations before they were released by the mayors to the press. In some way you have foreclosed council's opinion. We don't have the facts; these should first be determined."

Paskin defended the move he and Whittaker took.

"Mayor Whittaker and I both felt a great sense of urgency that this vote should be taken. We did not think that this was something that should have been kept from the public. Our administrators are currently compiling all the facts. They said they could come up with all the necessary information in plenty of time for a June 17 vote."

Paskin said major problems will arise if amalgamation does not take place. The Cowichan Indian band is considering taking over administration of their lands which, he said, would mean a loss of revenue for the communities.

"We could have a large shopping centre built to the north of us," the mayor added. "This could wipe us out as far as a tax base in concerned."

"If I'm guilty of anything it's trying to act too fast. But good things don't happen unless you make them."

Most aldermen took exception to the proposed make-up of the amalgamated council, which would consist of a mayor and eight aldermen. One aldermen each would come from Duncan, North Cowichan's south end and Crofton-Westholme, two from Chemainus and there would be three at large.

"Duncan would get only one alderman, yet it has a much larger population than Chemainus, which would have two," objected Ald. Martin Lukaitis.

Other council members, including Ald. Doug Barker, objected to the proposed name — the Corporation of Cowichan City.

"We should not be approaching this with the idea that we are going to amalgamate," said Barker. "Perhaps we should be looking at striking a committee with other persons on it as well as council members. We should not be thinking of total amalgamation until we're sure that is the best thing for the people."

Air Tie-Up Counter Attack?

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is devising a way to make it tougher for air traffic controllers to tie up planes when they are on work-to-rule campaigns, a top transport department official says.

Tiny Merritt, director of air traffic services said Thursday there now are minimum limits on separation of two aircraft, but no maximum limits.

Controllers could abuse the lack of a maximum limit to slow landings and take-offs. This occurred at Toronto International Airport after controllers were legislated back to work last year following a nation-wide strike.

But Merritt said the government now is testing a new system of maximum separation limits at its simulation centre in Hull, Que.

Sophisticated computerized equipment at the $4.5-million centre simulates conditions that would face pilots and controllers in the work place.

Merritt said the new limits will be imposed if simulation tests prove them safe.

Charles Simpson, manager of special air studies, said the department is also testing ways of easing congestion at Toronto's airport.

Nixon Embarrassing: Haldeman

Nixon, Haldeman in those days

NEW YORK (UPI) — H. R. Haldeman, chief of Richard Nixon's White House staff, says Nixon was "stiff, artificial" and downright embarrassing with individuals, often presenting them with mementos as if he were a basketball player "handing off a ball behind his back."

Haldeman, whom Nixon described as one of the finest "public servants" he had met, says in his book that Nixon could never relax because of a deep-set insecurity.

"He never let us forget that his mother had to scrub bedpans," writes Haldeman.

The book also paints a vindictive Nixon wanting "to go for the jugular." Haldeman recalls the "seamy" episode with Ted Kennedy and "one of my orders" for a 24-hour surveillance of the Massachusetts senator to "catch him in the sack with one of his babes."

Nixon hated formal dinners and always wanted to speed them, even saying once that for the next gathering to "put a stopwatch on it. I'll bet we can finish dinner in under an hour."

One staffer at the White House, Haldeman recalls, used to mimic Nixon's awkwardness at greeting guests in the Oval Office and handing them a memento — cufflinks, tiepins — of the visit from a desk drawer.

"He (Nixon) would abruptly turn away, take one from the drawer — and without looking back — thrust it toward his surprised guest, like a pro basketball guard handing off a ball behind is back.

"Then he would turn to the man and tell his standard joke that never, in my memory, drew a laugh: 'Give this to your wife or your secretary, whichever you prefer.'"

At dinners, he hated soup and after the first state banquet at the White House exploded: "We've got to speed up these dinners. They take forever. So why don't we just leave out the soup course."

He wouldn't be interrupted with any arguments and "plowed on: 'Men don't like soup.'"

That afternoon Haldeman, when asking Nixon's valet Manolo Sanchez about the president's suit, learned what was wrong with it:

"He spilled soup down his vest," the valet said.

Haldeman also describes a Nixon that was indivisible from the official figure.

"Only once in my entire relationship with him over many years were my wife and I invited to an informal dinner at his home, and that was in 1962.

"To this day he doesn't know how many children I have or anything else about my private life; he never asked and I was his closest professional associate."

Haldeman, whose hair is now longer than the brush cut he had in the White House, said that the "Berlin Wall . . . I am supposed to have constructed around Nixon" resulted from what became Haldeman's secret.

"I soon realized that this president had to be protected from himself. Time and again I would receive petty, vindictive orders."

Haldeman also says the former president while campaigning would slip away in the middle of the night "to flea-bitten" coffee shops and when tired often would appear to be drunk.

Nixon "used to disappear in the middle of the night during campaign trips," he wrote.

"I would call for him at his hotel room in a small midwestern city in the morning and find that he was missing. Some time in the early dawn he had gotten out of bed and slipped away, with a nervous Secret Service man tailing him. We'd search all over town until we found the candidate looking haggard and wan in a flea-bitten coffee shop."

Haldeman believes these "post-midnight excursions" were Nixon's way of "letting of steam when things were very tense or if he was very tired."

'OFFICIAL' FILES HENRY'S NUDES

NEW YORK (AP) — John Ehrlichman used to send official-looking folders to Henry Kissinger containing nude photos of starlets dated by the former state secretary, H. R. Haldeman says in his new book.

The former chief of staff wrote in The Ends of Power that his colleague on the White House staff spent hours compiling the photos together with forged memos of Nixon's "bizarre 'demands' for certain types of action."

Ehrlichman would dispatch the memos one by one at various times and places, Haldemann said.

"They always looked official—until Henry opened them and saw the nudes," said Haldeman, who also recounted that Nixon secretly had a kick out of Kissinger's love life.

Invitation to a War Denied by Aides

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former foreign affairs aides to Richard Nixon are disputing H. R. Haldeman's claim that the Soviet Union asked the United States to take part in a nuclear strike against China in 1969.

There was no denial, however, that the Russians were considering a pre-emptive nuclear attack on China's atomic-testing facilities during that period. One U.S. official said the Russians' thinking was common knowledge.

A Chinese foreign ministry spokesman in Peking said it was not Chinese practice to comment on such reports.

There also was no comment from Russian officials.

Haldeman, the former president's chief-of-staff who now is in prison for his Watergate crimes, makes the claims in his book, The Ends of Power, which goes on sale today.

However, Henry Kissinger, Nixon's national security adviser at the time, said, "This is not true," when asked Thursday about Haldeman's report that Russia had asked the United States to participate in the attack.

Kissinger, appearing on NBC's Today show, said: "All the papers on foreign-policy matters run across my desk and I do not recall any such event and I would not have forgotten it."

In Peking, a U.S. official who asked not to be identified said today he doubts the United States was invited to take part. "The Russians knew full well what our reaction would have been," he said.

And George Keegan, a retired major-general who was then the U.S. Air Force's intelligence chief, said he was unaware of any official, high-level Soviet invitation to the United States.

But Keegan acknowledged that "a number of lesser Soviet officials made discreet inquiries and suggestions to lesser Americans unofficially to determine whether the United States would be interested in participating in a surgical strike against Chinese nuclear installations."

"I am unaware of (discussions on) higher levels where Kissinger or Nixon would know directly," Keegan said.

MORE DIRTY TRICKS?

NEW YORK (AP) — The Washington Post's editor says his newspaper obtained portions of The Ends of Power by H. R. Haldeman at no cost beyond normal reporting expenses, while two other newspapers say a mysterious woman caller offered to sell them the book.

"The story is infinitely less complicated than you suspect," editor Benjamin Bradlee said Thursday night in a telephone interview in which he denied receiving a call from the woman. "We got it from someone whose name you don't know, whose affiliation you don't know. Nor have you ever heard of them."

The Post published in Thursday's editions what it said was material from the latter two-thirds of the book, prompting early publication of the 352-page volume itself—which sells for $12.95—in addition to high-priced excerpts.

Suspicions of the publisher, Times Books, and the Times syndication service centred on a possible security breach at the Scranton, Pa., press, where it was produced.

In part, the suspicions were based on The Post's statement that it did not obtain all of the book, which was bound from printed pages collected into 11 sections called "signatures."

Although three guards oversaw the binding, executives believe The Ends of Power was most vulnerable to the theft of substantial portions in sequence at this stage.

Further, the New York Times said that a "Nancy Collins" checked out of a Scranton motel Thursday. Nancy Collins is the Washington Post reporter credited with getting the book. The reporter declined comment.

PM Won't Figure Job Plan Results

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau declined Thursday requests by the opposition to put a figure on the number of jobs that would be created through projects announced after the conclusion of this week's federal-provincial premiers' meeting.

Trudeau, responding to questions in the Commons, said it was the hope of all the premiers as the three-day conference ended Wednesday that the meeting will help the economy by inspiring confidence which will encourage investment and create jobs.

But he told Conservative Leader Joe Clark it would be difficult to quantify the exact number of jobs created.

Opposition critics had complained before, during and after the special meeting that the federal government had proposed no specific measures to provide immediate relief to the depressed economy.

During January, there were 991,000 unemployed — the highest total ever — according to official government estimates. And this week the value of the dollar in U.S. terms has fallen to a 40-year low despite efforts of the federal government to boost confidence through the premiers' meeting.

Clark said in the Commons that the federal government had no estimates out of the conference on the number of new jobs "just as it had no proposals going into the conference."

He asked how many new jobs in the fishing industry would be created through extension of the 200-mile territorial limit, through the new construction of grain facilities on the West Coast and through government incentives to promote investment in the auto industry. The items had been mentioned in the final premiers' statement.

"I will not attempt to give him (Clark) a number," Trudeau replied.

The prime minister suggested Clark ask fishermen what the extension of the 200-mile limit will mean to them. "They won't know an exact figure, but they'll know it means jobs."

Result Mixed: Bennett

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett said Thursday the British Columbia delegation to the first ministers' economic conference in Ottawa returned with mixed feelings, but with their plans and hopes unshaken.

Bennett, addressing a news conference in Richmond after his return from the three-day meeting, said he had gone to Ottawa with a broad approach for attacking the country's economic problems.

"I was trying to set up a structure for change . . . developing not only in the economy but in other areas, national policy as apart from unilaterally-imposed federal policy," said Bennett.

One disappointment, he said, was that the other first ministers weren't prepared to discuss an all-encompassing economic plan.

"We said that to get an economic plan for the country you couldn't do single things in isolation because of their impact on each other," the premier said. "Our researchers and economists developed what would be a modern economic plan for the country that could integrate us into the world economy."

Bennett said the limited aspirations of the other conference participants impeded discussion of this plan.

"The long sessions on sectoral topics . . . didn't allow for the type of discussion we wanted," said Bennett.

But despite the conference short-comings, Bennett said, it was an historic occasion and "a lot of the country will be better off because the meeting did take place."

Bennett said a number of moves were made at the conference toward the type of provincial input in national decision-making that B.C. had sought, "even working toward more liberalized trade" in the international Geneva trade talks.

8% Food Price Rise Seen for '78

VANCOUVER (CP) — Consumer food prices in British Columbia could rise an average of 8.66 per cent this year, only slightly below the 1977 increase of 8.8 per cent, the president of Kelly, Douglas and Co. Ltd. said Thursday.

Speaking at a forum organized by the Employers' Council of B.C., Raymond J. Addington said last year's rise was caused by advances in prices of fresh fruit and vegetables during the winter months, an increase in meat prices and the reduction in the value of the Canadian dollar.

He said consumers generally spend between nine and 11 per cent of their food-store dollar on produce, 22 to 24 per cent on meat, 47 to 49 per cent on grocery items, three to five per cent on frozen foods and 14 to 16 per cent on dairy products.

He predicted that:

—Produce prices will increase by 15 per cent in the first half of 1978, with the rate of increase tailing off in the second half when more B.C.-grown produce is available for an annual gain of about 10 per cent.

—Meat prices will also increase by about 10 per cent in total, although reduced cattle supplies will increase beef costs by about 12 to 15 per cent this year.

—There will be less-than-average annual price increases in oils, flour and milk.

—Sugar prices will remain stable, thus helping the stability in jams, biscuits, confectionery and other items which are large sugar users.

—Dairy product prices will rise by 5.66 per cent.

Juvenile Curfew Law Proposed for City

Increasing juvenile delinquency problems may lead Victoria to introduce curfew laws, Mayor Mike Young said Thursday.

"At present we have no way of controlling juveniles and it's obvious the parents or guardians aren't really doing it so we may have to step in," said Young in an interview.

"The absence of any method of adequately controlling juveniles is being felt increasingly . . . essentially we have lawlessness on our streets."

Both Esquimalt Mayor Art Young and Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith today expressed misgivings about the proposal, however, saying that curfew laws are tough to enforce.

Smith rejected it outright as far as Oak Bay is concerned, while Esquimalt Mayor Young said it won't work unless all municipalities follow suit.

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier could not be reached for comment.

Victoria's Young said he has no firm proposals at present but plans to discuss the problem with police.

"This is something that's been bothering me for six or seven months — we have to do something," he said.

Smith said, however, that no curfew will be imposed in his municipality because it would be too hard to enforce and is an inadequate way of responding to the problem.

Smith said Oak Bay dealt with a juvenile problem last summer by putting on extra auxiliary policemen and increasing contact with juveniles before trouble developed.

"There are other ways of dealing with it," said Smith, "and one of those ways is to pay more attention to the juveniles and see that they have things to do."

In Victoria Ald. Robin Biencoe expressed similar feelings.

Esquimalt Mayor Art Young said he'd be willing to consider a curfew, but only if all core municipalities enacted such restrictions.

He said that if Victoria went it alone they would simply push juvenile delinquents into neighboring municipalities.

Taxi Rates Hiked

A rate increase that will see Victoria taxis charging more than their counterparts in Vancouver was approved Thursday by city council's finance committee.

The flag rate for city cabs will jump to $1 from 80 cents, while the mileage rate will go to 90 cents from 80 cents and waiting time will rise to $12-an-hour from $10.

In Vancouver the flag cost is $1, but it only costs 80 cents a mile and $10-an-hour.

Municipal manager Jim Bramley recommended that the committee allow city cabs to bump their rates because Vancouver and Victoria had the lowest charges in the province.

TRANSIT LOSS $62M

No Subsidy For Buses In the Red

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Hydro's urban transport system will have a deficit of about $62 million for the fiscal year ending March 31 and the provincial government will not provide a subsidy, the B.C. legislature's new committee on Crown corporations was told Thursday.

The subsidy, covering Hydo's greater Vancouver and Greater Victoria transit operations, was $32.6 million for both fiscal 1975-76 and 1976-77.

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said in an interview later the government has decided not to pay the subsidy, but did not give details about the reasoning.

"There is an intent to develop transit legislation, "he said." I can't go beyond that.

"A policy will be developing. At this stage I can confirm that Hydro have been advised that there will be no subsidy. I think their profit is quite a bit improved this year."

Despite the deficit, Hydro Thursday reported net income of $19.9 million for the nine months ending Dec. 31, 1977. Income from its electricity and natural gas sales-including sales of surplus power to United States customers-is expected to more than make up for the transit deficit.

The $19.9 million was in contrast to the $19.7-million loss reported for the first six months of the fiscal year. It was also an improved performance over the nine months ended Dec. 31, 1976, when Hydro reported net income of $4.5 million.

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson, a member of the committee, said the Hydro situation is beginning to approximate that of B.C. Railway, another provincial Crown corporation with annual deficits in the $60-million range.

Hydro management said possibilities of increasing fares or cutting service — or both — are being studied, but no decisions have been made.

Larry Wight, Hydro's deputy manager for transit, told the committee that the transit deficit had increased from $5 million in 1970 to about $62 million in the current year.

Hydro general manager Norman Olsen said he was uncertain about the subsidy.

" Rates for gas and electricity for the next year are based on the assumption that there will be a transit subsidy."

Wolfe said Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis is the minister with responsibility for urban transit. Curtis could not be reached for comment.

Wight gave most of the details on Hydro's position.

The Vancouver harbor SeaBus is losing $1.5 million a year, he said, or about $1 a passenger. Hydro subsidiary Pacific Stage Lines is losing $3.55 per passenger. The Victoria transit operation costs $8.5 million a year, but has revenue of only $3.4 million, he said.

NASTY LAW GETS HEAVE

A proposed by-law to forbid sightseeing tour operators from making disparaging remarks about Victoria got the heave-ho Thursday.

The by-law would have let city hall cancel the trades licence of any operator who, while conducting a tour, said nasty things about the city, the province or the nation.

Tour guides wouldn't have been allowed to badmouth Victoria residents either.

But council's finance committee shelved the proposed by-law after Mayor Mike Young said he thought existing controls over sight-seeing vehicles are adequate.

The by-law was drawn up by city solicitor Jakob de Villiers because of increasing competition between tour operators along the Inner Harbor causeway.

Council has been expressing concern about the problem for sometime and asked de Villiers to come up with regulations to control the situation.

The finance committee, however, obviously thought his solution was a bit too drastic.

Young said the best way to deal with the problem is just to warn the operators they would all have their licences cancelled if the situation worsens.

"My feelings on the causeway are that if we have trouble there we'll just close it down . . . get rid of them all," said the mayor.

The committee agreed with Young and decided not to pass the by-law to council for consideration.

The by-law would have put tight regulations on the way sight-seeing vehicles are operated, including where they're allowed to park and on how tickets are sold.

It would have given the city the power to cancel a licence if any operator, driver, or guide "in the course of a tour, makes untoward or grossly disparaging or offensive remarks about Canada, the province, the city or the city's inhabitants, or gives false or misleading information concerning his tours."

The bylaw would also have forbidden tour operators from accosting pedestrians on the street, or offending passengers.

Tough Week For Dollar

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian dollar today fluctuated on the New York money markets within a narrow range of Thursday's post-Depression record low of 89.50 U.S. cents.

At noon, the dollar was changing hands at 89.52 cents, after dropping to 89.43 cents and going up to 89.57 cents earlier.

A foreign currency dealer for the Bank Canadian National said there had been relatively few commercial orders to buy or sell the dollar in "a very quiet" morning session.

"It's been a tough week and most traders are waiting until next week to get back into the market again," he said.

The dealer added that many traders may be reluctant take a position in the currency market because of the long weekend in the U.S. Monday is a public holiday to celebrate Washington's birthday.

The Canadian dollar hit a new post-Depression low of 89.50 U.S. cents at the close of New York markets Thursday, after dipping to 89.47 U.S. cents.

A trader for the Bank Canadian National attributed the decline to a statement by Finance Minister Jean Chretien in the Commons Thursday, that the dollar will be left to float, without any government effort to set a fixed rate.

When that statement reached the money markets, the trader said, "everybody just sold everything they were holding."

The trader said he thought Chrétien's statement had been misinterpreted.

Meanwhile in London, the U.S. dollar edged lower in nervous trading on Europe's money markets today but recovered a bit in Tokyo and Southeast Asia.

One Zurich dealer said in the absence of any encouraging news, the U.S. currency was not in demand and was tending to drop.

AirWest Employees Veto Pact Proposal

A strike by AirWest Airlines Ltd. employees continues today after members of the Teamsters Union voted 68 per cent against accepting a tentative agreement.

The agreement was reached Wednesday and recommended for acceptance by union negotiator Wes Anderson.

However, a spokesman for the 95 employees, who have been off the job since Nov. 13, said today there are about 25 unsatisfactory items.

He singled out wages and contract language related to seniority as being two of the main problems.

"We have now put so much time and effort into this thing that we are not going back until we get a workable contract," he said.

"If that's not possible then we'll get jobs elsewhere," he said, adding that most of the employees don't really believe this will be necessary.

He said Anderson told the employees if they rejected the contract and the strike continues much longer, there is a chance the company will have to shut down.

But the employees' spokesman said most of his colleagues took this as a bluff by AirWest president Norm Gold.

Company general manager Dick Laidman indicated, however, in an interview today that the company is not in serious trouble.

He said the shut-down threat was probably thrown in by the union to get the employees to accept the contract.

Laidman said he feels there is still room to manoeuvre and that the problems could stem from "areas of misunderstanding."

"Without anybody getting uptight, we've got to sit down and review the situation."

No further meetings have been scheduled between the two parties.

The company has been using supervisory personnel to maintain service which includes a harbor-to-harbor run from Vancouver to Victoria.

NOT SO IMPRESSIVE

Robbie Sherrell, the man chosen to head the Insurance Corporation of B.C., does not seem to have quite the impressive qualifications attributed to him by Education Minister Pat McGeer, his present employer says.

McGeer, the minister responsible for ICBC, described Sherrell as a director of the Hartford Insurance Group.

"Good heavens, no, he's not within a hundred miles of that," J. Stewart Johnston, Hartford's vice-president in charge of personnel, said in a telephone interview from Hartford, Connecticut.

On Thursday, McGeer made public a government memo listing Sherrell's previous title as: executive director of the Hartford Insurance Group in Europe, reporting directly to the chairman of the board of Excess Insurance, a Hartford subsidiary.

Johnston said Sherrell was in charge of casualty claims for the Excess Insurance Co., a subsidiary of Hartford Insurance, and not an executive director.

McGeer said that it is ability, not a title, that ICBC is buying. Sherrell was recommended to the government by a consulting firm.

Steel Beam Tax Dropped

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has temporarily suspended a tax on wide-flanged steel beams that British Columbia says would have cost thousands of jobs in the province.

The finance department said the "limited and temporary remission" will last until June 29.

"The remission has been approved to cushion the transition to higher input costs for regional fabricators."

The announcement was made by the department after government ministers refused to give the same information to questioning MPs. They said Justice Minister Ron Basford would make the announcement in Vancouver later.

British Columbia MPs from both sides of the Commons had complained to the government about the tax on beams imported from Britain, Japan, France, South Africa and Luxemburg.

The tax was instituted at the request of Algoma Steel Ltd., of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., despite the fact that the company sold little of the steel to B.C. Algoma had appealed a decision of the anti-dumping tribunal.

The beams are used in construction.

Stolen Art Turns Up In B.C.

PORT MOODY (CP) — Police have seized $25,000 worth of paintings, carvings and antique furniture from a house here in connection with a major art theft ring broken by police in Calgary.

There were no arrests in the raid here Wednesday, and an RCMP spokesman said they were conducted following information from police in Calgary.

RCMP Inspector Les Homes said most of the art appears to come from Calgary.

Peterson Linked to Soviet Firm

Former Attorney-General Leslie Peterson and former Victoria alderman Geoffery Edgelow are directors of a Soviet-owned company a Tory MP hints may be involved in subversive activities in Canada.

The Vancouver-based firm, identified by Tory MP Tom Cossit as EMEC Trading Co., employs 18 to 21 Russian technicians and engineers in installing Russian-built turbines and generators in B.C. and across Canada.

Both Peterson and Edgelow today expressed surprise and dismay over the suggestion.

"There's not one iota of truth to them . . . absolutely not," Edgelow said.

Edgelow, who is secretary-director of the firm, said he has been contacted from time to time by members of the RCMP security service in relation to the activities of the firm and their employees. The last time was a little over a year ago.

"They asked me about EMEC, about what the company was doing, and when they became completely convinced it was doing exactly what it was formed to do, their inquiries ended. At no time did I get the impression they were doubtful."

The firm, incorporated by the federal consumer services branch as an extra-provincial company in 1973, has supplied two turbines to the Mica dam project, four to Site One dam on the Peace River, six bulk-type turbines to the Jenpeg project in Manitoba, and two turbines for New Brunswick Light and Power at Fredericton.

EMEC was named by Cossitt along with another Vancouver firm, Morflot Freight Liners Ltd., as Russian-owned companies carrying out business in Canada. Also named were Socan Aircraft of Calgary, Alta., and Stan-Canada Machinery Ltd. and Belarus Equipment of Canada Ltd., both of Toronto. Cossit said there are 45 to 50 other firms in Canada controlled by Soviet interests.

Although Cossit later said he has no proof the companies are involved in anything unusual, he said he is concerned because the RCMP security service had them under surveillance to see where their profits are going.

A spokesman for the RCMP security service in Vancouver declined today to comment.

"The firms are legitimate trading companies in Canada. We have a trade relationship with the Soviet Union. There's nothing unusual about that."

The future of the Maple Bay Marina and Shipyard Ltd. near Duncan, operated by the Bentzen brothers for 18 years, still is in doubt after going into receivership in September, 1976.

John Bentzen says the marina is still in receivership and although there have been several bids to buy it, bidders have had trouble finding financing.

The brothers also had hoped to sell some of the 23 acres they own for condominiums but developers have run into financial stumbling blocks.

Another concerted effort to sell the marina will be made in the spring. Bentzen, meanwhile, is continuing to run the business.

Telling Gilbert Islanders about the Garden of Eden is like carrying coals to Newcastle, however unexpected.

David Smith, an ex-Scotsman teaching school in Bikenibeu, an island one degree north of the Equator at longitude 174, wrote to radio station CJVI to report picking up their broadcast on his AM band last Aug. 17.

It included an ad for the Garden of Eden Shop and another for a used car lot on Oak Street, both of which would probably sound alien to South Seas listeners .

The station often gets correspondence from DX listeners in remote parts of the world, as well as the American southwest. DXing (long-distance reception verified by the broadcaster) is a hobby in many lands, sometimes made possible by tropospheric skips in normal transmission.

Due to conditions at certain times of the year and its comparatively low frequency, CJVI gets reports of being heard regularly in the far north or far south, such as Chico, Calif.,the Gilbert Islands, Norway and Finland.

Legislation passed by the provincial government last March has driven a number of firms out of business. And Victoria Better Business Bureau manager Bill Tindall couldn't be more pleased.

You see the firms that are no more had been involved for years in offering tax rebates. Offering isn't exactly the best word to describe the practice. Ripping off is more apt.

But by limiting the fee a tax rebater can charge to 15 per cent the government has forced firms that specialized in the field to pack up and move somewhere else, as indicated by a notable absence of ads for the service in the classified section of local newspapers.

Tindall says a few small bookkeeping firms here are still offering a rebate service at the 15 per cent fee, but that's beneficial for the community.

Trying to accommodate hearty appetites and heart ailments can be a problem for any cook, but help is on the way from the B.C. Heart Foundation.

The organization says it is compiling a cook book based on practical — and some exotic — recipes for those suffering from minor or major heart ailments.

It's also intended as a guide for "those who want to make sure they're treating their body well and filling it with the right kind of 'heart' fuel," says the foundation.

Victorians are invited to contribute their own favorite recipe or cookery idea, or "a bit of wit and wisdom that fits into the heart theme."

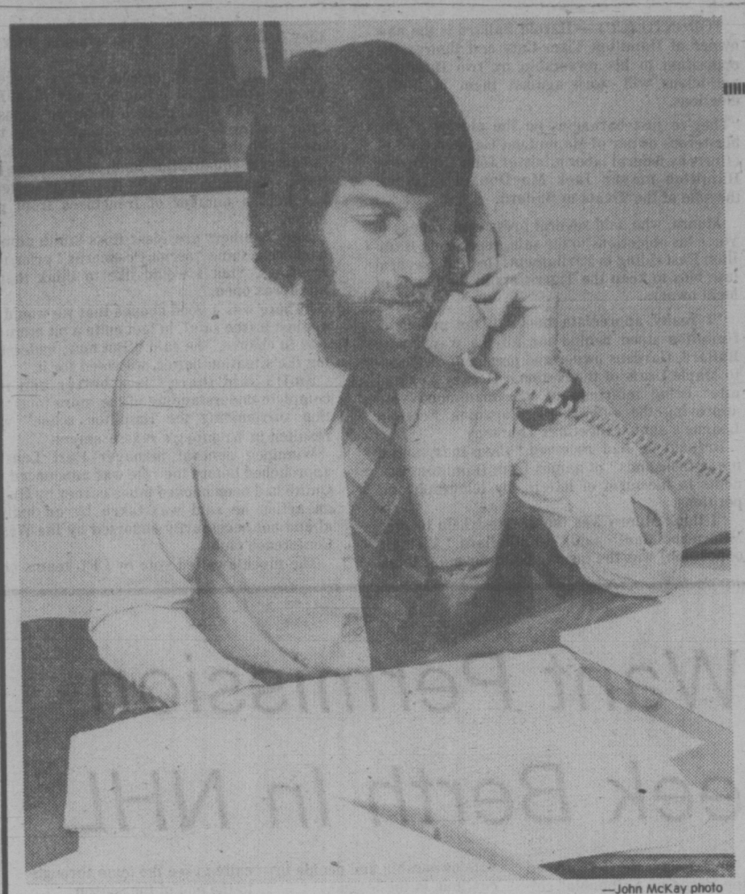

They can either mail the information to the B.C. Heart Foundation, 1008 Blanshard Street, Victoria, or call 382-4035.

For those males who believe that the way to get ahead is to get a body, Victoria may be lining up some shining (with body oil) examples to emulate.

Warren Langman, owner of the Victoria Health Club, says he is hoping to stage the Mr. North America contest in Victoria later this year.

If his negotiations are successful, the city will be invaded by pulsating pectorals and bionic biceps as body-building champions from many parts of the United States and Canada go through their posturing routines in search of he-man honors.

PETER JONES . . .a quiet compassion

THE RENTALSMAN

Threats to Life, Helping to Move All Part of Job

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Peter Jones has had his life threatened.

He has had to have people committed to the Eric Martin Institute.

At least six times he and a friend have helped move tenants who could not afford to do it by themselves.

Jones isn't a social worker or a policeman.

He's a rentalsman officer in Victoria and March 1 he and other staff members will mark the first anniversary of the official opening of the office here.

"Take, for instance, a couple with four children. The husband is unemployed and they can't afford to pay the rent," says Jones.

"The landlord can't afford to carry them. At that point we can refer them to Community Action for assistance in finding a place with a lower rent."

He cites the case of a couple having marital problems. One day there is a fight and the neighbors are disturbed.

"There are grounds for termination of tenancy — and a lot more hardship," he says.

In the first month of operation there were 1,588 phone calls, 72 landlords and 87 tenants were interviewed and there were 178 cases in the files.

In the first month of this year the phone calls rose to 2,777, the interviews to 418 and 377 cases were being processed.

The office's jurisdiction includes the whole of Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands.

Jones, who was a rentalsman officer in Vancouver before coming to Victoria, sees his main role as that of a mediator rather than decision-maker.

He says those seeking help from the rentalsman office range from tenants on a $30,000-a-year income to those forced to live on $2,000.

He estimates that 70 per cent of the problems he sees are mediated.

"The rentalsman is a fairly new concept for Canada," he says. "It's a very good attempt, a successful attempt, to assist people in sorting out their problems as fairly and quickly as possible."

He says other provinces, such as Alberta and Ontario, have examined the B.C. rentalsman department to determine whether it would be worthwhile for their areas.

★

In dealing with the problems, many of the social ills of society come to the surface, triggered by the high unemployment rate, marital problems and other tragedies.

"A lot of our problems are the result of social ills," Jones says. "A lot of the people come to us with a frustrated attitude. They don't know what their rights are and what is going to happen."

While preferring to mediate, there are times when Jones must act like a Solomon and make a decision. When this happens, he explains, there is bound to be some resentment by the side that lost.

When it can help, he enlists the services of Community Action, the Law Centre and other community agencies to help tackle the problems that are brought before him.

Jones says there is no serious shortage of housing for childless couples or single people, but for families with children the problem is compounded.

"One of the most controversial issues is when, under the Human Rights Act, you can discriminate against age — children. When you have children you may have problems finding a home," he adds, noting that many apartment buildings ban children.

While some of those against whom he has been forced to rule may not agree, Jones argues the rentalsman's office has improved the lot of thousands of British Columbians.

"One of the concepts was to take the problems out of the courts and into an administration department. The courts were being bogged down with landlord and tenant cases," he says.

"We have enough discretionary powers to deal on a humanitarian basis.

"We have a good reputation among the general public," he adds.

Suite Owners Hamstrung?

Condominium councils will be hamstrung by changes in the Strata Titles Act, the Greater Victoria Strata Corporation warned Thursday.

The association decided at a meeting Thursday night to press Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair for amendments to end what president L.W. Jones called abuses of the laws by developer-owners.

Also at month's end, changes in the Strata Titles Act, passed in September, will be proclaimed.

Some of the changes worry the association.

As an example, Jones said, one Victoria developer has sold only 40 of 55 condominum units in his building and has put the other 15 units up for rent.

Jones said this hamstrings the condominum council because, by law, it must have owners of 75 per cent of the condominium units present in order to pass any bylaws.

But the most that council can bring together is 73 per cent, 40 of the 55 units, and so the council could never pass a bylaw.

"This is a ridiculous situation," Jones said. "How can a council function if it can never pass any bylaws?"

Changes being proclaimed at month's end will not help, Jones said. Amendments will force owner-developers to state in advance how many units they plan to rent and for how long.

Jones said owners have indicated they will get around this requirement by selling their rights to a second party who will, in turn, rent out the condominiums. Jones said the legislation controls the original owner of the building but does not restrict a second party or company that purchases the rights to rent out condominiums.

Hospital Heads Huddle

Hospital administrators will meet with health ministry officials Tuesday to try and thrash out a solution to the acute bed shortage caused by the government's new long-term program.

Hospitals have been forced in recent weeks to house patients in corridors and storage areas because beds are being taken up by extended care patients.

Executive director of health programs Dr. Chapin Key said today he called the meeting.

"We want to solve some of the problems we see surfacing which, in some places, may be reaching a crisis situation," Key said.

He conceded that the government's new program has caused problems for hospitals like the Royal Jubilee Hospital which have large emergency departments.

Representatives from RJH, Victoria General Hospital, Vancouver General Hospital, St. Paul's Hospital, Royal Columbian Hospital and the B.C. Health Association, representing all hospitals in the province, will be at the meeting.

Also attending will be Isabel Kinnett, executive director for long-term care, Jack Bainbridge, associate deputy minister for long-term care, and Glen Wright, associate deputy minister for hospital programs.

Asked if he had any solutions to the bed shortage problem, Key said he does but would prefer to have them first discussed at Tuesday's meeting.

"They might not be acceptable," he said.

No Motive Found In Slaying

Police are still without a motive today for the slaying Wednesday of a 20-year-old North Saanich man who collapsed in a friend's driveway a few minutes' walk from his home at 587 Birch.

Anyone who has information about the activities of Gerhardt Malcolm Kirmhse between 10:30 a.m. and noon that day is asked to contact Sidney RCMP. The number to call is 478-9721.

Kirmhse apparently was beaten or struck with a blunt weapon, possibly in a car, but managed to reach the residence of the acquaintance he had intended to visit at 11091 West Saanich.

He got to the door about 12:15 p.m. then slumped to the ground and was dead before he could get medical attention.

An inquest will open at 7:30 p.m. Monday in First Memorial chapel before coroner Edmond J. de St. Jorre.

Metal detecting equipment borrowed from the armed forces may be used to sweep areas north of Patricia Bay in the vicinity of Wain Road and West Saanich Road.

Premonition Nips Blaze?

Sunshine streaming through an upper floor window and reflected from a makeup mirror ignited clothing at the home of C. G. Reed, 345 Quebec, Thursday afternoon.

He said if his wife had not had a premonition that something was amiss, they might have returned home to find the apartment in flames. The Reeds had been shopping downtown and ordinarily would not have gone back to the apartment until later.

Reed said the article of clothing, of light material, was lying near the makeup mirror on a dressing table. When they first looked about the apartment they smelled what they thought was smoke from a garbage fire outside. However, it was wisps of smoke coming from the dressing table where the piece of clothing burst into flame as Reed went into the bedroom.

Deputy fire chief Mike Belton said the fire department was not called, but he could well believe that sunshine caused the fire. "We once had one from sunshine passing through a bottle of water that set fire to shingles. We didn't believe it until we set it up and it happened again," the deputy said.

Fire Hazard Posters Eyed

In a move to put the pressure on building owners who don't measure up to Victoria safety standards city council's finance committee Thursday approved a fire department proposal to post hazardous buildings.

Fire Chief Eric Simmons showed the committee a poster that he said should be placed in offending buildings either on the door or right next to stairs or elevators so that people using the building couldn't miss it.

The poster would feature the words "Fire Hazards" in large red type, under which the building's safety shortcomings would be listed.

Simmons said that at present there were 16 buildings in the city that deserved to be posted.

The finance committee approved the plan, but only after expressing some concern about the shock effect the poster would have.

Mayor Mike Young said he wondered about using the word "hazards".

"I don't want to unduly scare people, but on the other hand there are times when they should be — it's difficult," said Young.

$2,826 for Falling Fingernails

A Saanich woman whose natural fingernails fell off after treatments to extend them with false nails has been awarded $2,826 damages in county court.

Marcia Valerie Kory sued Western Nails 'N Lashes Studio Ltd., T. Dyson Holdings Ltd., and Victoria Studio 24 Holdings Ltd., all carrying on business under the firm name and style of Nails 'N Lashes Studio.

She sought damages arising from negligence against the defendants, who were said to have failed to exercise due care towards her in equipping her with false fingernails.

She went to a studio on Kingsway in Vancouver in 1975 and underwent the treatment, which consists of liquid acrylic plastic being applied to the roughened natural nails. When it is hardened and bonded to the natural nail, it is shaped to simulate a long natural nail and colored with ordinary nail lacquer.

Judge Montague Drake, in a written decision, said the process normally takes about two hours but this visit took four to five hours. Three or four weeks later she went to another studio on Bidwell in Vancouver and had repair and maintenance work done, he said.

Within a month, she visited a studio in Victoria.

The judge said she was by this time 'a bit fed up' having spent a good deal of money with the result that her nails 'looked bad' and her fingertips were painful.

There was a long session of work on her nails — perhaps as long as six hours — and her fingers felt very sore afterwards.

There were two more visits to the Victoria studio and on the last visit a natural nail fell off and it was noted that what remained was, in the plaintiff's words, 'green and smelly.'

Drake said it was surprising, in view of the evidence which suggested a degree of septicaemia, that she did not seek medical attention earlier. But she did seek attention shortly after the final visit.

"In the end, all her fingernails fell off," he said.

He said her failure to consult a doctor earlier may well have exacerbated her sufferings, which were acute and prolonged.

Drake said had ordinary competence been exercised by employees of the studios she would have been free from infection and consequent injury.

"I can come to no other conclusion, on a balance of the probabilities in the matter, but that these unfortunate occurrences were the result of a want of due skill and care on the part of persons employed by the various defendants," he said.

"If the plaintiff's fingernails, as was suggested, were abnormally sensitive this should have been apparent to the defendants, who must in any event take the plaintiff as they find her."

Juvenile Curfew Law Proposed for City

Increasing juvenile delinquency problems may lead Victoria to introduce curfew laws, Mayor Mike Young said Thursday.

"At present we have no way of controlling juveniles and it's obvious the parents or guardians aren't really doing it so we may have to step in," said Young in an interview.

"The absence of any method of adequately controlling juveniles is being felt increasingly . . . essentially we have lawlessness on our streets."

Both Esquimalt Mayor Art Young and Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith today expressed misgivings about the proposal, however, saying that curfew laws are tough to enforce.

Smith rejected it outright as far as Oak Bay is concerned, while Esquimalt Mayor Young said it won't work unless all municipalities follow suit.

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier could not be reached for comment.

Victoria's Young said he has no firm proposals at present but plans to discuss the problem with police.

"This is something that's been bothering me for six or seven months — we have to do something," he said.

Smith said, however, that no curfew will be imposed in his municipality because it would be too hard to enforce and is an inadequate way of responding to the problem.

Smith said Oak Bay dealt with a juvenile problem last summer by putting on extra auxiliary policemen and increasing contact with juveniles before trouble developed.

"There are other ways of dealing with it," said Smith, "and one of those ways is to pay more attention to the juveniles and see that they have things to do."

In Victoria Ald. Robin Blencoe expressed similar feelings.

Esquimalt Mayor Art Young said he'd be willing to consider a curfew, but only if all core municipalities enacted such restrictions.

He said that if Victoria went it alone they would simply push juvenile delinquents into neighboring municipalities.

Taxi Rates Hiked

A rate increase that will see Victoria taxis charging more than their counterparts in Vancouver was approved Thursday by city council's finance committee.

The flag rate for city cabs will jump to $1 from 80 cents, while the mileage rate will go to 90 cents from 80 cents and waiting time will rise to $12-an-hour from $10.

In Vancouver the flag cost is $1, but it only costs 80 cents a mile and $10-an-hour.

Municipal manager Jim Bramley recommended that the committee allow city cabs to bump their rates because Vancouver and Victoria had the lowest charges in the province.

TRANSIT LOSS $62M

No Subsidy For Buses In the Red

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Hydro's urban transport system will have a deficit of about $62 million for the fiscal year ending March 31 and the provincial government will not provide a subsidy, the B.C. legislature's new committee on Crown corporations was told Thursday.

The subsidy, covering Hydo's greater Vancouver and Greater Victoria transit operations, was $32.6 million for both fiscal 1975-76 and 1976-77.

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said in an interview later the government has decided not to pay the subsidy, but did not give details about the reasoning.

"There is an intent to develop transit legislation, "he said." I can't go beyond that.

"A policy will be developing. At this stage I can confirm that Hydro have been advised that there will be no subsidy. I think their profit is quite a bit improved this year."

Despite the deficit, Hydro Thursday reported net income of $19.9 million for the nine months ending Dec. 31, 1977. Income from its electricity and natural gas sales including sales of surplus power to United States customers is expected to more than make up for the transit deficit.

The $19.9 million was in contrast to the $19.7-million loss reported for the first six months of the fiscal year. It was also an improved performance over the nine months ended Dec. 31, 1976, when Hydro reported net income of $4.5 million.

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson, a member of the committee, said the Hydro situation is beginning to approximate that of B.C. Railway, another provincial Crown corporation with annual deficits in the $60-million range.

Hydro management said possibilities of increasing fares or cutting service — or both — are being studied, but no decisions have been made.

Larry Wight, Hydro's deputy manager for transit, told the committee that the transit deficit had increased from $5 million in 1970 to about $62 million in the current year.

Hydro general manager Norman Olsen said he was uncertain about the subsidy.

" Rates for gas and electricity for the next year are based on the assumption that there will be a transit subsidy."

Wolfe said Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis is the minister with responsibility for urban transit. Curtis could not be reached for comment..

Wight gave most of the details on Hydro's position.

The Vancouver harbor SeaBus is losing $1.5 million a year, he said, or about $1 a passenger. Hydro subsidiary Pacific Stage Lines is losing $3.55 per passenger. The Victoria transit operation costs $8.5 million a year, but has revenue of only $3.4 million, he said.

NASTY LAW GETS HEAVE

A proposed by-law to forbid sightseeing tour operators from making disparaging remarks about Victoria got the heave-ho Thursday.

The by-law would have let city hall cancel the trades licence of any operator who, while conducting a tour, said nasty things about the city, the province or the nation.

Tour guides wouldn't have been allowed to badmouth Victoria residents either.

But council's finance committee shelved the proposed by-law after Mayor Mike Young said he thought existing controls over sight-seeing vehicles are adequate.

The by-law was drawn up by city solicitor Jakob de Villiers because of increasing competition between tour operators along the Inner Harbor causeway.

Council has been expressing concern about the problem for sometime and asked de Villiers to come up with regulations to control the situation.

The finance committee, however, obviously thought his solution was a bit too drastic.

Young said the best way to deal with the problem is just to warn the operators they would all have their licences cancelled if the situation worsens.

"My feelings on the causeway are that if we have trouble there we'll just close it down . . . get rid of them all," said the mayor.

The committee agreed with Young and decided not to pass the by-law to council for consideration.

The by-law would have put tight regulations on the way sight-seeing vehicles are operated, including where they're allowed to park and on how tickets are sold.

It would have given the city the power to cancel a licence if any operator, driver, or guide "in the course of a tour, makes untoward or grossly disparaging or offensive remarks about Canada, the province, the city or the city's inhabitants, or gives false or misleading information concerning his tours."

The bylaw would also have forbidden tour operators from accosting pedestrians on the street, or offending passengers.

Tough Week For Dollar

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian dollar today fluctuated on the New York money markets within a narrow range of Thursday's post-Depression record low of 89.50 U.S. cents.

At noon, the dollar was changing hands at 89.52 cents. By 3:30 it had dropped to 89.32.

A foreign currency dealer for the Bank Canadian National said there had been relatively few commercial orders to buy or sell the dollar in "a very quiet" morning session.

"It's been a tough week and most traders are waiting until next week to get back into the market again," he said.

The dealer added that many traders may be reluctant take a position in the currency market because of the long weekend in the U.S. Monday is a public holiday to celebrate Washington's birthday.

The Canadian dollar hit a new post-Depression low of 89.50 U.S. cents at the close of New York markets Thursday, after dipping to 89.47 U.S. cents.

A trader for the Bank Canadian National attributed the decline to a statement by Finance Minister Jean Chretien in the Commons Thursday, that the dollar will be left to float, without any government effort to set a fixed rate.

When that statement reached the money markets, the trader said, "everybody just sold everything they were holding."

The trader said he thought Chretien's statement had been misinterpreted.

Meanwhile in London, the U.S. dollar edged lower in nervous trading on Europe's money markets today but recovered a bit in Tokyo and Southeast Asia.

One Zurich dealer said in the absence of any encouraging news, the U.S. currency was not in demand and was tending to drop.

AirWest Employees Veto Pact Proposal

A strike by AirWest Airlines Ltd. employees continues today after members of the Teamsters Union voted 68 per cent against accepting a tentative agreement.

The agreement was reached Wednesday and recommended for acceptance by union negotiator Wes Anderson.

However, a spokesman for the 95 employees, who have been off the job since Nov. 13, said today there are about 25 unsatisfactory items.

He singled out wages and contract language related to seniority as being two of the main problems.

"We have now put so much time and effort into this thing that we are not going back until we get a workable contract," he said.

"If that's not possible then we'll get jobs elsewhere," he said, adding that most of the employees don't really believe this will be necessary.

He said Anderson told the employees if they rejected the contract and the strike continues much longer, there is a chance the company will have to shut down.

But the employees' spokesman said most of his colleagues took this as a bluff by AirWest president Norm Gold.

Company general manager Dick Laidman indicated, however, in an interview today that the company is not in serious trouble.

He said the shut-down threat was probably thrown in by the union to get the employees to accept the contract.

Laidman said he feels there is still room to manoeuvre and that the problems could stem from "areas of misunderstanding."

"Without anybody getting uptight, we've got to sit down and review the situation."

No further meetings have been scheduled between the two parties.

The company has been using supervisory personnel to maintain service which includes a harbor-to-harbor run from Vancouver to Victoria.

NOT SO IMPRESSIVE

Robbie Sherrell, the man chosen to head the Insurance Corporation of B.C., does not seem to have quite the impressive qualifications attributed to him by Education Minister Pat McGeer, his present employer says.

McGeer, the minister responsible for ICBC, described Sherrell as a director of the Hartford Insurance Group.

"Good heavens, no, he's not within a hundred miles of that," J. Stewart Johnston, Hartford's vice-president in charge of personnel, said in a telephone interview from Hartford, Connecticut.

On Thursday, McGeer made public a government memo listing Sherrell's previous title as: executive director of the Hartford Insurance Group in Europe, reporting directly to the chairman of the board of Excess Insurance, a Hartford subsidiary.

Johnston said Sherrell was in charge of casualty claims for the Excess Insurance Co., a subsidiary of Hartford Insurance, and not an executive director.

McGeer said that it is ability, not a title, that ICBC is buying. Sherrell was recommended to the government by a consulting firm.

Steel Beam Tax Delayed

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has temporarily suspended a tax on wide-flanged steel beams that British Columbia says would have cost thousands of jobs in the province.

The finance department said the "limited and temporary remission" will last until June 29.

"The remission has been approved to cushion the transition to higher input costs for regional fabricators."

The announcement was made by the department after government ministers refused to give the same information to questioning MPs. They said Justice Minister Ron Basford would make the announcement in Vancouver later.

British Columbia MPs from both sides of the Commons had complained to the government about the tax on beams imported from Britain, Japan, France, South Africa and Luxemburg.

The tax was instituted at the request of Algoma Steel Ltd., of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., despite the fact that the company sold little of the steel to B.C. Algoma had appealed a decision of the anti-dumping tribunal.

The beams are used in construction.

Peterson Linked to Soviet Firm

Former Attorney-General Leslie Peterson and former Victoria alderman Geoffery Edgelow are directors of a Soviet-owned company a Tory MP hints may be involved in subversive activities in Canada.

The Vancouver-based firm, identified by Tory MP Tom Cossit as EMEC Trading Co., employs 18 to 21 Russian technicians and engineers in installing Russian-built turbines and generators in B.C. and across Canada.

Both Peterson and Edgelow today expressed surprise and dismay over the suggestion.

"There's not one iota of truth to them . . . absolutely not," Edgelow said.

Edgelow, who is secretary-director of the firm, said he has been contacted from time to time by members of the RCMP security service in relation to the activities of the firm and their employees. The last time was a little over a year ago.

"They asked me about EMEC, about what the company was doing, and when they became completely convinced it was doing exactly what it was formed to do, their inquiries ended. At no time did I get the impression they were doubtful."

The firm, incorporated by the federal consumer services branch as an extra-provincial company in 1973, has supplied two turbines to the Mica dam project, four to Site One dam on the Peace River, six bulk-type turbines to the Jenpeg project in Manitoba, and two turbines for New Brunswick Light and Power at Fredericton.

EMEC was named by Cossitt along with another Vancouver firm, Morflot Freight Liners Ltd., as Russian-owned companies carrying out business in Canada. Also named were Socan Aircraft of Calgary, Alta., and Stan-Canada Machinery Ltd. and Belarus Equipment of Canada Ltd., both of Toronto. Cossit said there are 45 to 50 other firms in Canada controlled by Soviet interests.

The MP challenged Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais to state whether the companies are supporting Soviet secret police police activities or extremist elements against Canada.

Although Cossit later said he has no proof the companies are involved in anything unusual, he said he is concerned because the RCMP security service had them under surveillance to see where their profits are going.

A spokesman for the RCMP security service in Vancouver declined today to comment.

"The firms are legitimate trading companies in Canada. We have a trade relationship with the Soviet Union. There's nothing unusual about that."

Ballard Blessed By CFL

Harold Ballard Flashes His Winning Smile

TORONTO (CP) — Harold Ballard is the new owner of Hamilton Tiger-Cats and figures the opposition to his ownership by two Hamilton politicians will work against them in future elections.

"They're just barnacles on the electors," the blusterous owner of Maple Leaf Gardens said of efforts by federal labor minister John Munro and Hamilton mayor Jack MacDonald to block the sale of the Ticats to Ballard.

Munro, who held several press conferences to voice his objections to the sale, represents Hamilton East riding in Parliament. He made several late bids to keep the Tiger-Cats in the hands of local owners.

"I really appreciate the way the people of Hamilton stood behind me all the way," said Ballard, Gardens owner and president of Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League, after being informed of the unanimous vote approving the sale at the Canadian Football League's annual meetings Thursday.

He said he had received "thousands, and I mean thousands" of names from Hamilton residents in the form of letters, by telegraph and petitions.

"I think Munro was the greatest help to me; Munro and MacDonald," said Ballard. "It (their opposition) was the turning point for me. I think they'll have a hell of a job winning their next elections."

The only other major concern was voiced by former Winnipeg Blue Bombers president Earle Hiebert, who attempted to drum up opposition after Ballard's comments about trying to do away with the gate-equalization payments.

The gate-equalization fund, in which the more prosperous clubs subsidize less fortunate teams, has kept a number of franchises from going under.

New Bombers president Ross Smith admitted harboring some "serious concerns" prior to the meetings, "but I would like to think that my mind was open."

"There was a good chance that we would vote against it (the sale), in fact quite a bit more than a 50-50 chance," he said. "But now, understanding the situation better, we voted for it."

Smith said there "is a better and more complete understanding of the more total situation surrounding the Hamilton scene" which resulted in Winnipeg's reassessment.

Winnipeg general manager Earl Lunsford, approached before the vote was announced, said Qmith had been backed into a corner by Hiebert, an action he said was taken by an individual and not necessarily endorsed by the Western Conference club.

The much-awaited vote by CFL teams on the transfer of ownership from Hamilton trucking magnate Mike DeGroote to Ballard was announced at a 5 p.m. news conference.

Smith was asked if he was concerned that Ballard, noted for his long memory when things go against him, might show any ill feelings at future meetings with the Winnipeg team.

"I think he can hand it out pretty well," Smith admitted. "If he has any animosity toward me, I think I'll find it out pretty quickly."

Ballard repeated earlier statements that he plans to press for addition of more seating at Ivor Wynne Stadium, the Ticats' 34,100-seat home park.

"Seats will be added if I have to do it myself," said Ballard. "I won't run after the taxpayers to pay for it. I also will have to look at ticket prices.

"We'll have a rough club like the people of Hamilton want. I don't expect to spend too much money but to get into the playoffs I will.

"I'm going to have an ambulance on each side of the field to carry off the others players."

Ballard, who confirmed his purchase price was $1.3 million, said he doesn't expect to make any money from the football club for at least two years. Why, then, did he buy it?

"I always wanted to own a football club," he said.

Advice to Canucks: Play More, Cry Less

Don Lever was on television Wednesday saying he didn't say what two newspapers said he said.

He'd never call his teammates on Vancouver Canucks gutless, he said, because he had too much respect for them. The problem, he suggested, was "the newspapers".

I have just read both newspapers and their accounts of a dressing room interview with Lever following an 8-3 loss in Detroit.

The Province quoted him thusly:

"There are 10 guys out there who are so gutless it's ridiculous. You don't have to mention their names. Everybody knows who they are."

The Sun's Arv Olson ran the following from Lever:

"There were at least 10 guys with no guts out there tonight and they should be ashamed of themselves."

But Lever now says he didn't call anybody gutless. Who is the poor hockey fan to believe?

If the newspapers are correct, Lever called 10 of his teammates gutless, then had a change of heart and found it easier to blame the papers than to admit he'd opened his mouth when he shouldn't have.

If Lever is correct, then two competing hockey writers decided independently to make up a statement from Lever, each opted for the word 'gutless', and each picked the arbitrary figure of 10.

Take your pick.

Not that it's a big deal. The Canucks have won five games in their last 26. If the team captain is wasting his time worrying about what he did or didn't say two days ago, it may give a clue to the problem.

Another clue is the speed and efficiency of the team's bush telegraph. Olson's story on the Detroit game appeared in Monday's paper, which doesn't even come out until 2 p.m. eastern time. Yet coach Orland Kurtenbach knew the contents well enough to give Olson a lengthy dressing down that night on the team's arrival in Washington, and to complain about the headline.

Again, a decision: Either we have a hell of a fast newsboy with a Sun route in Washington, or the coaching staff has its beady eyes on the reporters and its rabbit ears on the telephone. Who the hell's watching the hockey team?

No one plays the blame game as well as the Canucks. They've boycotted one radio post-game show because the man doing it says nasty things about the team on his editorials. They've blamed the home fans for not giving them the brand of support they feel they deserve. Now the newspapermen are at fault because they keep quoting the hockey players.

The sad part about this latest plea-copping is that it was done by the two men who warrant more respect than perhaps anyone else connected with the club.

Lever, the team captain, has been the epitome of guts. The injury that shattered his cheekbone should have kept him out far longer, but his pride drove him back. He has tried to make himself a leader, and driven no one harder than he's driven himself.

Even among those who may question some of his coaching theories, Kurtenbach generates enormous personal respect. He may not believe it but the media—almost to a man—are pulling for him and hoping that he makes it. They look at the talent that's been handed him and wonder how he or anyone could ever be expected to win with it—but they hope, because they admire the man.

But they've both come down with rabbit ears, It is a shame, and a waste.

* * *

For the record, chaps, I'd like to explain a few things about sports writers who follow hockey teams:

Contrary to what you might believe or prefer, a hockey reporter is not part of the team.

Newspapers spend large sums of money sending him on the road with you. He is there to write about what happens and/or might happen and file reports back to the people who pay your salary.

He has no axe to grind. He gets paid whether you go 80-0 or 0-80. He is not paid more for sensational stories than for ordinary stories.

He is not there to tear down— but he's not there to build up, either. He is there to report what's happening—on the ice, primarily, but off the ice, too, if it has any bearing on the plans or performance of the hockey team. It's his job.

I hope that helps, Don. There's just one thing I'd like to add—for you and for those 10 mysterious Canucks you either said or didn't say were gutless: Your job is to play hockey. No one is suggesting it isn't hard work. But on the average you make $90,000 per year for doing it, which is a hell of a lot more than is earned by the people who pay to watch you.

The next time you play at home, look up in those stands you find so inhospitable. You'll notice a lot of empty seats. There is a reason. The people are growing tired of you—tired of your losing, sure, but most of all tired of token effort.

Jets Want Permission To Seek Berth In NHL

WINNIPEG (CP) — Almost since the birth of the World Hockey Association, Winnipeg Jets have been one of its most attractive and successful franchises.

With superstar Bobby Hull leading the way, the Jets played before many of the largest crowds in the league and were one of the best road attractions the WHA had.

The Jets went public nearly four years ago and became one of the few franchises to show an annual operating profit.

But, today, the Jets are on the verge of a financial collapse that might well spell the end of the WHA after six seasons.

At a meeting Thursday, the team's management committee outlined a proposal that will either put the team into the National Hockey League or spell the end of it as it now exists. It may continue to operate in the WHA if previous owners Ben Hatskin and Saul Simkin exercise their option to resume private ownership and decide to continue in the league.

The committee said the WHA is being asked for permission to pursue an NHL franchise for Winnipeg without legal repercussions or compensation payments.

Hatskin and Simkin are being asked to write off the remaining $1.2 million still owed them from the sale of the Jets.

If the league and the previous owners agree to those proposals, the Jets will then attempt to raise $400,000 locally to see the team through to the end of the season.

If either the league or the previous owners balk, the Jets will cease to operate publicly and the franchise will be folded and turned back over to Hatskin and Simkin.

Bob Graham, chairman of the board, told a news conference the club is not overly confident about the future of the WHA and Jack McKeag, team president, said there are three teams that likely will not be back next season, leaving only five.

"The problem concerns the longevity of the league," said Graham. "We're concerned the WHA may still be around, but as a minor league. The days of the WHA pretending to be a major league are perhaps over."

Houston Aeros are pursuing an NHL franchise and Edmonton Oilers are also highly interested in the NHL.

The loss of the Jets, with their drawing power of Hull, Ulf Nilsson and Anders Hedberg, would almost certainly prompt the total collapse of the league.

The Jets are giving themselves 10 days to complete their latest plan. That deadline was set because that's how much time they have to respond to New York Rangers' offers for Hedberg and Nilsson.

If the Jets don't come within $20,000 of the Rangers' reported $475,000 a year each, the pair have the option to leave at the end of the season.

JAPANESE DEFEAT OLYMPICS

BURNABY (CP) — An all-star men's university volleyball team from Japan used a quick attack and strong blocking to defeat British Columbia Olympics 15-4, 9-15, 15-7, 15-4 in an exhibition match in this Vancouver suburb Thursday night.

Olympics, B.C. senior champions and Canadian finalists last year, were the first club to win a game from the powerful Japanese side, which earlier on its tour downed University of Victoria and University of B.C.

Red Wings Find Respect

By The Canadian Press

Detroit Red Wings, the lowliest National Hockey League club in the 1976-77 season, have found new respect in the current campaign, thanks largely to first-round junior draft pick Dale McCourt.

Rookie McCourt scored on his first three shots Thursday night to pace the Red Wings to a 5-3 home-ice victory over Atlanta Flames, the Red Wings' 21st victory of the season. It gave them 50 points and, at this stage, a tie with Pittsburgh Penguins for the league's final wild-card playoff position.

While the accomplishment doubtless appears modest to many, it represents a distinct improvement for the Red Wings, who were 16-55-9 for 41 points last season.

In other games, New York Islanders edged Colorado Rockies 5-4, Buffalo Sabres blanked Los Angeles Kings 5-0 and Minnesota North Stars upset Philadelphia Flyers 4-0. (See summaries, standings page 29).

McCourt, a 21-year-old centre who was the first choice in the NHL draft last June, provided Detroit with a 2-0 first-period lead with goals at 2:59 and 13:22, the second score coming on a 50-foot shot on a power play while Atlanta defenceman Greg Fox served a hooking minor.

The Flames rallied with second-period goals by Guy Chouinard and Bill Clement, but McCourt then gave the Red Wings a lead they never relinquished, taking a pass from Paul Woods and beating Flames goalie Yves Belanger

Khalsa, Nooksak Move Up

Both Khalsa, which topped Division I in the regular season, and Nooksak, the Division II winner, were among the seven squads advancing to the Gold flight playoff during elimination rounds battles between the two divisions of the Victoria and District Senior "B" Volleyball League on Thursday.

Others advancing to the Gold flight were Namdor II, Great Pumpkin, Namdor I, Royal Roads and Mt. Douglas Grads. Dropping to the Silver flight were Multigrade, CFB Esquimalt, Spice, Zooid, Camosun College, Scorpions and Allenby-Ford.

A's Trim Blues

Victoria Athletics held two-goal advantages at the end of both the first and second periods en route to a 6-4 decision over Chemainus Blues in South Island Big Six Hockey League play Thursday night at Pearkes Arena.

Ross Swanton set the pace for Athletics by scoring the only two goals in the first period. Danny Peck, Brian Hamilton, John Entzminger and Mark Purdy added single goals for Athletics, who were ahead 5-3 going into the third frame.

Rick Boyd (2), Greg Bush and Jim Luck replied for Blues.

Tag Crown Retained

Guy Mitchell and John Quinn downed The Avenger and Wild Don Wayt on a disqualification in the feature tag team championship match of a professional wrestling card Thursday night at Memorial Arena.

However, since the decision was by disqualification, The Avenger and Wayt retained their title.

Suspensions Follow Brawl

CALGARY (CP) — A bench-clearing brawl in a Western Canada Hockey League game Sunday in New Westminster has resulted in league president Ed Chynoweth suspending two players and fining one team Thursday.

Chynoweth said Larry Jones of the New Westminster Bruins was suspended for five games for being the first player to leave the bench during the brawl in a game with Billings Bighorns. Billings' Gary Plamondon received a three-game suspension for leading the Bighorns' bench into the fight.

In the only game played Thursday, Erle Switzer scored the winner at 7:38 of the third period, as Regina Pats nipped the visiting Medicine Hat Tigers 4-3.

MEDICINE HAT (3)—Merlin Malinowski, Cal Halasz, Curt Broadhead; REGINA (4)—Erle Switzer, Doug Wickenheiser, Dirk Graham, Gerald Minor. Attendance—1,585.

Reynolds Rolls Along

Reynolds Roadrunners, who came up with a 13-0 record in regular-season Greater Victoria High School Girls' Basketball League play, kept right on rolling Thursday night during opening games of the Lower Island championship tournament at Victoria High School.

Roadrunners had little difficulty downing Esquimalt 56-23 while Mt. Douglas Ramblers defeated Spectrum 71-40, Parkland tripped Belmont 47-37 and Victoria crushed Oak Bay, 66-28.

Elaine Harris sank 16 points to lead the Reynolds' attack while Anna Shotton was high for Esquimalt with nine.

Mt. Douglas was led by a 15-point production from Donna Braden and Heather Boyd had the same number for Spectrum.

Stasia Gallagher dunked 23 points to spark the Parkland offence while Bobbie Chalmers and Lori Jackson each canned 12 for Belmont.

Victoria's Sandy Lewis had 21 points and Tricia Bell hit for 12 to top Oak Bay.

The tournament continues today at Mt. Douglas, starting at 4, and resumes at 5 p.m. Saturday at Reynolds. The final is scheduled for 8.

The top five teams from the tourney advance to the Island championship playoff Feb.23-25 in Courtenay.

In Greater Victoria Boys' League play, Belmont Braves thumped Esquimalt Dockers 78-55 to pad a lead in the "A" Division and Oak Bay Bays bounced Parkland Panthers 79-46 to stay ahead in the "B" Division.

Tom Raine set the pace for Braves, who are now 8-1, with 12 points. Bill Barber matched that total for Dockers.

Bays, unbeaten in 10 starts, were led by a 26-point effort from Wayne Andrews.

Good Samaritan Shames a Cynic

DEAR ABBY: To all those cynics who say that everyone is out for himself, I would like to relate the following incident:

Over the Thanksgiving holiday I visited some out-of-state friends. At the airport for my flight home, the limousine driver dropped me off at the wrong airline entrance, which was a long walk from the right airline. I had three heavy suitcases and I was getting very, very tired. I paused for a moment to adjust my suitcases when a young many about my age (27 or 28) came along, took the two heaviest ones and asked, "Where to?"

I told him, but in my cynical heart, Abby, I kept praying that he didn't run off with my suitcases.

We chatted as we walked, and he told me that in his spare time he comes to the airport just to help people. I must admit that I became a bit suspicious. After all, how many people do you find today who do that kind of thing?

When we reached my gate, he set my suitcases down, and said cheerily, "Have a nice flight." Then he quickly walked off before I even had the time to say, "Thank you."

When it finally dawned on me that all this fellow wanted was to help people, I felt ashamed of myself for being suspicious.

Abby, I'm not so naive as to think that everyone who does something for others does it out of the goodness of his heart, but it's nice to know that there are still some people in the world who aren't out only for themselves.

MANCHESTER

DEAR MANCHESTER: I don't want to discourage good deeds, but Good Smaritans who make a habit of hanging around airports to "help" people could find themselves in trouble.

For example, say some grateful traveler forces a dollar or two on Good Smaritan, he (Good Sam) is in violation of working at the airport without a licence or union membership, for which skycaps pay a pretty penny. Also, whether a Good Samaritan helps people for fun or profit, in effect he's competing with those who "help" people for a living.

DEAR ABBY: That letter signed HAD ENOUGH sent my blood pressure right through the ceiling.

HAD ENOUGH complained because after dinner all the men (and a few of the women) retired to the living room while the rest of the women got busy clearing the table and doing the dishes.

Well, I too, have "had enough." I'm sick and tired of going to family gatherings (it's not even MY family — they belong to my husband), and just because I'm a woman, I'm expected to clean up.

I have had it up to here with the women rushing around waiting on the men and cleaning up while the men go into the living room to shoot the breeze or watch a game on TV.

Does a deep voice and a beard excuse a person from kitchen duty? Today, when both men and women work outside the home, the old saying "A woman's place is in the kitchen" is stupid, unfair and out of date.

LIBBY.

DEAR LIBBY: (Is that short for "liberated"?) I'm with you. For a letter from another woman who has also "had enough" — but for an entirely different reason — read on:

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the wife who complained because some of the wives at the family Christmas dinner didn't help with the dishes, and for that reason she dreaded the large family dinners: I feel sorry for her.

On Christmas Day there are many wives who are without family, food and even heat in the house.

There are wives whose husbands are drunk, unemployed or mentally unstable. Some men beat their wives and children, and turn Christmas into a day of sorrow and terror. There are wives whose husbands are deceased prematurely, or whose children are sick, handicapped or runaways.

There are wives who know that their husband (or a child) is terminally ill and will never see another Christmas.

So if HAD ENOUGH dreads Christmas because she will have to clean up without the assistance from a couple of wives, she will never appreciate the fact that Christmas is a time for loving, forgiving and celebrating the birth of Christ.

ALSO HAD ENOUGH.

Jackie Starts A New Job

NEW YORK (AP) — Jacqueline Onassis, who quit her job at Viking Press because of a novel that depicted Senator Edward Kennedy as U.S. president and the target of an assassination plot, has taken a job at Doubleday and Co. as an associate editor.

Sam Vaughan, vice-president and publisher of Doubleday, confirmed today that Mrs. Onassis began work this week. He declined to disclose her salary.

"We felt she's a good editor," Vaughan said when asked why Mrs. Onassis was hired.

Mrs. Onassis worked as a consultant-editor for two years for Viking before she resigned in October, citing her objection to the novel Shall We Tell The President, by Jeffrey Archer, which Viking published. The novel puts the last of the Kennedy brothers into the White House in 1980 and tells of a plot to kill him.

The New York Post reported that Mrs. Onassis brought Doubleday a manuscript she first saw and liked while working at Viking. The book was written by Dr. Stephen Appelbaum, a psychoanalyst at the Menninger Clinic in Topeka, Kan., and examines new therapies, the newspaper said.

Vaughan said Mrs. Onassis has "a number of books she's interested in."

An Answer to Junk Snacks

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS® ...it tells you how

Tired of snacking on plastic-wrapped nutritional disasters? Weary of paying outrageous prices for potato chips and pretzels? If so, then do what Mother reader Joan Dickenson did and make these Snackin' Crackers!

My family used to beg me to bring home salty snacks from the grocery store, but I didn't like the idea of feasting on nutritionally empty foods. So, I did some experimentation in my kitchen and came up with some crackers that are inexpensive, nutritious, easy to make and my family loves them!

SNACKIN' CRACKERS

- 2 cups whole wheat flour
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ cup sesame seeds
- ¼ cup raw wheat germ
- ¼ cup vegetable oil
- ½ cup cold water
- Water (amount varies).

Blend together the first four ingredients. Then add the oil and mix well with a fork. Pour in the cold water, mix and continue to add water a tablespoon at a time until the dough is soft and workable. (Flours very in their ability to absorb moisture, so I can't tell you how much more water to use.)

Turn the dough out onto a floured board and knead it for at least 10 minutes (the longer the better).

Pull off a golf ball-sized lump of dough and roll it into a ball. Then — using a floured rolling pin — roll the dough out until it's cardboard thin . . . as thin as it will get without tearing. You should now have cracker that's about 5 inches in diameter. Repeat this procedure until you have used all the dough.

Next, heat an ungreased cast iron skillet as hot as you can get it. Bake each cracker in the skillet until it's light brown on the bottom. The flip it over and just barely brown the other side. Allow the crackers to cool thoroughly on a towel before storing them in an airtight container. You can vary this basic recipe in dozens of ways. For example, instead of using two cups of whole wheat flour, you can use one cup of finely ground corn, rye, oats, buckwheat or rice and one cup of whole wheat flour. or, you can replace the sesame seeds with one-half cup of sunflower seeds, poppy seeds, soy grits, shredded coconut or chopped or ground nuts.

You can make your crackers real gems of good nutrition by substituting a quarter cup of wheat germ.

Remember — you don't have to eat "junk food" from the store. Not when you can make really good treats like these crackers.

Nixon Embarrassing: Haldeman

★ 'OFFICIAL' FILES HENRY'S NUDES

NEW YORK (AP) — John Ehrlichman used to send official-looking folders to Henry Kissinger containing nude photos of starlets dated by the former state secretary, H. R. Haldeman says in his new book.

The former chief of staff wrote in The Ends of Power that his colleague on the White House staff spent hours compiling the photos together with forged memos of Nixon's "bizarre 'demands' for certain types of action."

Ehrlichman would dispatch the memos one by one at various times and places, Haldemann said.

"They always looked official—until Henry opened them and saw the nudes," said Haldeman, who also recounted that Nixon secretly had a kick out of Kissinger's love life.

NEW YORK (UPI) — H. R. Haldeman, chief of Richard Nixon's White House staff, says Nixon was "stiff, artificial" and downright embarrassing with individuals, often presenting them with mementos as if he were a basketball player "handing off a ball behind his back."

Haldeman, whom Nixon described as one of the finest "public servants" he had met, says in his book that Nixon could never relax because of a deep-set insecurity.

"He never let us forget that his mother had to scrub bedpans," writes Haldeman.

The book also paints a vindictive Nixon wanting "to go for the jugular." Haldeman recalls the "seamy" episode with Ted Kennedy and "one of my orders" for a 24-hour surveillance of the Massachusetts senator to "catch him in the sack with one of his babes."

Nixon hated formal dinners and always wanted to speed them, even saying once that for the next gathering to "put a stopwatch on it. I'll bet we can finish dinner in under an hour."

One staffer at the White House, Haldeman recalls, used to mimic Nixon's awkwardness at greeting guests in the Oval Office and handing them a memento — cuff-links, tiepins — of the visit from a desk drawer.

"He (Nixon) would abruptly turn away, take one from the drawer — and without looking back — thrust it toward his surprised guest, like a pro basketball guard handing off a ball behind is back.

"Then he would turn to the man and tell his standard joke that never, in my memory, drew a laugh: 'Give this to your wife or your secretary, whichever you prefer.'"

At dinners, he hated soup and after the first state banquet at the White House exploded: "We've got to speed up these dinners. They take forever. So why don't we just leave out the soup course."

He wouldn't be interrupted with any arguments and "plowed on: 'Men don't like soup.'"

That afternoon Haldeman, when asking Nixon's valet Manolo Sanchez about the president's suit, learned what was wrong with it:

"He spilled soup down his vest," the valet said.

Nixon, Haldeman in those days

"Only once in my entire relationship with him over many years were my wife and I invited to an informal dinner at his home, and that was in 1962.

"To this day he doesn't know how many children I have or anything else about my private life; he never asked and I was his closest professional associate."

Haldeman, whose hair is now longer than the brush cut he had in the White House, said that the "Berlin Wall . . . I am supposed to have constructed around Nixon" resulted from what became Haldeman's secret.

"I soon realized that this president had to be protected from himself. Time and again I would receive petty, vindictive orders."

Haldeman also says the former president while campaigning would slip away in the middle of the night "to flea-bitten" coffee shops and when tired often would appear to be drunk.

"I would call for him at his hotel room in a small midwestern city in the morning and find that he was missing. Some time in the early dawn he had gotten out of bed and slipped away, with a nervous Secret Service man tailing him. We'd search all over town until we found the candidate looking haggard and wan in a flea-bitten coffee shop."

Haldeman believes these "post-midnight excursions" were Nixon's way of "letting of steam when things were very tense or if he was very tired."

Invitation to a War Denied by Aides

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former foreign affairs aides to Richard Nixon are disputing H. R. Haldeman's claim that the Soviet Union asked the United States to take part in a nuclear strike against China in 1969.

There was no denial, however, that the Russians were considering a pre-emptive nuclear attack on China's atomic-testing facilities during that period. One U.S. official said the Russians' thinking was common knowledge.

A Chinese foreign ministry spokesman in Peking said it was not Chinese practice to comment on such reports.

There also was no comment from Russian officials.

Haldeman, the former president's chief-of-staff who now is in prison for his Watergate crimes, makes the claims in his book, The Ends of Power, which goes on sale today.

However, Henry Kissinger, Nixon's national security adviser at the time, said, "This is not true," when asked Thursday about Haldeman's report that Russia had asked the United States to participate in the attack.

Kissinger, appearing on NBC's Today show, said: "All the papers on foreign-policy matters run across my desk and I do not recall any such event and I would not have forgotten it."

In Peking, a U.S. official who asked not to be identified said today he doubts the United States was invited to take part. "The Russians knew full well what our reaction would have been," he said.

And George Keegan, a retired major-general who was then the U.S. Air Force's intelligence chief, said he was unaware of any official, high-level Soviet invitation to the United States.

But Keegan acknowledged that "a number of lesser Soviet officials made discreet inquiries and suggestions to lesser Americans unofficially to determine whether the United States would be interested in participating in a surgical strike against Chinese nuclear installations."

"I am unaware of (discussions on) higher levels where Kissinger or Nixon would know directly," Keegan said.

MORE DIRTY TRICKS?

NEW YORK (AP) — The Washington Post's editor says his newspaper obtained portions of The Ends of Power by H. R. Haldeman at no cost beyond normal reporting expenses, while two other newspapers say a mysterious woman caller offered to sell them the book.

"The story is infinitely less complicated than you suspect," editor Benjamin Bradlee said Thursday night in a telephone interview in which he denied receiving a call from the woman. "We got it from someone whose name you don't know, whose affiliation you don't know. Nor have you ever heard of them."

The Post published in Thursday's editions what it said was material from the latter two-thirds of the book, prompting early publication of the 352-page volume itself—which sells for $12.95—in addition to high-priced excerpts.

Suspicions of the publisher, Times Books, and the Times syndication service centred on a possible security breach at the Scranton, Pa., press, where it was produced.

In part, the suspicions were based on The Post's statement that it did not obtain all of the book, which was bound from printed pages collected into 11 sections called "signatures."

Although three guards oversaw the binding, executives believe The Ends of Power was most vulnerable to the theft of substantial portions in sequence at this stage.

Further, the New York Times said that a "Nancy Collins" checked out of a Scranton motel Thursday. Nancy Collins is the Washington Post reporter credited with getting the book. The reporter declined comment.

PM Won't Figure Job Plan Results

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau declined Thursday requests by the opposition to put a figure on the number of jobs that would be created through projects announced after the conclusion of this week's federal-provincial premiers' meeting.

Trudeau, responding to questions in the Commons, said it was the hope of all the premiers as the three-day conference ended Wednesday that the meeting will help the economy by inspiring confidence which will encourage investment and create jobs.

But he told Conservative Leader Joe Clark it would be difficult to quantify the exact number of jobs created.

Opposition critics had complained before, during and after the special meeting that the federal government had proposed no specific measures to provide immediate relief to the depressed economy.

During January, there were 991,000 unemployed — the highest total ever — according to official government estimates. And this week the value of the dollar in U.S. terms has fallen to a 40-year low despite efforts of the federal government to boost confidence through the premiers' meeting.

Clark said in the Commons that the federal government had no estimates out of the conference on the number of new jobs "just as it had no proposals going into the conference."

He asked how many new jobs in the fishing industry would be created through extension of the 200-mile territorial limit, through the new construction of grain facilities on the West Coast and through government incentives to promote investment in the auto industry. The items had been mentioned in the final premiers' statement.

"I will not attempt to give him (Clark) a number," Trudeau replied.

The prime minister suggested Clark ask fishermen what the extension of the 200-mile limit will mean to them. "They won't know an exact figure, but they'll know it means jobs."

Result Mixed: Bennett

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett said Thursday the British Columbia delegation to the first ministers' economic conference in Ottawa returned with mixed feelings, but with their plans and hopes unshaken.

Bennett, addressing a news conference in Richmond after his return from the three-day meeting, said he had gone to Ottawa with a broad approach for attacking the country's economic problems.

"I was trying to set up a structure for change . . . developing not only in the economy but in other areas, national policy as apart from unilaterally-imposed federal policy," said Bennett.

One disappointment, he said, was that the other first ministers weren't prepared to discuss an all-encompassing economic plan.

"We said that to get an economic plan for the country you couldn't do single things in isolation because of their impact on each other," the premier said. "Our researchers and economists developed what would be a modern economic plan for the country that could integrate us into the world economy."

Bennett said the limited aspirations of the other conference participants impeded discussion of this plan.

"The long sessions on sectoral topics . . . didn't allow for the type of discussion we wanted," said Bennett.

But despite the conference short-comings, Bennett said, it was an historic occasion and "a lot of the country will be better off because the meeting did take place."

Bennett said a number of moves were made at the conference toward the type of provincial input in national decision-making that B.C. had sought, "even working toward more liberalized trade" in the international Geneva trade talks.

Mary T. Moore Stars In Musical Comedy

With the perception, humor and sophisticated style that characterize her multi-award-winning performances, Mary Tyler Moore takes a look at the vicissitudes of the current turbulent, changing decade in a fast-paced hour that combines song, dance, sketch and mime.

She does it in a show entitled "Mary Tyler Moore's How To Survive the '70s and Maybe Even Bump Into Happiness," to be broadcast Wednesday on Channels 2 and 6 at 8:30 pm. and on Channel 7 at 10 p.m.

Guest stars Harvey Korman and John Ritter, and several surprise guests, join Miss Moore in her first television show since she wrapped up the highly successful seven-year run of "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," which received a total of 28 Emmy Awards.

Combining her talents as an actress and as a musical-comedy performer, the area in which she got her start in show business, Miss Moore, with the help of her guests, touches upon most of "the things that are driving us crazy" — and many that are not — in this changing decade of stress, strain, "How To" books, singles bars, pollution, tennis, jogging, group therapy, far-out fashions, tough steaks and angry waiters.

Sketches include Miss Moore teaming up for a tennis doubles match with a trigger-tempered Korman, whose desire to win borders on the maniacal. With her guest stars, she also narrates a fashion show where the "models" range from a Farrah-Fawcett look-alike to a senior citizen in blue jeans and a Peter Frampton T-shirt.

Among the musical production numbers, under the direction of choreographer Tony Stephens, are Mary and guests singing and dancing to "Zodiac Dancers," "I Want to Be Happy" and "The Jog." Miss Moore also solos "Listen Here."

Mary Tyler Moore's "How to Survive the '70s and Maybe Even Bump Into Happiness" is an MTM Production, produced and directed by Bill Persky.

20th Grammy Show To Air Thursday

Popular television and recording star John Denver will host the 20th Annual Grammy Awards Show to be broadcast Thursday, Feb. 23 on Channels 7 and 13 at 9 p.m.

This year's Grammy special is the 8th consecutive television broadcast of the awards presentation. It will be Denver's first appearance on the show, which annually honors the outstanding artistic and technical achievements in the recording industry. The winners are selected by secret ballot by creative people in the music community who are members of the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences.

The special will include announcement and presentation of the awards for Record of the Year, Album of the Year, Song of the Year, and Best New Artist, as well as the announcement of the newest inductees into the Recording Hall of Fame, honoring recordings made before the inception of the Grammy Awards in 1958.

PAYOFF PUZZLE

Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle

CLUES ACROSS:

4. SEWN not sawn. The clue suggests a completed job, favoring SEWN rather than sawn. A thing sawn (perhaps with a single cut) may hardly be adequate to show "workmanship."

6. REPULSION not revulsion. REPULSION is suitably akin to loathing. "Revulsion" often applies to a sudden change or reversal of feeling and is less apt in the case given.

7. TASTY not hasty. One may doubt if a hastily prepared sandwich can rightly be termed a hasty sandwich.

8. POET not poem. One thinks of a stylistic influence as being something broader than a single poem.

11. SOFA not soft. Since all cushions are soft, SOFA is the more contributive answer.

15. JEER not leer or peer. To JEER is something a person is apt to do "with" a characteristic expression on the face. To leer, in effect, practically is to wear a certain expression; it's hardly a case of an appropriate facial expression going "with" the leering. "Peer" links up less strongly with the theme of expressiveness.

16. WEAR not fear. Certainly there is WEAR in the "car" itself; but the element of fear is in the driver, or in motor racing.

17. RAGS not rage. A man who gets in a rage is apt to do so on a number of occasions; it's hardly a question of a particular time he can put behind him (such as a period of early poverty epitomized by "RAGS").

19. WORD not wood. Seeking a precise degree of strength of statement, a writer might choose a slightly stronger WORD. In a job calling for strength of timber, there is little point in choosing a merely slightly stronger wood.

22. LITTER not letter. The clue hints that you ought to, or don't, pick it up again (there's nothing stopping you, so why not do it?). Normally, however, one simply picks up a dropped letter

CLUES DOWN:

1. DECAY not delay. You want it entirely free from DECAY, but you may expect a reasonable delay.
2. DUSTY not gusty. Since one can imagine a gusty breeze bringing a certain freshness, DUSTY is stronger answer.
3. OILY not wily. The wily type is hardly likely to let that fact show through on first meeting.
4. SNIP not snap. SNIP is more securely apt. The thread may be quite awkward to snap off flush, without untoward effects.
9. HOPE not rope. HOPE is more characteristically the sort of thing one might be said to "cling to." A rope is clung to only in special circumstances of which the clue makes no mention.
12. REFUSED not refuted. Being "used to slavish acquiescence" is a matter of getting one's own way in general, rather than of having one's opinions endorsed as correct.
13. BRITISH not brutish. In the sort of fiction where there is often some confusion as to who is on the side of whom, the idea of an agent "turning out" to be BRITISH is more apt than the case of brutish.

Mrs. Silgant of Burnaby, B.C. has a cast iron mechanical bank consisting of a donkey, a dog, a house and a dog house. As the donkey kicks a coin into the house, the dog comes out of the kennel. It is Pat'd Aug. 3, 1880, and would it be valuable?

I dread to think — maybe $200, maybe $2,000. If it has been in the family for years it can't very well be a reproduction and if it still works it is presumably in generally good condition. The fact that I can't find a listing on it at all suggests it may be quite rare, in which case $2,000 may not be far from the mark.

The first mechanical banks came out in 1869. Collectors first became interested in them about 20 years ago since when prices have gone up and up. Today, the most common of the old banks list at around $100 while the rarest are alleged to be fetching $5,000.

Inevitably that kind of money brings out the reproductions. There are recasts, remakes and plain fakes. Molds can be made from originals and new banks simply recast. Remakes are actually new inventions — banks which never existed before, assembled from other toys and passed off as originals. Fakes are made from scratch with intent to defraud — and are therefore likely to be very good.

Telling the difference takes a great deal of experience and comparison of known originals with known fakes. Originals were finely crafted with pieces fitting snugly and finished with a good smooth paint job intended to last for years. Reproductions rarely fit together as well; joints may overlap and the paint may be roughened to give the illusion of age.

Don't forget all this refers to mechanical banks) banks with moving parts. Stationary banks, also known as still banks, are also very collectible but trade at only about one tenth the price of the mechanicals.

Ever wondered where auctioneers get that sing-song chant from and how they manage to keep it up hour after hour without getting a sore throat? There may be some who are born with the gift or picked it up on the stump, but the rest of them take a course.

Auctioneering is a profession — a highly skilled one with a great deal to be learned about auctioneering school in Lacombe, Alberta, (P.O. Box 678) if anyone is interested, where they after an intensive two week course which includes 50 hours of bid calling instructions which students practise with the most modern in sound and video recording equipment by means of which they can check their own good and bad points.

If there is a similar institution in the East I shall doubtless soon hear about it and pass on the good news.

SOAP OPERA SCENE

Old-Hat Plot Convenient

By STEVEN SCHEUER

NEW YORK — During the recent blizzard in the Northeast, I found myself deeply entrenched in front of my TV set for a marathon look at the various soaps. Everyone has his or her favorite soap, so I won't step on any sensibilities and list the ones I found the best or the worst. However, I took a long look at the various plotlines being explored during this given period and was struck by the fact that some soaps still rely on the old-hat plot conveniences such as amnesia, while others dealt with more everyday issues.

"Search for Tomorrow," one of CBS's long running shows, dealt with the subject of middle-age marriage in two diverse cases: in one, the couple actually married; in the other, the man and woman didn't marry because they couldn't overcome some heavy obstacles. A nice scene between newlyweds Stephanie and John Wyatt and their offspring from other marriages, Wendy and Susan, showed how adults and kids can come to terms with a new way of life. On the other hand, Greg Hartford couldn't see how his loving, but jealous, daughter Meredith was really the case of his thwarted attempts to get Joanne Vincente to say yes to his marriage proposal. Both these plotlines seemed plausible and were handled with restraint on the part of the writers and the actors.

While "Search" was staying within the boundaries of credibility, "The Young and Restless" dabbled in the convoluted machinations of a middle-aged woman, Kay Chancellor, with an all too obvious yen for a younger man; "All My Children" had Ruth battling a brief bout with possible amnesia; "Ryan's Hope" found Delia sufferng from hysterical blindness; "Guiding Light" also focused on Eve Stapleton's blindness; and "As the World Turns" had a mother (Nancy Hughes) planning a dinner party to which she was inviting her doctor-son (Bob), a new girl in town she hopes will interest her son, plus the son's ex-wife (Lisa) — how sophisticated (or dumb) can you get?

One final word about my ramdom sampling. "Love of Life" had the kind of sexy love scene one seldom finds on prime-time TV. It took place between Mia (Veleka Gray) and Ben (Chandler Hill Harben) and was full of passionate kisses, prolonged embraces and a semi-nude, no-holds-barred pillow fight.

PLOT PORTENTS. Even past acquaintances sense a change in Ron Becker in "The Young and the Restless." Jill thinks she's going to marry Derek and plans her wedding gown. Leslie is so upset over the disclosures in Lorie's book, she may never play the piano again — oh, no!

Patti is beginning to bloom under Mike's friendship in "Days of Our Lives," finding someone to share her problems. David may have problems of his own working with Linda, but boss Bob is proud of the boy. It looks like Marlena may be the only one to reach Fred Barton despite all the rebuffs.

The Christina-David-Jeff triangle continues on "All My Children." Chris tells Jeff she really loves David even though their relationship has changed — and Dave succumbs to his conniving wife's ardent advances, but afterwards, says "never again."

There's plenty going on in "One Live to Live" this week. Karen is beaten up by Aldo and tells Larry it's rape. Melinda, Dorian and Peter continue their turbulent triangular affair. Richard proposes to Becky and Jenny tells Brad she's pregnant. Everything but the Bubonic plague!

PREVUE PAYOFF PUZZLE

THIS WEEK'S PRIZE IS $150.00
ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE ON PAGE 2

PREVUE PAYOFF PUZZLE is the intriguing word puzzle game the whole family will enjoy and have an opportunity to win a big cash award every week!

THIS CROSSWORD is not a game of chance or a draw. It tests your knowledge of words and pays off for EVERY correct solution. All you have to do is complete each of the words in a criss-cross format. Clues are provided . . . even a word list which has all the correct answers, plus some you'll have to eliminate. But there are no trick words or guessing . . . careful thought will make you a winner! So start and play today!

PLEASE NOTE: EACH ENTRY MUST BE IN A SEPARATE ENVELOPE

CONTEST RULES

1. Solve the Prevue Payoff Puzzle by filling in the missing letters to make the words that you think best fit the clues. To do this read each clue carefully for you must think them out and give every word its true meaning.

2. Check the word list. It has all the correct answers plus some you will have to eliminate.

3. You need not be a subscriber to this newspaper in order to enter. You may submit as many entries as you wish on the entry blank printed in this newspaper or exact-sized, clear, hand-drawn facsimiles of the printed entry blank. NO MECHANICALLY PRODUCED, PRINTED, MIMEOGRAPHED, etc. copies of the entry blank will be accepted. Each entry must contain the contestant's name, address and phone number or it will not be accepted.

4. Anyone is eligible to enter this contest except employees (and members of their families) of Victoria Press Ltd.

5. All entries MUST be mailed and bear a postmark. The paper is not responsible for entries lost or delayed in the mail. Entries for each week's contest not received for judging by 12 noon the following Wednesday are not eligible.

6. To qualify, you must write your answer to one of the clues on the outside of the envelope. See coupon for instructions.

7. Prevue will award the current prize to the contestant who sends in an all correct solution. If more than one all correct solution is received the prize money will be shared equally. If no all correct solution is received, $50 will be added to the following week's prize.

8. There is only one correct solution to each puzzle and only the correct answer can win. The decision of the judges is final and all contestants agree to abide by the judges decision. All entries become the property of Prevue. Only one prize will be awarded to a family unit.

9. Everyone has the same opportunity to win for EVERY QUALIFIED ENTRY WILL BE CHECKED and the winner announced. No claiming is necessary.

10. Entries must be mailed to Prevue Payoff Puzzle, Victoria Press Ltd., Box 300, Victoria, B.C. V8W 2N4. One entry per envelope.

11. Prevue reserves the right to correct any typographical errors which may appear during the puzzle game.

Two-Storey Home Different

Everything about this two storey, three bedroom, non-basement home is boldly different, from its general impression of super-abundant space to its many convenience and luxury features.

The wide, planter-flanked entrance leads into a large and dramatic foyer, which is directly beneath the sky-light and hence, has excellent natural light. The sense of openness and spaciousness begins in this foyer, as you face the open circular staircase and sunken family room or glance left to the sunken living room. The living and dining rooms are really a two-level combination room, divided by a double-faced brick fireplace, opening to both rooms. The living room has a lofty vaulted ceiling to add to the dramatic effect.

The kitchen is an extended U-shape, connecting to the breakfast nook via two-level counter. The nook may be finished either as a snack bar or with full dining facilities. The dining room separates from the kitchen/nook via pocket door for separation of formal and casual dining.

From the nook two steps down to the large family room, which features sliding doors to the wrap-around patio-greatly facilitating outdoor dining and other activities in fine weather.

A large utility and storage room connecting to the family room, garage and patio, provides excellent facilities for a mud room, home workshop or what you will. The vanity bath is centrally located and accessibile to all areas of the downstairs.

A large utility and storage room connecting to the family room garage and patio, provides excellent facilities for a mud, room home workshop or what you will. The vanity bath is centrally located and accessible to all areas of the downstairs.

The master bedroom is a complex of convenience and luxury features, featuring a vaulted ceiling, front and rear decks accessible through sliding glass doors, sheltered storage area, full walk-in closet and three piece ensuite bath with shower and linen storage. Both of the secondary bedrooms have generous closets, good natural lighting and easy access to a wrap-around balcony.

The central bath and utility room features double vanity sinks separate bath and toilet and side-by-side washer and dryer. Double linen closets adjoin the secondary bedrooms.

This exciting contemporary design combines the luxury of spaciousness with the convenience of practical and functional layout, and is almost guaranteed to make a house-proud family of its owners.

Plans for design #77-2361 may be obtained at a cost of $70 for the first set and $9 for each additional set, plus $4 for postage and handling. B.C. residents please include 7 per cent sales tax.

Send for the current edition of Select Home Designs, Series #34, featuring imaginative decorating and home improvement ideas plus 350 quality home plans of every type. Available for $.25 ($1.75 plus 50 cents postage and handling). To order these items please send cheque or money order payable to Home of the Week. TV MAILBAG

By THOM MEAD

HOLLYWOOD — The TV Mailbag:

Q. I understand Dick Van Dyke is quitting the "Carol Burnett Show." Why is he leaving the show? — J.M., Cherry Hill, N.J.

A. In a statement issued through CBS, Van Dyke said it was becoming too difficult for him to commute back and forth between Los Angeles and Arizona, where his family lives. He said he was not interested in sacrificing his family at the expense of doing the weekly show. As a result, Van Dyke is going back to Arizona.

Q. Why are more and more daytime soap operas expanding to the one-hour format? — H.M., Columbus, Ohio

A. As in the evening hours, daytime programming depends on ratings. Those soap operas that previously expanded to one hour have done very well in the ratings. Success breeds success. Consequently, daytime viewers wanting longer soap programs are getting them.

Q. I understand the producers of the new "Star Trek" series have given up the project. Is this true? — D.D., Duncan, B.C.

A. Gene Roddenberry, the original producer of the first "Star Trek" series and the person in charge of the new one, says the sequel will go forward as planned. The only change is the airing date. It now appears that "Star Trek II" will be aired in the early portion of the new season this fall. No specifics yet, however.

Roddenberry said the only main character not returning to the series will be Leonard Nimoy, who played Spock.

Q. Where can I get an autographed picture of Robert Conrad of "Black Sheep?" — J.F. Lynwood, Wash.

A. You should write to Conrad at Universal Television, 100 Universal City Plaza, Universal City, Calif. 91608.

Q. My memory recalls that Bing Crosby once had a weeky television series but my husband says I'm wrong. Who's right? — A.W., Greensboro, N.C.

A. Crosby did star in a half-hour comedy show called "The Bing Crosby Show." It ran on ABC for only one season, 1964-65. He played Bing Collins, a singer-musician turned building engineer. Beverly Garland was his wife. They had two children.

Q. I'm a great fan of Walt Disney. How many movies did he and his studio make? — G.T., Jefferson City, Mo.

A. Since 1937 when Disney released "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" up to the latest movie, "Pete's Dragon," the Disney studio has made 143 feature-length movies.

Questions of general interest will be answered in the column. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies. Inquiries should be sent to Thom Mead, TV Mailbag, c/o Prevue, Box 300, Victoria, B.C. V8W 2N4.

Pat Barclay

It's been a bad week. Normally I manage to submerge happily within the trivia of daily living and pay little or no attention at all to what the politicians are doing to the country I love. (Or not doing, more often than not.)

But this week is the week I decided to read Gary Geddes' Divided We Stand, a collection of essays, arguments, poems, impressions and statements of fact contributed by 32 Canadians from Margaret Laurence to Rene Levesque. The opinions of the various authors vary widely, but on one thing, at least, they agree: The country is in bad shape.

"What we greatly need is a revolution of the word in Canada," declares editor Geddes in his Introduction. "That is what this book is all about." In other words Geddes believes that ignoring a problem won't make it go away, but articulating it might. And in a way, you know, he's probably right.

People like myself who write reviews soon discover that the really tricky part of the job is determining what it is, precisely, that one thinks. Very often it's only during the act of articulation — the moment of committing unruly thought to paper — that one's true opinion finally becomes clear. Once the thought is palpably there, in black and white, it's a comparatively easy matter to identify with it as a true expression of one's experience or reject it as inappropriate.

In the same way, English-speaking Canadians, taken as a whole, are at a decided disadvantage when circumstances impel them to confront the opinions of their Quebecois or American neighbors. "They" are so positive about what "they" think, and "we" are so unsure! "They" have enjoyed a strong sense of cultural identity for generations; "we" are still — even today — prescribing U.S.-authored textbooks for our school children! How many English-Canadian films have you yourself seen, and how many stage plays? How many important Canadian books do you get around to reading? How often do you listen to CBC?

I'm not attempting to proselytize anybody here; I'm merely attempting to point out how very nebulous our conscious identity as English-speaking Canadians really is. Subconsciously, of course, it's a different story. In that delightful book, No Passport, about a Quebecios' travels through the rest of Canada, Eugene Cloutier describes his encounter with an Ontario man who declared himself an American, and Canada only a "dim extension of the United States." Cloutier, whose own healthy cultural heritage made him suspect the truth, tried attacking first Canada, then Ontario, then the man's home region. The Ontarian "flew into a passion of rage." Then they caught each other's eye and laughed like old friends.

I was reminded of Cloutier's story by reading an essay, in Divided We Stand, by Joyce Marshall of Toronto. Marshall is a novelist and translator (of No Passport, among others) who was born in Montreal of mostly English, partly French, stock. Six of her great-grandparents are buried in Quebec, and two of her great-great-grandparents. Obviously, to Marshall, the separation of Quebec is unthinkable. Her essay describes two conversations with separatist friends.

"I once tried to explain . . . that I too felt bound to Quebec and that after two years away my heart had leaped when I first saw that light characteristic green of the river water. He smiled . . . as he conceded that I did undoubtedly feel some lesser sort of tie. On another occasion, discussing 17th-century New France . . . I used the words 'our history.'

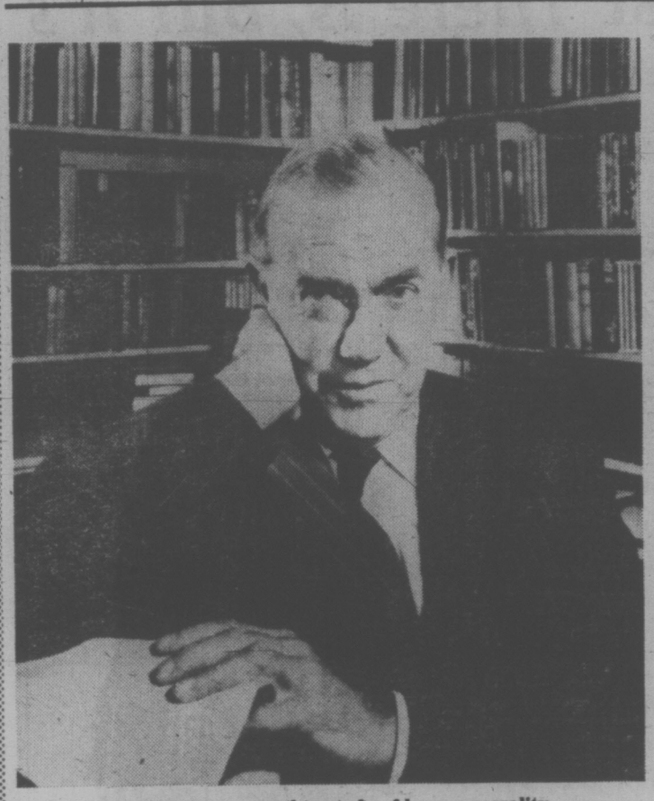

'But that was still the French Regime,' he said, clearly puzzled by my memory lapse.

'Yes,' I said, 'but my history just the same.' "

Both times, says Marshall, she did not try very hard to explain. "Some queer kind of guilt came into this," she adds, "a sense that since they wanted, perhaps needed, to believe their attachment was unique, I . . . ought to let them. I was wrong, I see now. I should have argued my right to feel bound to the land and its history — and to them, my not always willing brothers."

Marshall's realization that now is the time to express one's true feelings is right on. The fortunate ones will already know what those feelings are. The rest of us will find many of them clearly articulated in Divided We Stand. It's time to stop asking ourselves that old chestnut, "What does Quebec want?", and meet the real question head on: "Where, for all our sakes, does English-speaking Canada stand?"

GREENE . . . another study of human morality

Beneath Glamor of Spy World

By ANTHONY JENKINS

For his new novel, Graham Greene chooses an epigraph from Joseph Conrad:

"I only know that he who forms a tie is lost. The germ of corruption has entered into his soul".

The quote points straight to the heart of the book. The Human Factor, as that title suggests, is about personal ties; but it is also a compassionate and ironic study of corruption.

This is not the first time that Greene has entered the world of political espionage and, quite typically, he is concerned with what lies under the supposedly glamorous surface.

He brings us a secret agent in his early sixties, past the official retiring age, who loves his wife and lives in the conservative suburb of Berkhamsted. The book asks us to consider the effect of that domestic pull upon a man whose life binds him to secrecy and subterfuge.

Over the Brink

Green's anti-hero, Maurice Castle, is no macho sex-pot. Perhaps he drinks too much whisky, but always at home, and he rides from the station on a bicycle, has a yale lock on the door and the Laughing Cavalier in stained-glass over the front porch, just like the neighbors. Yet his name is ironic. "A man's house is his castle", but Castle's home-life pushes him over the brink of ruin.

His wife and child are black. In order to get his wife out of South Africa, where he had endangered her by breaking the Bantu laws, Castle had once had to depend on the help of a Communist agent. In gratitude he has been passing along information ever since. But then, as his mother knows, he was always inclined to give too much in return for a favor. As the novel develops, his love for his black family leads him to take risks that he always tried to avoid.

I'm not giving away too much of the plot here, for it rapidly becomes clear that Castle is a double agent. The point of the novel is not "who done it?", but what makes people behave the way they do and how they can be driven into situations for which they never bargained.

A Seedy Parody

The novel toys with our sympathies with a skill that seems effortless. From the first page, Greene homes in on the humdrum routine of Castle's work for "the firm". He slides in artless-looking details that let us see the humanity of this secret agent, worried about his retirement, about why his colleague is ten minutes late back from lunch, and looking forward to the excellent sausages for his own lunch in the pub down the street.

Only after the fact does one see the full significance of a line like, "He was always prepared to account for his actions, even the most innocent, and he was always strictly on time."

Lured by Greene's cunning professionalism, we are soon in entire sympathy with Castle. We come to laugh, albeit gently, at his assistant, Davis, whose bachelor life is a seedy parody of the James Bond image. He had joined "the firm" in search of excitement and would like to bed his secretary.

But a typical secret memo reads, "If Zaire replies to No. 172 send copies to the Treasury and FO." And Cynthia, the daughter of a major-general, is "after bigger game." Davis is also destroyed by a need for human ties.

Having attuned us to Castle's all-too-human desires and weaknesses, Greene then lets us see his opponents in similar dimensions. Colonel Daintry, the department's security officer, appears at first to be awkward, old and socially insecure. But by the climax of the novel Castle and the reader have seen Daintry with his estranged daughter and ex-wife; those human ties allow us to view Daintry's gaucherie with understanding.

Because of that growing sympathy between the two of them, neither Castle nor Daintry relishes what he takes to be his duty.

This is a spy story which makes one cheer for "the other side." At the final crunch one hopes that despite everything Castle will get away with it, and the last pages are tinged with bittersweet ironies.

Study of Morality

Yet like all Greene's novels, The Human Factor is a study of human morality. Lightly touched upon though it is, the subtext explores the flawed-hero who has a conscience.

What is a "traitor to one's country" when the powers that rule that country have little conscience in dealing with those who stand in their way? How can one justify one's country when it allies itself with foreign politics of which it outwardly disapproves?

Loyalty is a cut-and-dried affair to people like Castle's mother, who is horrified when she learns the truth about her son's actions. But then she is a relic of a simpler credo: God and my country. She shares "the sense of a calm Victorian world, where good was good and bad was bad and one could distinguish easily between them."

There's a moment in the novel where God might be thought to have allied Himself with the KGB. In such an atmosphere a bad conscience threatens the stability of everyone who works for "the firm". The only way to silence self-doubt is to shut one's eyes and attend to one's own little corner of the action.

Daintry, for instance, is told to look at the abstract painting on his bedroom wall: "There's your section 6. That's your square from now on . . . You've no responsibility for what happens in the blue or red squares. In fact not even in the yellow. You just report. No bad conscience. No guilt."

The spokesman here is perhaps the only outright villain of the novel. An intelligent man who uses his wits to trap others but who will not let his mind dwell on the ethics of his conduct.

In quite a different context, Castle later muses over that mis-use of intelligence in a phrase that reveals the core of Greene's moral view: "Our worst enemies here are not the ignorant and the simple, however cruel; our worst enemies are the intelligent and the corrupt."

By the end of his story, Greene leads us to see that a traitor is not necessarily corrupt and that an urbane, benevolent manner can hide real corruption. It's no accident that several of the characters show a fascination for Trollope's novel The Way We Live Now, which explores the inner agony of a public figure who has cheated on the stock market.

The way we live now, a public "traitor" may in private be a man of tortured conscience. In showing that, The Human Factor is not only absorbing reading; it leaves us with something to think about.

The Best There is, But it's Not Enough

By CHARLES LILLARD

During the last few years it has become increasingly difficult to review books written by George Woodcock. His latest book, Peoples of the Coast, is no exception.

Woodcock has written almost 40 books; until quite recently he was the editor of the prestigious magazine Canadian Literature, and his articles and commentaries appear everywhere. Because of this, many of us have begun to think of Woodcock as infallible. A reviewer, facing a new book by Woodcock, is no longer reviewing an author, he's taking on an institution.

And how does one point out to an institution that if it were not so busy producing books, it might produce the one or two books we so desperately need? It's a touchy question — since institutions work harder than the rest of us, they tend to be sensitive about the result of all their labor.

Although I have many reservations about Woodcock's latest book, I can say that Peoples of the Coast is quite simply the best book existing on the subject of B.C.'s coastal native cultures. Woodcock has written the most thorough introduction to life-as-it-was-once-lived on the west coast of British Columbia that we are likely to find in the near future.

Peoples is divided into 12 chapters. After a general introduction to the coastal peoples, there are four chapters dealing with "Before History," "Language and Myth," "Image and Talisman" and "Shamanism: The Link with Asia." In "Before History" Woodcock discusses knowledgeably the questions and answers provided by archaeology, particularly at the Marpole and Milliken digs on the Fraser River.

Archeology

As he points out, "Until very recently the prehistory of the Coast Indians of British Columbia and Alaska had only been lightly studied," but now, thanks to the archaeologists working in this province, most notably Charles E. Borden, "our views of the early millennia of the Coast Indian cultures" have been forever altered. We now know, for instance, that the carving tradition dates back some 3,000 years, and isn't, as some have suggested, an innovation beginning about the time of Cook's arrival.

In "Language and Myth" much of Woodcock's discussion centres on the mythical Temlaham, the earthly paradise of the Skeena River Tsimshian. Short of Harris' Visitors Who Never Left and Barbeau's The Downfall of Temlaham, this is the finest elaboration of that Eden to appear in print.

Much of this chapter, as well as the others in this early section, is concerned with the possible origins of the coastal peoples. Are they a direct link with a Siberian past, as so much of their art, language and myth suggests, or are these only a reflection of a far distant migration pattern? There are at least two schools of thought on this and, to Woodcock's credit, he gives equal space to both.

First Contact

Basing his argument heavily on Jewitt, Sproat, the records of Cook and Vancouver, as well as the recent discoveries at the ancient village of Ozette on the Washington coast, Woodcock outlines "The Fatal Encounter." This was, of course, the first contact that the Pacific Northwest Indians had with Europeans. The chapter ends with the interesting point of view that, " 'Of all the many tribes of savage people I have seen . . . these appear to be the most susceptible of civilization.' But even Mackenzie thought in terms of transformation; he did not see the culture in its own light or as capable of development within its own traditions."

Section III is also divided into four chapters: "The Hunters of Leviathan," "The Spirit Questers," "The Raven's Kin" and "The Winter Dancers." The "hunters" are the Nootkan people; the "spirit questers" the Salish; the "raven's kin" the Haida and Tsimshian, and the "winter dancers" are the Kwakiutl. In his engaging way, Woodcock discusses the elements that made these people famous, both here and abroad.

The importance of the winter season to the coastal tribes, particularly to the Kwakiutl, makes fascinating reading: "Everywhere on the Coast, the winter was a time when the world of spirits and that of everday nature grew closer. It was a time then mythical beings were thought to walk the earth invisibly, and when men reenacted their encounters with the spirit world."

Some of these "beings deserve books of their own — Gakhula, who "exhorted the people to remember that this was a serious season;" Baksbakualanu Xsiwaie, the "Cannibal from the North End of the World," and many others. Quite rightly Woodcock draws a parallel between these spirits and ceremonies and the origins of Greek drama; although the similarities between these winter ceremonies and our own Christmas and Easter celebrations might have made a more apt and contemporary comparison.

'Transformers'

Part IV contains one chapter, "The Transformers." This chapter begins with the figure of Raven, the transformer and his role on the West Coast. Woodcock then extends his argument to the four phases of coastal culture: the fur trade; the colonial period; the period following 1871 and the present era. After a discussion of William Duncan and others who played important "transformer" or transitional roles, Woodcock draws this section to a close with a commentary on the changes that have occurred in the traditional life styles.

The short final chapter, "A Witnessing" is an eye-witness account of a Salish Dance which Woodcock was lucky enough to have been able to observe. If this chapter were as well written and as thoughtful as the book's opening chapters, it would be an engrossing conclusion to an interesting work. But it isn't; Woodcock's approach is typical of the "white-eyes."

Not long ago I listened while a Salish dancer explained one or two of the dances and their meanings. The man's first language was not English, but he still managed to do a better job than does Woodcock in bridging the cultural gap.

Due to the listlessness and inadequacy of this final chapter, one goes back to reread the earlier sections of this book. How does a book which starts out so well manage to end so miserably?

Lucky Chance?

In a recent interview Woodcock said publication of his book on the eve of the Capt. Cook bicentennial year "was a lucky chance, not planned." Oh? Publishers have been talking about the bicentennial for the past two years. If Woodcock has been working on this book for the past 27 years, as he claims, then it is just a bit too coincidental that it came out just now.

Furthermore, the earlier sections of the book illustrate a man's deep understanding and interest in the west coast cultures. The final chapters are hurried; they read like a race to a publisher's deadline. I hope this is not true, yet it is the only valid reason that will explain the slap-dash quality of the latter part of Peoples of the Coast.

Eye on Market

A deadline approaching explains a few of the book's problems, but not all of them. Why, for instance, is this book subtitled "The Indians of the Pacific Northwest?" How can a book be about the Pacific Northwest if it ignores the Indians of Alaska and Washington? True, Woodcock does mention the tribes to our north and south; ultimately, though, he is only concerned with the tribes of coastal British Columbia. Surely it would not have been any more difficult to subtitle the book "The Indians of the B.C. Coast?" This latter title was not used for one very good reason — it would not have been as attractive to our American neighbors. Let's admit it: the U.S. market is far larger than our home market.

Misleading

Marketing would not be worthwhile mentioning in a review if it did not reflect a secondary, and far more important problem. Because Woodcock sees the Northwest as B.C., his comments are misleading. On page 27 he mentions William Duncan, "who founded the so-called Holy City of Metlakatla" — but which Metlakatla does Woodcock mean? There is one in B.C., another in Alaska, and both were founded by Duncan.

In Alaska Duncan is called Father Duncan, and people still speak of him in hushed tones. Since the people of Alaska's Metlakatla migrated north from B.C., isn't a discussion that ignores this part of Duncan's career misleading? Worse yet, we have to buy another book to obtain the full story — or we take Woodcock's version at face value and remain in the dark. Our history is murky enough without a scholar of Woodcock's stature adding to the confusion.

In his longish discussion of Chinese or Siberian influences on West Coast culture, Woodcock fails to point out that the Raven legend is one of the strongest of our indigenous connections with Siberia. This information has been substantiated by Boas in his Tsimshian Mythology and in Waldemar Bogoras's Koryak Texts.

In his commentary about possible Chinese contacts, Woodcock appears to be unaware of Swan's The Northwest Coast. In this book we find a number of references to Chinese or Japanese junks wrecking on Washington's west coast. It is Woodcock's belief that, since there is no evidence of Chinese influence in the form of tangible artifacts, in all likelihood there has been little if any contact between east and west.

While I think this possibly true, Woodcock's argument fails to take into account the possibility of very rapid assimilation. Clarification of this point might explain what happened to the Chinese left by Meares at Nootka. These men supposedly married Nootkan women, but what happened to them? To the evidence of their years at Nootka? Something happened and Woodcock doesn't solve the question by ignoring it.

One must admit, Peoples of the Coast is the best book that we have on the subject, but this is little consolation to the reader and, I should think, even less to Woodcock. We're all still waiting for the conclusive reference book on our coastal tribes. That a man would spend 27 years on a book and then publish an undigested conglomeration such as this one is, finally, appalling.

But whose motives should we question, Woodcock's or his publisher's?

Russians?

I don't know; I do know that an institution should be strong enough to withstand the superficial and unconvincing appeal of publishing a book on the bicentennial of Cook's arrival here. Perhaps if Woodcock had proven within his text that Cook's arrival was important, the book would be more acceptable? Perhaps, but then he would have had to deal with the Russians who were already on the coast. Since he did neither, the rest of us are still waiting for a thoroughly researched view of the North Pacific Coast.

E. D. WARD-HARRIS

She never learned how to write, but hard work brought amazing success

Reading the autobiography of Agatha Christie after spending weeks in the intellectually stimulating, but somewhat artificial and sterile, atmosphere of works by or about Virginia Woolf, Katharine Mansfield and Elizabeth Bowen, has been a welcome relief.

In marked contrast to the three major writers I have mentioned, Agatha Christie never wrote to impress the critics, never entertained intellectual pretensions, and never set out to provide anything more than light entertainment.

She never had any formal education, never learned to spell properly, and never made any attempt to learn even the rudiments of English grammar. Her punctuation was as variable as the weather on the west coast of Vancouver Island; she was much addicted to what my wife calls 'shriek marks' (!!!) — and these she invariably used in the wrong places!

Despite all this, her books were outsold only by the Bible and Shakespeare. Year after year her novels soared to the top of the best-seller charts, in the English-speaking world and far beyond it; films of her books broke innumerable box-office records; and one of her plays — The Mousetrap — is still playing in London to packed houses after a continuous run of 26 years.

CHRISTIE . . . shriek marks!!!

She published her first novel — The Mysterious Affair at Styles — in 1920. It was published in paperback in 1954 and ran through 22 printings in the following 20 years. Most of her other books enjoyed a similar success, notably The Murder of Roger Ackroyd and Murder on the Orient Express, which sold . . .

Statistics, statistics. Have you noticed how every story about Agatha Christie has been replete with statistics? There has been a good reason for this, but it is no longer valid.

Dr. Johnson claimed that no man but a blockhead ever wrote, except for money. Agatha Christie was no blockhead, but she was able to have her cake and eat it too; she wrote mostly for fun — and the money rolled in. Practically everything she wrote, under her own name or as Mary Westmacott, turned to gold.

With such a vast success she should by rights have become public property, but she remained a mere statistical phenomenon because she was an intensely private person, never overcame her shyness, went to extravagant lengths to avoid public appearances, and generally cloaked herself with a mystery as impenetrable as that in her novels.

Selective Memory

She is no longer a mystery; we now have her autobiography. Well, to be accurate, she is no longer the complete enigma she once was. She started writing her own life story in 1950, finished it 15 years later when she was 75 years old, and refused to have it published until after her death, 10 years later. And it is by no means complete.

"I have remembered, I suppose, what I wanted to remember," she writes. Selective memories can be tantalizing; for example one would like to know about the attack of amnesia which was responsible for her much publicized disappearance, but about this and much else we are left in the dark. Oddly enough, none of this matters; one continues to accept her right to privacy in some areas in the same spirit as one accepts her total disregard for chronological continuity.

This last is disconcerting at first, but one gets used to it. One has to. Right from the start an incident in childhood reminds her of something that happened years later, and off she goes at a tangent, projecting the reader into another era, bringing him back suddenly and then, as likely as not, digressing into simple philosophy before returning to the nursery.

An example of this occurs in her story when she is aged 17. Suddenly there is a mention of someone named Max, without any further identification. One discovers some 300 pages later that the mysterious Max refers to her second husband. Likewise, a Mathew who enters the story when Agatha herself is only five years old turns out to be her grandson. It's bewildering and should be infuriating, but it isn't. In fact, the only infurjating thing about the book is the index, which is one of the worst I have encountered.

Almost half the book is concerned with the years of childhood and adolescence and as these occurred during the late Victorian and Edwardian periods we are given a splendid glimpse of how an upper middle-class English family lived at that time. This is social history at its most fascinating, written in an intimate and chatty style. And the Christie digressions, such as making a strong case for domestic servants, and justifying the lack of formal education for girls, add to the pleasure, even though one may disagree with her thinking.

Happy childhood and happy adolescence, which included training in Paris in piano and singing to almost concert standard, ended abruptly with twin disasters — loss of family income and outbreak of the First World War. The young Agatha spent the war years in a military hospital, first as an auxiliary nurse and later as an assistant in the dispensary. She was also stampeded into marriage to an Irish Flying Corps officer named Christie.

Marriage Collapsed

After the war, the marriage collapsed (he was inordinately selfish and had a roving eye) and Agatha's world was shattered. Fortunately, she had begun to write, but although she had been published she had always regarded writing as a lark and herself as an amateur. Now, with a daughter to care for, she wrote for money and considered herself a professional.

Slowly, she pulled herself up by her bootstraps, with the moral and practical support of her sister, and in time went off alone to seek refreshment in travel. She went by the famous Orient Express to the Near East, toured widely, visited archaeologists at their "digs," and returned home full of story ideas. The following year she again visited the Near East, met a man younger than herself, archaeologist Max (later Sir Max) Mallowan, whom she was to marry and live happily with for more than 50 years.

For Agatha Christie her husband came first (she always worked as his assistant in the field); then came her daughter and other close relatives; then her intimate friends. She fitted her writing in when and where she could.

The world's most successful novelist used marble washstands, the dining-room table, or anything that wouldn't wobble, for her typewriter and she worked out her plots and dialogue by talking aloud to herself when shopping or on walks. There was never any fuss or temperament. And every year she would deliver to her publishers another best-seller, and would sometimes manage a non-mystery novel, some short stories and a play as well.

Quite Maddening

She was proud of her writing, but as if to emphasize its place in her personal scale of values she writes about her literary work almost as an afterthought, a paragraph here, a page there. It's pretty cunning really. Had she grouped the literary information I would have been tempted to read that and skip the rest. As it was I had to read every word — and I enjoyed every minute of it.

The writing is poor (she never could write decent English), she conceals things one wants to know, she is often incredibly naive and, unlike her novels, she drops clues — and leaves them dangling. She's quite maddening. But I loved the book. I curled up in a chair and felt like a boy listening to his grandmother reminiscing about her childhood joys, subsequent sorrows, lonely travels, romance, and unsought fame.

And what a grandmother! And what a simple, charming, and enthralling tale she has to tell. I wouldn't have missed it for anything — shriek marks and all!

Pioneer Lumber Barons Gave Vancouver Impetus

By LESLIE DREW

Apart from a few notable exceptions like the Gibson family, B.C.'s lumber barons don't strike one as particularly interesting people. Too many of the pioneer lumbermen seem to have had a single-minded pursuit of money as their only motivation in life.

To find flamboyant, complex characters in the industry, endowed with the kind of dare-devil, come-what-may zest for life that makes good biographical material, we usually have to look lower down the scale, at men like George (Panicky) Bell, the almost legendary figure of whom stories are still told on the north coast.

So I approached James Morton's latest book with some misgivings that haven't entirely been dispelled. In themselves, the Englishman Capt. Edward Stamp, who set up the first sawmill on what is now the Vancouver waterfront, and the American Sewell Prescott Moody, who established his mill at the mouth of Lynn Creek, competitors facing each other across the waters of Burrard Inlet, were rather ordinary men. One was more successful than the other in his industrial ventures, and not the one with the greater financial resources. Of their personal lives very little is known.

So why a book on them? The question persists even if Stamp and "Sue" Moody are viewed as protagonists in a replay of what was happening in southwestern B.C. in the 1860-70s. It's true that through them we get a very clear picture of what New Westminster was like, the trails that linked it with Burrard Inlet, the importance of ships in the day-to-day lives of people in both New Westminster and Victoria, the political shenanigans of the period and, of course, the fledgling lumber industry.

Best of all, we see them in what now seems an impossible setting, a place that amounted to nowhere yet was soon to outstrip both Victoria and New Westminster in growth. Although dramatic incidents swirled around both men (fatally for one of them), at the end they seem worth remembering more as expressions of their times than as historical figures.
